Cyril Maude, who has announced his intention to retire at the conclusion of his present American tour, has long been numbered among the popular actors of the English-speaking stage. It is fitting that Mr. Maude should make his farewell in America, for it was on this side of the Atlantic that he began his professional career. He was a public school boy of good English family and he found it difficult to settle down to a life of conventionality. He came over to America to try his luck as an actor, with the result that he returned home in the steerage. After ups and downs on the English stage he finally won success and in course of time became famous. In his long career he has played everything from tragedy to lightest comedy. The roles for which he probably will be remembered longest, however, are those in which he has portrayed the ordinary cultured man of the world.

Palm Sunday

Palm Sunday, even among those who confess to no religious beliefs, has come to have a recognized place in the calendar of modern civilization. To all the world it graphically recalls the supreme crisis in the life of Him who, to a greater degree than any other in recorded time, profoundly influenced the whole course of succeeding history. As he entered Jerusalem on this fateful day 18 centuries ago, astride of the humblest of all beasts of burden—symbolical of the meekness and simplicity of the doctrine which He preached—throngs which had already accepted his leadership, met Jesus of Nazareth and cast palm branches across his path, crying: "Hosannah to the Son of David! Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord!"

Thus Palm Sunday took its place in Christian annals. It marked the beginning of the end of His remarkable mission on earth; and was to end five days later, to the Tragedy of Golgotha.

With the day and its significance established, Palm Sunday has remained through the ages a fixed and recognized event, observed by Christian believers throughout the world according to their doctrinial forms.

Many quaint and interesting ceremonials have arisen in connection with Palm Suday. Throughout history the palm has been to all peoples an emblem of joy and triumph. Its specific use by Christians in this connection is in token of victory over the flesh; so it was that when the Founder of the Christian religion rode into Jerusalem on the first Palm Sunday it was with the emblem of triumph, the palm, that He was joyfully greeted. Historians trace the observance of the day back to the sixth century. The Greek and other churches of the east observed it with great solemnity. With the spread of Christianity to the west, and particularly to the Latin countries, some of the solid ceremonials gave way to more joyful observance, and the day became a floral festival second only to that of Easter. Among the Spanish it was known as Pasquoa Florida. Spanish explorers having on Palm Sunday, 1512, discovered what is now the State of Florida, gave that name to the land in honor of the festival.

Mediaeval chronicles abound in references to the observance of Palm Sunday among the Armenians, Lithuanians, Serbs and Croats. In England it was called Olive or Branch Sunday, and the observance was characterized by a procession symbolical of the entry into Jerusalem, at the head of which was borne the figure of the Christ Child seated on an ass, quaintly carved in wood, the participants carrying palm and olive branches.

According to an ancient chronicle the faithful in Jerusalem were wont on each recurring Palm Sunday, "after the customary exercises from cock crow to noon had taken place in the Anastasis and at the Cross, to go to the greater church behind the cross on Golgotha, called the Martyrium. Here the ordinary services were held. At the seventh hour—1 p. m.—all proceeded to the Mount of Olives, and to the cave in which the Lord used to teach, where for two hours hymns, anthems and lessons were recited. About the hour of none—3 p. m.—all went, singing hymns, to the Imbomen, whence our Lord ascended into Heaven. Here two hours were spent in devotional exercises, until about five o'clock, when the passage from the gospel relating to how children carrying branches and palms met the Lord, saying, 'Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord,' was read, following which the procession dispersed and amid shouts of 'Hosannah to the Son of David.'"

To this day somewhat similar services are conducted on Palm Sunday by the Christian congregations of the various denominations in the Holy City.

Palms blest on Palm Sunday and carried in the processions were later taken home by the faithful and used for devotional purposes. In the Christian churches where Ash Wednesday is observed at the beginning of the Lenten Season, the ashes with which the Sign of the Cross is made upon the foreheads of the devout by the officiating priests, are secured from the burning of palm branches which were blest on the preceding Palm Sunday.

From Small Beginnings

Jacob Gould Schurman, the Clerk, President of a Great University

In these days when a man looks at his bank book before he dares send for a plumber, and when he mortgages his house before he takes his automobile to the repair shop, it is hard to think that there ever was a time when wages were not as high as they are now. Jacob Gould Schurman, the beloved president of Cornell university, was glad enough as a boy to work for less than nine cents a day. He was 13 years old, and had a job as general utility boy in a country supply store. Previous to that time he had done hard farm work on an out-of-the way farm on Prince Edward island where he had been born. He had lived nearly two miles from the nearest school, had had almost no books at home, and did not have that means of education that we have today, the newspaper and the magazine. In what was then a back settlement he could look ahead to nothing except the most commonplace of existences. In spite of all his handicaps, Jacob Gould Schurman rose to a position in which he aided in determining the future of islands in the orient, and to the presidency of a university that has given solid foundation to thousands of great lives.

When he had saved up a little money from his long hours of work in the village store young Schurman resolved to gain an education. This meant losing his job, but he lost it and went to the little high school and there embarked in the hardest kind of study to fit himself in the quickest possible time for college. In a single year, by intense work he equipped himself so well for university work that he was able to surpass others and to gain a scholarship.

From the time when he left the village store he began to win scholastic honors. In college he earned a scholarship that took him across the seas to the University of London. That village high school was the beginning of studies in France, in Scotland and in Germany and the opening of the door of scholarly institutions all over the world. He became a college professor, and at 28 was president of Cornell university, New York. As a member of the Philippine commission he did much good for those eastern islands. As an author and lecturer he has stimulated thought everywhere that English is read. What a vast amount of good depended upon the grocery boy's resolution to go to high school, even if he lost his job.

Stories That Recall Others

"It hurts so; I can't even walk on it," complained nine year old Robert as he sat on the edge of the bed one morning, grimacing as he rubbed his leg.

"You must have sprained it yesterday roller skating," said his sympathetic father who later carried the injured member of the family down stairs.

"But how can I go to school if I can't even walk! Oh, I can't bear to stand on it!" And clinging to his mother Robert hopped on one foot to the breakfast table.

Despite the fact that his mother would be gone all the morning and he would have to stay alone, he insisted on remaining away from school at least until noon. His arguments punctuated now and then with low groans of pain, were most convincing, and so the family let Robert have his way.

The first report of how things were going at home came with a telephone call to sister.

Yes, I'm getting along all right I've been reading," Robert answered inquiries. "Why, I want to know if I have to wear my sweater under my coat if I go skating for a little bit?"

Why the "Easy"?

Many women who never dreamed of entrusting their own precious georgettes, laces, underthings or other delicate fabrics to other means than their own hands, now confidently entrust them to the gentle action of the "EASY VACUUM CUP WASHER."

Delicate silks and muslins should be washed as soon as they become soiled, and not be allowed to lay for days in damp, dark hampers, shortening the life of the fabric by months.

The gentle action of the "EASY," forcing the air and warm sudsy water through the meshes of the cloth, without friction, insures longer life than any other method.

THREE-SPAN BRIDGE IS TO MAKE BISHOP'S CROSSING SAFE SPOT

A three-span bridge, consisting of a long central span over the railroad tracks and two shorter spans at either end is the plan for the improvement at Bishop's crossing in Plainfield on the road between Plainfield and Jewett City, which the state highway commissioner proposes to eliminate as a danger spot on this much-traveled trunk line highway.

The construction plans, which have already been put out for bids from the office of Division Engineer John Smith, of this city, provide for a bridge support by concrete piers and abutments with concrete cribbing to retain the fill. The bridge will have an 18 foot clearance over the railroad tracks with a span 75 feet long there and two spans of 45 feet at either end. The bridge will be about 28 feet wide. There will be about 1,200 feet of dirt fill, which will call for about 29,000 cubic yards of filling.

On the northern side of the crossing the new construction will start from the crest of the hill there, from which there will be a 4 per cent. grade to the level of the bridge. The approach on the southerly side of the crossing will be by a 5 per cent. grade and will be 800 feet long, the northerly approach being 500 feet long.

INFLUENZA VICTIM SHOULD KEEP IT TO HIMSELF

In the present state of our knowledge of influenza, there is but one measure that appears to offer much hope of having preventive value, says the weekly bulletin of the state department of health. That measure is limiting the opportunities for exposure to the disease. In a devastating epidemic like the one of 1918, early and rigid limitations on the intermingling of people might be expected to have two favorable results. One would be to slow up the rate at which the disease is transmitted from one to another, thus spreading the outbreak out over a longer period of time and giving the medical and nursing forces a better chance to cope with the situation. The other would be the hope that by the slower passage of the germ or virus from one person to another its virulence would be reduced and the severity of the cases accordingly lessened. Having no specific method of immunizing against influenza, the minimizing of contact of the sick person with other people seems to be our best measure for combatting the disease.

It is apparent, therefore, that responsibility for prevention rests primarily upon the public. Especially is this true when, as at present, the disease is too mild to warrant drastic measures by the health authorities. Persons ill with influenza should accept responsibility of protecting others against the infection. It is advised, therefore, that any person who finds himself coming down with the disease, take steps with the first showing of symptoms, to prevent spreading the infection to others. This would mean to get away from everybody else and have your influenza all to yourself.

With influenza present in the community, the first sign or symptom indicating the development of a "cold" should be a signal to protect your associates by going home, isolating yourself in a room to protect other members of the family, and remaining in isolation for at least three days. While the period during which the patient may infect others is not definitely known, the disease appears to be especially contagious during the early stages, and it seems probable that the danger of the disease spreading does not last long.

It happens that stopping work at once is for the best interest of the patient himself. Continuing at work after symptoms develop increases the hazard of pneumonia which is the most serious complication of influenza. So, for your own sake and the sake of others get away from everybody and rest at the first sign of a "cold" that may be influenza.

COMMON PLEAS COURT HEARD CRIMINAL CASES

Sentences in a number of cases were imposed in the session of the criminal common pleas court which opened here Thursday morning with Judge C. B. Waller presiding and when the business for the day had been disposed of court adjourned until next Tuesday morning, when it is expected court will come in with a jury Prosecuting Attorney C. B. Whittlesey presented the cases.

Ruby Parker, Niantic general store proprietor, charged with selling liquor on Nov. 11, 1925, to Edward Steadman, pleaded guilty and drew a fine of $200 and a 30-day jail sentence. The jail sentence was suspended upon the promise of the defendent to go out of the liquor business.

A charge of reckless driving entered against former Patrolman Howard Sloan of New London, who is now serving a sentence for indecent assault at the county jail, was nolled upon recommendation of Prosecuting attorney Whittlesey.

Floyd Mitchell, former proprietor of pool room in New London, pleaded guilty to a charge of aggravated assault. Judge Waller imposed a sentence of 30 days in jail and a fine of $200 and costs. The jail sentence was suspended for one year on the condition that it would be revoked should Mitchell be found intoxicated or mixed up in any gambling games within that time. Mitchell went before the court on a charge of assault with intent to kill, Benjamin Franklin of New London in a row over a card game at Mitchell's pool room several months ago. The charge, however, was changed to one of aggravated assault.

A charge of driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor, on which James Murray had appealed a fine of $200 and costs and a 10-day suspended jail sentence, was changed to reckless driving and a fine of $50 and costs was imposed, Murray figured in a minor collision on Main street with a machine driven by William Baldwin of Taftville. Attorney Thomas M. Shields presented his case in court.

After a strong plea made for Mrs Barbara Wunderlich of Taftville by her attorney, Thomas J. Kelly, Judge Waller gave her a sentence of $50 and costs with a suspended jail sentence of 10 days on her plea of guilty to selling home brew on Dec. 10 to state police. She had appealed a $200 fine and a 10-day jail sentence from the Norwich city court.

A charge of violation of the liquor law made against Mrs. Eliza Fontaine of Occum was nolled absolutely upon recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey. Mrs. Fontaine had appealed a $200 fine and a ten day jail sentence from the Norwich city court. The prosecuting attorney said that he was unwilling to accept the evidence of the employe of the state police, as the man was proven not to be reliable. This witness had claimed that on a second visit to the Fontaine house he bought a bottle of home brew after Mrs. Fontaine had refused to sell him anything on his first visit.

Tony Caldrello, New London taxicab driver, pleaded guilty to using his automobile for improper purposes and was fined $100 and costs and sentenced to 30 days in jail. Execution of the jail sentence was suspended for one year on the condition that the defendant refrain from driving a taxicab or engaging in any liquor transactions during that period.

Other cases before the court today were disposed of as follows:

Dr. Napoleon B. Lewis, Norwich violation of Section 30 of the Public Acts, continued.

Time For Anti-Spitting Campaign.

Now is the time, says the state department of health, to push that anti-spitting, anti-influenza campaign, and so eliminate from the community one source of contagion. The law stands back of any effort to get rid of careless spitters that endanger the health of others. Section 2673 of the public acts of 1919 defines spitting as "the act of expelling any secretion from the chest, throat, mouth or nose." It forbids spitting "on the paved walk of any public street, park, or square" or floor, hall, or office of any hotel, restaurant, apartment house, tenement or lodging house which is used in common by guests or tenants thereof, or upon floor, platform, steps or stairs of any public building, church, theatre, railway station, store, factory or street car or other public conveyance."

SUIT FOR $10,000 ON TRIAL IN SUPERIOR COURT

Trial in the $10,000 damage suit brought by Miss Harriet T. Allen of New London against Irene T. Young of that city and Theron C. Sweet of East Lyme, was begun before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury in the superior court at New London Thursday.

The case arises over an automobile accident which occurred on the Hartford turnpike near Lake Konomoc on December 15, 1924, when the Young car driven by William S. Young, husband of Irene T. Young, in which Miss Allen was riding, figured in a collision with a truck owned by Sweet and driven by his wife, according to the complaint. Miss Allen alleges that she sustained a fractured arm, which necessitated her being in the hospital for a number of weeks and that she is permanently injured.

The accident occurred about 5:45 that afternoon, according to the testimony of Miss Allen, who said that she was seated in the rear seat of the car when the autos crashed, the Young car coming to a stop on top of a stone wall.

WOMAN DRANK TURPENTINE FOLLOWING FAMILY ROW

What is believed to have been the result of a family row was discovered by the police late Thursday afternoon when they were called to No. 54 North Main street to quiet a reported disturbance in the tenement occupied by William Kless and his wife Lucile, 30. Officer Charles Smith responded with the motor patrol wagon, finding Mrs. Kless on the floor of one of the rooms, where she had fallen after drinking most of the contents of a three-ounce bottle of turpentine.

Dr. Paul F. Gadle, who was summoned, advised that the woman be taken to the hospital at once and she was hurried there in the patrol wagon. At the hospital it was reported Thursday night that she was as comfortable as could be expected.

The police were called into the case when Mrs. Rose Depuchio, who lives in the lower tenement, telephoned to headquarters for police help to quiet the disturbance which she said Kless was making upstairs.

STRIBLING GETS DECISION OVER JIMMY SLATTERLY IN FAST 10-ROUND BOUT

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Young Stribling, light heavyweight pride of Georgia, squared accounts with his youthful Buffalo rival Jimmy Slattery tonight. Before a capacity crowd of 18,000 in Madison Square Garden, the speedy Georgian punched his way to decisive victory over Slattery, gaining the judges' decision in a ten round match punctuated with thrills.

Stribling not only avened the score with Slattery, who gained a six round decision over the Georgian two years ago, but did it in convincing fashion. Slattery was outpunched and out-generaled except for occasional flashes and was on the verge of a knockout in the seventh round under a barrage of terrific right hand hooks to the jaw. A majority of ringside critics gave six of the ten rounds to Stribling and three to Slattery, with one even.

Slattery fought on the defensive almost from start to finish but even his shiftiness failed to keep him out of the way of Stribling's rushes and driving attack to the head and body. The Buffalo boy held his rival even for the first half of the battle, with neither able to do much telling damage, but the Georgian's advantages in weight, reach and hitting power told heavily throughout the closing half of the battle, except for a courageous stand by Slattery in the ninth round.

Stribling had Slattery groggy under a smashing attack to the head in the seventh round. It seemed only the bell saved the Buffalo youngster from being knocked out. He was reeling backward, blood streaming from his mouth, and almost helpless as the Georgian tried desperately to put over a decisive punch. A succession of overhand hooks to the jaw nearly spelled Slattery's doom in this juncture, the most spectacular of the fight.

Slattery's clever boxing, particularly in the second, fifth and ninth rounds, all of which he won, brought cheers from his big following in the crowd, but the Buffalo lad lacked the punch to back up his rallies. It was a rough and tumble encounter for the most part with Stribling's superior strength giving him a big advantage at close quarters. The Georgian weighed 172 pounds to Slattery's 163 1-4.

Most of the Stribling family was at the ringside to cheer the Georgian's victory. The fighter's young society bride of a few months sat with "Ma" Stribling while "Pa" was his son's chief ring adviser.

In two ten round preliminaries, "Bud" Gorman, Kenosha, Wis., heavyweight, squared accounts with his Cuban rival, Carl Carter, by gaining a judges' decision, while Solly Seeman, New York light weight scored a one round victory over K. O. Leonard of New Orleans, the latter being counted out as he sat on the floor claiming a foul in spite of the referee's refusal to grant it.

The gate receipts totalled $78,432.

The Preliminaries

Solly Seeman, New York lightweight was declared the winner over K. O. Leonard, of New Orleans tonight on a technical knockout in the first round of their ten round match, preliminary to the Stribling-Slattery bout.

Leonard sank to the floor from a left to the stomach, claiming a foul, but the referee disallowed this and awarded the fight to Seeman after the New Orleans battler failed to get to his feet after ten seconds had elapsed.

To ringside critics, Seeman's blow did not seem foul and Leonard was loudly booed when he made his claim. Up to the sudden ending, Seeman had clearly outboxed and outpunched his rival. The end came after they had been in the ring two minutes and forty seconds.

Joe Canamere of New York, former amateur star, pounded out a victory over Artie Marvin of New York, flooring Marvin three times with vicious left hooks in a fast four-round go. Canamere weighed 145 and Marvin 142.

The first four rounds ended in a draw between Mike Esposition of Stamford, Conn., 119 and Tony Canzoneri of New York 118.

WOMEN RIDE AS JOCKEYS IN TAMPA CHARITY RACES

TAMPA, Fla., March 25.—(AP)—Society women turned jockeys for a day today and held a horse rabe for charity.

Miss Virginia Buford, riding Billy won the four furlong sprint in one minute. Miss Adalbert Oberman was second and Miss Pauline Jones on Starlight third.

Miss Buford handled her mount well and saved ground on the stretch turn. Miss Oberman, on Hal, took the lead on the first turn and held on gamely, while Miss Jones brought Starlight up with a rush, but was too far back to take the lead.

It was a real race with the spectators torn between applause and laughter. Each woman wore her favorite color and they had everything a jockey is supposed to have, even to the boots. They rode wild, none of them doing any real riding. Sitting far back in the saddle, the riders were wafted along, most of the time with outstretched arms.

One woman had a lot of trouble with the regulation jockey cap. It kept slipping and sliding from her head at the start and as she dashed in the first stretch, the long visored top piece was lifted from her head. She grabbed wildly and retrieved it from mid-air without losing her seat.

There was much jocular banter as the riders lined up at the post. They were spared the thrill of the drop of the barrier, however, and got away to a walking start, but reached their stride at the first turn.

At the end, the crowd roared an ovation and Mayor Percy G. Wall, of Tampa, presented the three winning society jockeys with loving cups on behalf of the Tampa Jockey club.

Others in the race finished in the order named:

Mrs. R. A. Green, King, fourth; Miss Helen Mackey, Kitty, fifth; Miss Jean Hall, Belle, sixth; Miss Ione Davis Proctor, seventh.

All the riders were of Tampa except ten year old Miss Jean Hall, of Miami. Miss Hall handled her mount well, but the best she could get in the form charts was "Also Ran."

The horses belonged to a riding academy, and none was thoroughbred. Both the ponies and the riders had been practicing for the race a week at the Tampa fair grounds under the titlelage of George P. Burke, who handles the apprentice boys at the Tampa Downs track.

The race was handled in the regular manner. It was the fourth event on a card of eight races. Mutuel tickets were sold, ten per cent. of the proceeds going to the children's home here.

FEW RECRUIT PITCHERS SHOW MUCH PROMISE OF BECOMING STARS SOON

NEW YORK, March 25.—(AP)—Despite noteworthy performances by aspiring young pitchers, reports from baseball training camps indicate that few new flinging arms will figure in the '26 major league pennant hunts.

Correspondents at the skirmish fronts asserts that this has been an unusual year for early form by veteran twirlers, with the Braves and Giants of the National league leading both circuits in spring pitching effectiveness. As a result, the minor leagues, which already have taken back a generous portion of their candidates, will gather in most of the others before the season gets under way.

A few exceptions stand out as almost certain to make the grade. In the American league, Myles Thomas, former Toronto hurler, seems to have clinched a place on the Yankee staff, while Alphonse Thomas of Baltimore is expected to be retained by the White Sox.

Several youngsters are making a gallant fight to stick with the Senators and Braves. Manager Buck Harris has indicated that he will likely ske two of a quartet that has been hurling impressively for Washington; Willard Morrell, Harry Kelley, Clarence Thomas and Jim Lyle. Werts and Hearn may gain berths on the Boston National staff.

Ed Brandt, nineteen-year-old sensation in the camp of the Phillies, virtually has earned his major league spurs, Manager Arthur Fletcher indicates. In the camp of the Cardinals, Lefty Hallahan of Syracuse has impressed Manager Hornsby, while Tim McNamara has convinced John McGraw of the Giants that he is unquestionably a hurler of big league timber.

Pitching regulars on nearly all the clubs have furnished the Spring season's surprise. Carl Mays, submarine hurler of the Reds, a disappointment last year, has been one of the most effective pitchers in the Cincinnati camp, while indications are that Adolfo Luque, Cuban star, has entirely recovered from an operation for appendicitis.

Detroit has already disposed of its Holy Cross pitching prospect, Ownie Carroll, and will depend on its veteran stars. Connie Mack has high hopes for his high-priced Baltimore purchase, Lefty Groves, although the international speed ball king still apparently is lacking in control.

MANY ERRORS MADE IN MAJOR GAMES YESTERDAY

CHICAGO, March 25.—(AP)—Today's news of the major league baseball teams stood out in the error columns more than in tabulation of hits and runs in the exhibition games. In most cases the bobbles showed as decisive factors in results of the day's tilts.

Cleveland was shut out by the Giants at Sarasota, 6 to 0, in the Indians' last Florida tilt of the year. New York got nine hits, Cleveland eight, but Speaker's outfit muffed two chances while McGraw men made but one. The two were costly.

The Yankees took their second straight from Cincinnati at St. Petersburg, 5 to 4. New York hit safely seven times and the Reds five. Three inopportune bobbles helped the Yanks, although they in turn made two. Cincinnati sent an appeal to Catcher Ivy Wingo, recently unconditionally released, to join the club at Miami and fill in for the incapacitated Hargrave, who is reported improving.

George Sisler's Browns won from the Phillies at Bradenton, Florida, 6 to 5. They split even on two erros each but St. Louis hit 12 times while Philadelphia turned in 11 safeties, it was the Browns' second straight from the Phillies.

A wide margin in the hitting overcame looser playing on the part of the Chicago Cubs, who shut out the Oakland, California, team of the Pacific Coast league, 5 to0. Oakland's hit total was six, Chicago's ten.

Detroit's second exhibition tilt with the Toronto Internationals showed the Tygers in beter form. Playing errorless ball and hitting 12 safeties, the Cobb outfit won, 6 to 2. Manager Cobb said that he was considering a trade with Cleveland involving Neun.

The St. Louis Cards engaged in collegiate play at Austin, Texas, winning from the University of Texas varsity, 14 to 8. The lineup was of first string Card players.

Rain kept the Chicago White Sox indoors at Shreveport, Louisiana and tonight the elect started on an exhibition trip to Dallas, Texas. Five players, regarded as slated for the minors were left in camp. They are pitchers Carney, Carroll and Borman and Infielders Mathews and Kraft.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

On the request of Wade Killefer the Atlanta club of the Southern League, has turned Joe Jenkins, veteran catcher, over to the Seattle club of the Pacific Coast league. Killefer wanted Jenkins as a handy man and the latter was also anxious to get away from the Southern league.

Pete Monahan, recruit first baseman of the Baltimore Orioles, suffered a severe cut under the eye at the Punta Gorda, Fla., camp last week, when a ball he was fielding hoped badly. Several stitches were taken. Monahan was obtained from the Fairmont club of the Middle Atlantic league.

Jim McAuley, veteran infielder, made a free agen by Los Angeles, of the Coast league, last week was signed by the Minneapolis club of the American association. Jim was with Kansas City for a long stretch before going to the coast. He is a good fielder, but his hitting fell off last year.

Eight umpires, four of whom were in the Three-I league last season, have been signed by President L. J. Wylie. The staff consists of Bob Harmon, Charles A Shaftner, Pete Rife, holdovers and Joe Ferguson, Philadelphia, Pa.; R. G. Rapp, Ames, Ia.; Frank A. Schaeffer, Biloxi, Miss., and W. F. (Zeni- Clayton, Abilene, Tex.

Outfielder Frankie Zoeller reported to the Hollywood team of the Coast league, the first of last week. The little chap, who was obtained via the Yankees from Atlanta of the Southern league, had questioned Owner Lane's value of his services. He figures on eventually being a big leaguer and is out to convince everybody this season.

Len P. Maloney, a young infielder from Kansas City, Mo., has been signed by Toledo of the American association. He is 23 years old and once had a fling at O. B. with Burlington of the Mississippi Valley league.

George Faulkner has been signed as manager of the Portland, Me., team of the New England league. He has had experience in the Eastern and International leagues and once had a fling with the Cincinnati Reds.

Fort Smith of the Western association, has purchased George Kopshaw, young catcher, from the Syracuse club of the International league. Don Benn, with Oklahoma City of the Western league, last season, is another catching addition to the Twins.

Final organization of the Southeastern league was effected at a meeting in Albany, Ga., last week. The circuit will be made up of six clubs, Albany, Columbus and Savannah in Georgia, Montgomery in Alabama and Jacksonville and St. Augustine in Florida.

The Memphis club of the Southern league, has sold Pitcher Monroe Mitchell to the Rochester club of the International league. Mitchell was with the Cleveland Indians last spring, but had injured his arm the previous fall after being sold by Memphis and was turned back.

Harry Shriver, former pitcher for the Brooklyn Robins, has been made manager of the Clarksburg team of the Middle Atlantic league. Shriver pitched for Clarksburg last season, and won 17 games out of 28. The new pilot hopes to get a youngster or two from the Brooklyn club.

RELIGIOUS BOOKS MOVE UP IN RANKS OF BEST SELLERS

NEW YORK, March 25 (AP)—Religious books have increased their position within the ranks of the best sellers to a conspicuous degree during the last several years, the gain being attributed by publishers to a greater demand not only from church members but from persons without definite ecclesiastical affiliations.

A glance over the list of the ten best sellers in non-fiction last year shows Bruce Barton's The Man Nobody Knows and Giovanni Papini's The Life of Christ, well toward the top. Demand for these and other books on religion is reported even greater than in 1925.

"When some one refers to the greatest book in the world, the booktrade thinks Bible as quickly as do churchmen, said Frederic G. Melcher, editor of the Publisher's Weekly. Its sale beggars all other totals of production and has since printing began.

"But though the field of religious books has always supplied the book stores with their best sellers, this seldom has been as conspicuously so as during the last two or three years. Just now the high peak of church activity emphasizes this interest. Another interesting feature is it has been characteristic of recent demands that they have spread far beyond church boundaries.

In addition to the books by Barton and Papini, Mary Austin's The Small Town Man and Robert Lynde Hartt's The Man Himself have attracted wide reading. Much interest is being shown in William Lyon Phelp's The Carpenter of Nazareth. Sales on a series of Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick's sermons have gone beyond the million mark. New translations of the Bible have been another outstanding feature.

The current for the electric lights in Lebanon has been turned on by the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company and people who have had their homes wired are appreciating the new lights.

Capper Bill Provides For War Dictatorship

Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, prominent newspaper publisher and farmer, has drafted a bill which will provide for a universal draft of man power and the mobilization of material resources and control of prices by the President. The measure is indorsed by the War Department and the American Legion. Numerous labor and other organizations have manifested hostility to the measure on various grounds, among them being the contention that it proposes to set up a dangerous dictatorship in time of war.

REMEDY LIES IN COOPERATION OF FARMERS.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Some doctors are said to prescribe quinine no matter what ails you, and others to prescribe calomel, whether you have heart disease or a sore toe. But most good doctors are chary about administering drugs until they first find out what ails the patient. They want to know what they're shooting at before they pull the trigger.

Just what ails farming and farmers? What's the trouble with agriculture? It's sickly. Of that there is no doubt. But just how sick is it? What are its symptoms? Where does it hurt worst? Is it a mere superficial skin disease, or does it involve the very center and seat of life?

The country, especially its western half, is full of miseducated and untrained charlatans who couldn't tell a case of arthritis from one of gastritis, if they met 'em both at high noon, on a clear day, in the open fields, yet who are all cocksure they know the exact cure-all to dose us with. Some of these critters are in congress more's the pity. There are enough of them there to have already submitted more than 150 alleged systems of treatment, in the form of farm bills. Not more than two of all these bills indicate any statesmanlike capacity, or any higher purpose than to placate various bunches of sore-headed constituents.

Worst of all, they are so heterogeneous and hit-or-miss, so different and so unlike, so crude and, in some cases, so manifestly unfair that the average man, trying to find a grain of common sense or an atom of heedfulness in the lot grows discouraged and chucks 'em all into the waste basket.

The National Industrial Conference board is an organization which is devoted to finding out things about our whole industrial life, to getting at the bottom facts and setting them forth without prejudice or partisanship; in other words to digging out what is the matter before mixing up any dose of medicine.

Its latest study has been of the farm problem, and its latest report a fairly intelligible statement of just what's the matter with farming. It emphasizes the truth that the agricultural problem is essentially economic and any effective program for its solution can be reached only after a most thorough-going study of underlying facts.

The board finds, after such thoroughgoing study of such underlying facts, that the farmer's position in the world of industry and business isn't an equal or even a decently fair one. He isn't half-paid, in comparison with workers in other lines.

For example, his actual earnings of all sorts and kinds in 1924 averaged $730 a farm, the country over. That same year the average earnings of railroad and steamboat workers were $1,572; the average earnings in manufacturing industries $1,269, the average earnings of teachers $1,265; the average earnings of clerical workers $2,141; the average earnings in all other industries combined $1,115, as compared with the average farmers earnings of $730.

Furthermore, the Industrial Conference board finds that at least $630 of the farmer's $730 income was in the form of food, fuel and housing, furnished by the farm. That leaves an average of $100 as wages. But the board finds that a fair interest on the capital invested in farms, amounts to about $400 each, the country over. This, with the $100 earned as wages, makes available as income an average total of $500. Census returns show that the cost of food and clothing and other necessities actually purchased by the average farm family runs to $475 a year. This leaves $25 a year to the average farmer for amusements and luxuries and education and farm improvements,—and the swelling of his bank deposit!

Taking the country at large and as a whole, the net return on the individual farmer's investment in his farm averages only two per cent.

In other words, so far as interest on his capital is concerned, the average farmer would be twice as well off if his money were in a savings bank.

He would be three times as well off if, besides having his capital in the savings bank, he was able to work on the railroad or in an office or in a mill or at anything on earth besides farming. The farmer's taxes and other "overhead" costs have increased almost 600 per cent since 1900. Farm labor rates have increased by 90 per cent. Materials, tools, supplies, etc., necessarily purchased by the farmer from other industries, have increased in cost by about 300 per cent since 1900. In those same years the wholesale prices of his products have risen only 120 per cent.

Now, Mr. Farmer man, there's the "fax 'nd figgers" for you. What do you make of them?

You really didn't need them to tell you that things were not coming your way. You didn't need them to understand that, when you went to market, your leg was pulled both ways, going and coming. You've cried "Ouch!" a good many times because you were hurt, even if you didn't know exactly what was hurting you. And a whole lot of you have grown discouraged and given up trying to buck against all the rest of the country.

Up to 1900 the production of harvested farm crops increased faster than the population. Since 1900 such crop production has decreased by 20 per cent. Up to 1900 "the capacity and production of the farm industry were able to expand more rapidly than the domestic population, because production costs permitted the profitable sale of agricultural surplus abroad."

Since then production costs have been foisted to such inequitable hights that "the expansion of our farming industry has not been able to keep step with our population growth."

Just because it hasn't paid. There may be other spokes sticking into our wheels, but there's no need to look for them, now. The simple fact that farming "as she is farmed" doesn't pay is quite enough to explain the slowing up of the agricultural apple-cart.

Human nature being what it is isn't going to work for nothing. Nor is it going to work for low wages when there is any chance of getting better.

It's a big problem and must be looked at in a big way. It isn't just the wheat farmers of Kansas or the corn farmers of Iowa or the apple-growers of Oregon or the truckers of Long Island and New Jersey or the potato-raisers of Maine who need a different deal, it's the entire farm bunch.

Considering the problem in that way, as one involving the whole farming industry of the whole country, such reports as this of the Industrial Conference board make it perfectly clear what the trouble with present day farming is.

It is costing farmers too much to produce crops; and they are not getting equitable prices for what they produce.

The only possible remedy, then, is either to lower production costs or to get better prices. Perhaps all one or the other; perhaps 50 per cent of each.

The mere statement of the case shows instantly how more than silly it is to expect government to straighten out the snarl. Government can't go into the business of supplying farmers with machines and tools and fertilizers and the like at lower rates. Nor can it compel farm workmen to work at lower wages. Nor can it fix the prices at which wheat and corn and potatoes and apples and cabbages etc., shall be sold.

The problem, as has been said, is economic, not political. Taking it into politics will simply make a bad matter worse. There is no salvation, not even any help in that direction.

Nor is it a case for amateur doctoring. It calls for the application of the widest knowledge, the keenest training, and the highest experience. I may accept your suggestion of mullein-tea in a case of the mumps, but when I'm down with double-pneumonia I want the best doctor and the cannliest nurse in the bailiwick.

It's one thing to know what's the matter with farming. It's quite another thing to tell what to do for it. Most any of us can understand the diagnosis,—when some one else makes it for us. But the cure, ah, that is another matter.

For one, I confess that I can't see any remedy available except co-operation among farmers both in buying and in selling. I don't even feel sure that co-operation is a complete cure. It would certainly prove an alleviative and a tonic. And perhaps nature would then develop a real cure.

But it seems as if there must be some real statesmen and economic experts in the country despite our popular failure to get any such into congress. The medical experts have found both cause and cure of such one-time pests as malaria and yellow fever; they are close on the trail after the germs of tuberculosis and cancer. Aren't there any keen-minded and public-spirited economic experts now that the causes of farm anemia are disclosed, to discover and effectuate the cure?

I was much surprised the other day, to learn from a bulletin of the department of farms and markets of New York that there are already 1,056 co-operative societies in operation in that one state and among its farmers. Especially large are the co-operatives handling wool, milk and milk products, fruits, and honey. During the last year for which returns are complete, traveling wool-buyers were offering individual farmers from 26 to 33 cents a pound for their wool. That same year the farmers who "pooled" their wool were getting from 32 to 56 cents a pound. "The average gain to the co-operative wool farmer was from 7 to 8 cents a pound, after all overhead was paid."

That is simply one item. If the co-operative farmer who got 8 cents a pound more for his wool was also a member of a co-operative buying association which saved him a similar percentage on the tools and fertilizers and cattle feeds he had to buy he would have been at least 16 per cent better off than the non-co-operative.

And a gain of even 16 per cent is not one to be sneered at. Certainly not by farmers who are shown to be averaging only about 3 per cent interest on their invested capital.

THE FARMER.

CELEBRATES 87TH BIRTHDAY AS RESIDENT OF ONE CITY

ROCKFORD, Ill., March 25 (AP)—The 104th birthday of "Aunt Jane" Cunningham on April 1 is an event for the entire city. "Aunt Jane" has lived in Rockford since 1839.

She came here with her parents in a covered wagon 87 years ago, but now she enjoys motoring in the transcontinental highway which passes her door, is a radio fan and interested in other modernities.

Her birthday is to be celebrated quietly, with a cake bearing 104 candles which she will cut herself for the friends who drop in.

When a man begins to lose ground he is naturally dissatisfied with his lot.

The Stranger in the Tree

It is, as folk long since agreed,
Embarrassing to find you're treed.
—Gray Fox.

Yes, sir, it is embarrassing to be treed. But it makes a whole lot of difference who does the treeing. The stranger in the Green Forest had been treed by Bowser the Hound. That means that Bowser had chased him and made him climb a tree for safety. Then Bowser had remained at the foot of the tree to keep the stranger up there. Now, this didn't worry the stranger very much. All he had to do was to remain there until Bowser got tired of barking and went away. Then he could come down when he felt like it.

But matters had changed. Somebody was coming up that tree! Yes, sir, somebody was climbing that tree.

He could hear the pounding of spears on Prickly Porky's coat as Prickly Porky climbed

This was a wholly different matter. The stranger began to feel uneasy. He kept trying to look down between the branches to see who it was that was coming up that tree and grunting as he came. But it was some time before he could see anybody. When he did see who it was, he didn't know just what to think. It was Prickly Porky, who was minding his own, and the stranger never had seen Prickly Porky climb before. Prickly Porky came up very slowly, but the nearer he came the more uneasy the stranger grew. He could hear the thousand little spears on Prickly Porky's coat rattle as Prickly Porky climbed. It was an unpleasant sound. Yes, sir, it was a most unpleasant sound.

The stranger got to his feet and began to look for a way down. When he stood up this way Reddy Fox had a good view of him. Reddy didn't know what to think. This stranger certainly looked like a Fox. His coat of red coat, he was a queer one, with some red ringmarks. He didn't have a white tip to his tail nor was it so big as Reddy's. But there was no doubt that the stranger was a member of the Fox family. Reddy knew him to be cousin, though what cousin he didn't know. Nor could he understand how a Fox could possibly be so high up in a tree. Reddy simply sat there staring with his mouth wide open. He was too astonished for words. In his surprise he forgot everything else. It wasn't until the roar of Bowser's voice almost in his ears warned him that Bowser had discovered him, that he remembered where he was. Bowser, having been driven away from the foot of the big hemlock tree by Prickly Porky, the Porcupine, had gone racing about to see what else he could find and so had surprised Reddy.

When Bowser heard away went Reddy, and after him went Bowser, the great voice ringing through the Green Forest. Reddy didn't mind being driven away a bit, but he did want to see what would happen when Prickly Porky arrived on the scene. So he kept where he was. He felt safe enough where he was, for he knew very positively that Bowser couldn't climb a tree at all. But there was nothing to stop Bowser from trying to get at him. He didn't need to attempt to climb the tree to do it.

Meanwhile the stranger up in the tree, who was Gray Fox, the Wild Fox and whom I have to the Green Forest from [illegible] of course, more and more puzzled. "He's up a tree," said to himself. Prickly Porky, you [illegible] me [illegible] stopped and he acted for all the world as if he didn't know that any one was near. Then, to the relief of Gray Fox, Prickly Porky crept out on one of the branches. Gray Fox didn't waste any time. He came down out of that tree in a hurry, and off he started.

Prickly Porky [illegible] and [illegible] Fox up a tree. [illegible] Prickly Porky [illegible] Just [illegible]

JEWETT CITY RESPONDS FOR JEWISH RELIEF

Daniel Polsky, Rudolph Henschel and Max Hanover of the Norwich United Jewish Relief committee were invited to speak at a meeting held at the town hall, Jewett City on Wednesday with the object of helping the $25,000 quota accepted by the Jewish people of Norwich. Jacob Wechsler, Benjamin Schleifer and S. Wechsler of Jewett City made all arrangements for the meeting, procuring conveyances for the farm owners in the vicinity. Ben Schleifer presided and introduced Daniel Polsky as the first speaker.

Mr. Polsky greatly interested his listeners by relating the interesting experiences of his father who forty-two years ago established in New London as the first Jewish farmer in New London county. He led his listeners through the vicissitudes of the intervening time to this date, pointing out the advantages which civilization and improved appliances give to the farmer of today. He also told his listeners that being tillers of the soil they surely must be in sympathy with the comprehensive, constructive program of the joint distribution committee who are making the present appeal in order to root the Jewish people into the soil making them self-sustaining and supporting farmers.

Max Hanover was the next speaker and made a passionate address appealing to the men and women present to show their neighborliness and help Norwich in this humanitarian cause. He enthused his listeners by telling them of the encouragement and moral support which the committe is receiving from citizens of all denominations and praised in the most glowing terms the zeal, sincerity and untiring effort of a handful of men and women who are responsible for the success of the drive.

Jacob Wechsler announced his [illegible] had received [illegible] contributions [illegible] Harry Rotenberg $75; Morris Goldberg $75; Wechsler family $75; Harry Levine $50; Isaac Shipman $30; Ben Schleifer $30; Oscar Silverleib $30; George Goldstein $30; Max Moskowitz $25; M. Greenstein $15; Isaac Rosen $15. The donations totaled $751—with promises of several contributions to follow by mail. Rudolph Henschel for the Norwich committee, thanked the contributors for their generosity and expressed appreciation for the fine relief showing of the citizens of the town of Griswold by contributing the use of the town hall for this worthy cause.

Contributions to the relief not yet acknowledged are as follows: Murphy & McGarry, Jake Sears, Moses Arkano, Mr. Chesson, P. Morel, Sam Cramer, Morris Markoff, Jacob Gravelesky, George Greenberger, Josiah Greenstein, Theo. Lowenberg, Aaron Kivelewitz, Harry Mosak, David Schwartz, Lavine Bros., Herman Bruckner, Harry F. NO SIGN OF AN ARMISTICE IN THE PROHIBITION WARFARE IN CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, March 25.—(AP)—The sobriety of members of congress was discussed concurrently today, and different viewpoints, by members of the house and by prohibition enforcement officers of the District of Columbia.

While on the floor another debate was centering around the reported remarks of Dr. Clarence True Wilson on drinking among congressmen, the local prohibition officials were announcing they meant to go the limit in discovering the intended ultimate consignee of six quarts of liquor found Saturday night in a corridor of the house office building.

The threat of the prohibition officers apparently aroused but passing interest among the representatives, although the alleged purveyor of the six bottles was taken into custody early in the day and released on bond after questioning. The incident was not even mentioned in the daily round of prohibition debate.

Representative Rankin, democrat, Mississippi, opened the discussion with a speech saying he was sorry Representative O'Connor, democrat, New York, had seen fit yesterday to attack Dr. Wilson's reported statement on the state of congressional sobriety in the days before Volstead. Mr. Rankin pointed out that Wilson not only is an eminent Methodist clergyman, but secretary of the board of temperance of his church. Attacks on ministers and religious organizations, he continued, would get the wets nowhere.

There was applause on the democratic side when the Mississippi member declared such a speech as that made by Mr. O'Connor, in which he called Dr. Wilson "a liar" ought not to be regarded as a gauge of democratic sentiment. He estimated that the party was seventy five per cent dry, and added:

"The prohibition amendment is just as binding on democrats as republicans, and we are not going to meet you in 1928 or any other time on a platform of light wines and beers."

A telegram from Dr. Wilson, saying Representative O'Connor apparently has entirely misunderstood his meaning, was read to the house by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas. It reiterated the explanation previously made by the Methodist leader in a public statement.

Undeterred by the criticism of their democratic colleagues from Mississippi and Texas, the democratic wet bloc from New York later returned to the attack. Just before adjournment Representative Oliver, democrat, New York, a member of that group, put in a bill to permit sale of wine and beer in states that approve such a course by referendum. Replying to Mr. Rankin, Representative Oliver said it was regrettable, but the wet and dry question had been made a national issue by the "tryanny" of the Volstead act.

He declared the state of New York has had to submit to nullification of its own laws because of the federal prohibition act.

The house lobbies heard all sorts of stories today in connection with the liquor found Saturday night in the office building, where it apparently had been abandoned upon the approach of a police officer. Enforcement officers denied they had evidence so far to connect the incident with any member of congress, but said they would follow the trail no matter where it might lead.

What they may have been told by the man arrested, George L. Cassidy, remained undisclosed.

BROADWAY PENNY BUSINESS CORNERSTONES OF RICH STORES

NEW YORK, March 25 (AP)—Broadway's continual change of population, unusual business conditions and its "individuality," have been factors in as many of the street's financial cornerstones as other influences have built the wealth of Wall street.

A necessity to Broadway's business is crowds; crowds that throng the street in day time and the theatergoers in the evening—for whom most of the shops remain open. Every night to the great majority of persons on Broadway is the Saturday night of Four Corners.

It is the penny business of this district that is the foundation of wealthy establishments. Many of the most desirable corners, requiring rentals in staggering figures, do not house jewelry shops or places doing business on wide margins of profits. They are almost monopolized by cubby holes cut out of the side of a building, open all around like a part of the sidewalk.

Their wares are orange juice sold by the glass fro a few cents, five and ten cent candies, "hot dogs," trinkets that pique the eye, soft drinks and related "quick bite."

At the rush hours for these places, the crowds around them are comparable only to the crowds that morning and night jam the subway trains.

One merchant has capitalized a space eight feet square on Columbus Circle with a complete tile and nickled plated kitchen where a wiener sandwich and a cup of coffee can be had—but you must step out on the sidewalk to eat it. Only two customers can be accommodated at once. This place pays a high rental and the fixtures required more than $2,000 to install, but the proprietor has found the business worth it.

Other shops cramp their floor space for a glittering front window. They go in mostly for novelties and their existence is gained principally from the curiosity of the thousands who are intrigued by the display. There are a number of "passageway" stores which hold contiguous auction sales. Some have doors others do not. The auctioneer wants his voice to reach the passerby. These places are never without their crowds of curious and the old saying holds good: "Get 'em in and they'll buy."

Up and down the street are found unique and devious establishments catering to the crowds. The first-time visitor to Broadway frequently is surprised to see that the Forties and Fifties appears by day as a street of ramshackle buildings in many places—three to six story buildings many of which ante-date the time of elevators. The query is often made as to why this valuable property is not fully utilized. And the answer is "it is."

There is a profit from the shops on the ground floors and restaurants and dance halls, night clubs and cabarets give excellent returns for the second floors. Usually the upper stories are lofts, considered of small account, but the greatest profit is on the roof.

Partially obscured by day, the night reveals thousands of signs, so close that at times they cannot be distinguished at a short distance. Leases for these spaces run into enormous sums, one of the most expensive locations having a reputed value of $150,000 a year.

A drug store leased at more than $40,000 a year a space through which subway patrons pass to the trains its walls are decorated with murals and lined with soda fountains. A score of clerks hardly able to move are kept continually at work.

Some years ago one man conceived the idea that theater owners might better sell tickets not otherwise sold at half price than not at all. He leased the basement of a drug store, bought the tickets at half price, sold them for ten cents more than he paid for them, or allowed any number to be purchased with a yearly subscription card—sold at a few dollars—at cost price to him.

His business expanded until it interfered with the drug store so he bought the drug store, then bought the building and now his business operations require a corporation to manage.

Broadway gradually is being built up; here and there a skyscraper seemingly pops up over night, but its institutions are old and firmly established. They yield slowly and as they go it raises another problem, because the district is surrounded in a manner that precludes broad local expansion.

MEXICO BROADCASTS PROGRAM IN A HALF DOZEN LANGUAGES

MEXICO CITY, March 25 (AP)—Addresses in Aztec now take the air in Mexico, a part of the department of education's campaign of "education by radio."

Tongues that were old when Cortez conquered this country four hundred years ago are used in broadcasting of instructive talks in half a dozen Indian languages and dialects, for the benefit of the many natives throughout the republic who still cling to an Indian language.

The government has distributed receiving sets to Indian villages or districts. From all the surrounding region men, women and children tramp to the place where a local headman has charge of the government's "magic box which catches winged words from afar." There, upon stated occasions, they listen to advice and instruction, spoken in their own tongue, by a department of education expert in Mexico City at CZE station.

The Maya, Otomi, Matlazinca, Zapoteca, Mexteca and other tribal languages have been used as well as Aztec, which is still a living language in parts of Mexico, although perhaps unpreserved in its pre-conquest purity.

An elaborate program of educational addresses in Spanish is also part of the program varied with concerts by some of Mexico's best musicians.

New Discovery Banishes Sleeplessness, Quiets Nerves and Stops Headache

The most wearing-out process which could afflict a person is that which is caused by lack of sleep. Fitful, insufficient slumber tears the nervous system to pieces and causes much of the weakness, irritability and susceptibility to disease which is often blamed on other causes.

Lack of sleep ages one, destroys beauty and certainly shortens your life. And yet it is so easy to have the deep refreshing slumber of childhood.

A sleep that will make you feel like a new person and add five years to your life—a slumber that will banish the "blues" and give you the strong, healthy nerves which mean a sunshiny, cheerful outlook on life. And you can get all these benefits from a new, harmless, easy-to-take preparation called Neura.

Neura contains no opiates or habit-forming drugs. The results from the use of Neura have been so remarkable, however, that it is now dispensed by Lee & Osgood and druggists everywhere with a guarantee to return the small cost if you are not amazed and delighted with the results from the use of the very first package. GEM ROBBER WHITTEMORE WEAKENING

NEW YORK, March 25.—(AP)—Richard Reese Whittemore, the "candy kid" who led a million dollar crime ring of ten men that considered murder a part of its routine work, today showed first signs of weakening and offered to make a complete confessions if the police would release his wife, "the tiger girl." She is under indictment for complicity in a series of robberies.

The offer followed an hour's pleading by his father who came here from Baltimore today to offer what help he could to the youthful criminal and to urge him to tell the police a true record of his activities. The father, for whom Richard was named, is an electrical engineer, and he immediately won the confidence of the police by his evident sincerity. The police would not comment on the confession offer.

Meanwhile, the confession of Anthony Paladino, giving a detailed account of operations of the gang, was released by the district attorney's office, after it had been in hand 36 hours.

The district attorney had hesitated to do this because the perfection of the crime machine's operations was considered a bad example for youths to read.

Several other developments in connection with the police investigation tended to detract attention from Whittemore.

These included the announcement of a search for a Fifth avenue jeweler alleged to have bargained with the gang, and also an intensified search for the tenth member of the gang whose capture, the police believe, will clean up the hornets' nest of criminals.

Guided by the confessions of Paladino and William Unkelback, the police sought for a jeweler whose two faced activities were the connecting link between the robbers' work and clients of Fifth avenue jewelers.

This man was described as always carrying $30,000 in cash, with which to buy stolen jewels, transaction were completed with him in from one to four days and the basis of pay was reported as being fixed percentage of the announced valuation of jewels in newspaper stories of the robberies.

The tenth man sought by the police was the driver of the automobile in the robbery of another Fifth avenue jeweler which netted diamonds valued at almost a half million dollars.

Whittemore's father was received by his son in calm indifference, the middle-aged man's tears having no effect upon the boy, who his father said is not yet 25.

The wife, for whose freedom the young man tried to bargain, is 24. The police indicated they were not inclined to accede to his offer.

Hopes of the Baltimore, Maryland, authorities to have Whittemore turned over to them for trial on a charge of murdering a prison guard in an escape there more than a year ago, looked brighter today.

The New York police wanted Whittemore here only until complete information had been gathered against the members of his gang, and it was thought in official circles that Buffalo authorities, who also want him, would agree to Baltimore's request. Whittemore was identified as a member of the gang that murdered two guards in an armored car in a $85,000 robbery in Buffalo last October, nine months after his escape from Baltimore.

A request for Unkelhack also was registered today by authorities in Middlesex County, N. J., who charged him with the theft of $25,000 worth of liquors there.

An automobile used in one of the gang robberies was recovered by the police today from a garage where it had been placed recently after having been kept in Cleveland for several weeks.

AMERICA[illegible]ING IN ART MUSEUM MOST POPULAR

NEW YORK, March 25 (AP)—Love of Americans for things American may be seen daily at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, where visitors throng the American wing. It has become the most popular attraction in the museum.

There, decorative arts of America from the seventeenth through the first quarter of the nineteenth century are exhibited in rooms reconstructed with original woodwork, furniture, metalwork, ceramics, glass, prints and paintings assembled to present characteristic ancestral backgrounds.

Spectators express a desire to see how their American forebears lived. Most of them at one time or another gather in the ballroom from Gadsby's Tavern, Alexandria, Va., where Washington attended his final birthnight ball in 1796.

To the attendants who watch visitors day by day, it appears that the Italian primitives have the most interest for students, while paintings of later periods attract generally.

The strollers always pause to view Sargent's portrait of Madame X. They spend some time in the William H. Huntington collection of portraits of Washington, Franklin and Lafayette, done in all materials. The Rembrandts, 18 in all, likewise receive attention, as does A Virgin and Child Enthroned with Saints, known as the Colonna Altrapiece, by Raphael. It was presented by J. Pierpont Morgan.

Also the gift of the banker is the gathering of decorative arts of Europe from the Gallo-Roman and Mersyinclian periods to the end of the eighteenth century. This collection, which fills an entire wing, is augmented by a suite of three Louis XVI rooms from the Hotel Gaulin at Dijon, which also is very popular. Another is an excellent group of Rodin's work, including numerous sketches from which he worked.

Since the discovery of Tutankhamen's tomb, many visitors ask the way to the Egyptian exhibits. Reerected in its original form is the mastaba tomb which 4,500 years ago was placed over a Theban dignitary named Perneb. A series of painted wooden funerary models, from the tomb of Prince Mehenkwetre at Thebes, is one of the most remarkable of its kind ever found.

Jewelry from the tomb of the Princess Sathatheriunut, of the twelfth dynasty, is equaled by only one other group, now in the Cairo museum. An Etruscan bronze chariot of the sixth century, B. C., is the only one of its kind known by museum officials to be in existence.

Scattered throughout the museum are artists and sculptors and visitors always stop—at a polite distance—to watch them at work on copies. Now and then, one encounters a group of students working or discussing pictures.

Two assertions often heard, it is said, refute. One is the statement that New Yorkers seldom visit the museum and that the visitors must be from other cities. The other is that interest in art is decreasing. Last year there were approximately [illegible] visitors, a decided increase.

New Admiral British Fleet

Sir Arthur Grough Calthorpe has been promoted by King George of England to the rank of Admiral of the Fleet, which is the naval equivalent to Field Marshal of the Army. Sir Arthur has seen plenty of active service, as the medals he wears indicate. He served in the Battle of Jutland and was the first flag officer of the Allies to reach Constantinople at the close of the war, where he acted as High Commissioner. The new Admiral of the Fleet has earned a reputation as a diplomat and an administrator as well as a sea fighter.

Rosemary Bargains in Cats

I met a man the other day, a fat man, on our street;
He had a basket full of cats, and all of them were sweet;
They was all little baby cats, and all their eyes was blue,
And he said he was selling them; and so I buyed me two,
For nothing. He said that was cheap to charge folks for a cat;
And it was cheap. I didn't know cats could be cheap as that,
And I took them home in my arms, and fed them from a cup
With some cream, that my mother had, and their tails sticked straight up
When they would walk around our yard. When mother saw them she Held both of her hands up—like this—and she said: "Mercy me!"

And I explained how I buyed them, and I think she was glad,
The way she laughed; and then we went and waited for my dad;
With them holded tight in my arms, down by the corner, and
When he saw them he laughed and said he thinked that they was grand;
And he said that he didn't know a little girl like me
Could shop so well; and then I wished that I had buyed me three;
I might have buyed me three, or buyed me four, as well as not;
Or mebbe more. I should have asked how many cats he's got;
And the next time the cat man comes I will buy all I can.
Dad was so glad he laughed, and said: "I'd like to meet that man!"

NEW LONDON MAN'S MOTOR SALOON RESULTS IN NORWICH HEARING

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 25—Acting upon a tip that Mike Costello, proprietor of The Garden of Italy, a restaurant located on Bentley avenue, Ocean Beach, would bring a quantity of liquor to New London for probable distribution at the shore resort, Prohibition Enforcement Agents Joseph Fitzpatrick, Stanton Briggs and Harry Avery laid in wait throughout last night for the appearance of a Nash sedan, which it was claimed, Costello would be driving. The officers scoured the Waterford highway and the extreme westerly end of Bank street throughout the night and early morning in their vigil for the Nash car as it was known that if Costello put in an appearance he would come from New Haven. After a fruitless watch the entire night, the car containing the three officers took up a position, parking on Bank street, near Shaw street about 5:30 o'clock this morning. A short time later their watchfulness was rewarded for the Nash sedan with Costello at the wheel was detected approaching. Costello evidently spotted the waiting car and knew whom it contained for instead of continuing through Montauk avenue to go to the shore resort, Costello drove the machine to Truman street and turned into Belden court. The officers overtook the Nash automobile at the corner of Belden street. Costello was instructed to stop and this he did. The officers then started to search the car. Raising the floor boards the officers found a unique set of compartments for the carrying of liquor and in which were five one-gallon cans of alcohol and a small quantity of Scotch and rye whiskey. Costello was taken to the police station where he was held until the middle of the forenoon, when he was escorted to Norwich and presented before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson, charged with transportation. Probable cause was found and Costello was held for trial before the next term of the United States District court. He furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000 for his appearance whenever court convenes. Costello has been the proprietor of the Ocean Beach place about a year and a half and although the place was reported to be a dispensary for liquor, Costello was never arrested.

The automobile, which is the property of George Matto, 15 Holmes street, West Haven, is equipped with two sets of metal compartments that run parallel with the body of the machine and in which a considerable quantity of cans of alcohol or bottles of whiskey could be carried and without any play, for the compartments were constructed so as to enable the packing of the alcohol or booze snugly, it being estimated that 90 or 95 cases of whiskey can be carried in the two compartments.

Several days ago the machine was taken in charge by the New London police when the driver of it did not possess an operator's license and claimed to not know the identity of the owner. It was revealed by Costello at the time that the car was the property of Matto, and Matto, when located, stated that he had given the driver permission to operate the car. While the car was in charge of the police it was examined and it was then found that the car was equipped for the easy transportation of liquor, the two metal compartments being revealed. As the New London police did not have any charge against the owner of the machine and were powerless to hold the car, there was nothing else for the police to do but to turn it over to the authorized agent of the owner.

DRUG STORE BURGLAR TOOK NOTHING BUT DOPE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 25—Some one addict is believed to have been active in New London late last night or during the early hours of this morning, for it was discovered this forenoon that the Moore Pharmacy, 452 Bank street, of which Dr. Anthony Crocicchia, is proprietor, had been entered and that bottles of morphine and a bottle of cocaine had been stolen. No trace of the burglar and dope fiends was obtained by the police.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Patrolman Michael Corcoran in making his rounds discovered a rear window of the pharmacy smashed. Dr. Crocicchia was notified and visited the store, but at that time he declared that nothing was missing from the place. Later, however, it is reported discovered the four bottles of narcotics missing and then informed the police of the nature of the theft. Nothing else was disturbed in the store, although the visitor attempted to force open the cash register.

Those who looked upon the booze when it was red, yesterday and last evening, came in pairs to the police court this morning to tell what happened. That is, four of the booze-bibbers came in pairs. Albert J. Richards and Joseph Francis work together so they also drank together. Richards readies at 31 Blackhall street so when they went from Shor to refreshment, they sought the Richards home. But they found the doors barred against them as Mrs. Richards said she would not permit drunks to enter there. In that she only exercised her rights as a married and esteemed wife. Then the pair banged away at the door and Mrs. Richards called the police to take away the disturbers of the peace. Francis was arrested, but Richards had taken enough booze to induce him to go to the police station with an idea that he could bring about the release of the secured friend. Instead of getting Francis into the lock-up he got himself into it. The court listened to the statement of the prosecutor and then continued the case of Francis till the 5th of June and molled the complaint against Richards, as the latter had made himself ridiculous and realized the fact.

J. R. Bingham and Edwin H. Gates, sailors on the coast guard steamer McCall came ashore together last evening and they went about the city till midnight when they encountered some rubbish barrels on Bank street in front of the Royal hotel. Whether the barrels obstructed their course or whether they were regarded as unsightly did not appear, but Gates tipped them over into the highway. Officer Denis J. Murphy was a witness of what occurred so he remonstrated with Gates, without receiving a reasonable answer for tipping over the barrels. He then proceeded to take Mr. Gates within the doors of the lock-up Bingham followed and he, too, was locked up. Intoxication was the charge made against the pair. Gates admitted that the charge was a proper one against him and pleaded guilty. He was fined $10. Bingham astonished the court by declaring while under oath that he adhered to the law which Mr. Volstead had placed on the statute books and in other ways represented that he was a faithful follower of prohibition principles. He said he never was intoxicated and told the court that he was not drinking last night. He just wanted to secure the release of his chum. That sort of story was not exactly to the satisfaction of the court, but Bingham was given the benefit of all doubt as to whether he was intoxicated and judgment was suspended. He was warned however that he had not "put anything over" on the court and was advised to watch his step in the future. In the four cases heard today it was apparent that the accused persons who tell the truth when they are given a hearing escape with lighter penalties that do those who endeavor to deceive.

There are more people ill in New London now than in many months. Indeed not during the past year has so much sickness prevailed. Children in every section of the city are laid up with measles and the disease they so naturally are afflicted with, while pneumonia and grip has come to older persons.

SAILOR'S STOLEN JEWELRY HAS NOT BEEN RECOVERED

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 25—Bert Pierson, a sailor and attached to the United States Coast Guard destroyer McCall, complained to the police late this afternoon that he had been robbed of a gold watch, chain and knife and a gold ring, with a red stone. Pierson, stated that the watch, which was of 15 jewels, together with the chain, knife and ring, was removed from his clothing while he absented himself. He also stated that a sailor named Robertson and a member of the McCall's crew, was discharged from the service today and after having been paid off, he had made it known taht he intended to board a train for New York. Pierson suspected Robertson of having committed the theft. A watch was maintained of New York bound trains, but Robertson was not observed boarding any of them.

Broadway Theater

How they did laugh and applaud the splendid Keith-Albee vaudeville acts that opened at the Broadway theater yesterday.

The opening stage attraction were two comely young ladies Wood & Lawrence. They captivated the audience with their songs and musical offering. Pete Wells & Lew Beck, "the flaming youths" who proved to be two live sparks with song and comedy.

Pete Knox & Belle Inman in "The Collector," have something different in a comedy offering of merit that was greatly appreciated.

The Hicksville Four with their rapid fire comedy and perfect blending of harmony proved to be a riot of fun.

Julius Fuerst & Co. in "The Man on the Blocks" was as fine a closing novelty as one would care to see.

Rapid action, beautiful scenes and a story that holds the spectators enthralled is the current feature at the Broadway theater where Hoot Gibson is shining particularly bright in his latest starring vehicle, "The Calgary Stampede," a Universal-Jewell.

Thrills, and beautiful scenery—the two requisites of the successful picture of the west—are present in abundance in this picture. Canada in all her glory was never better presented to the screen than through the scenes of this drama of the west which was actually filmed in the Canadian location.

It is a picture filled with thrills and real action from start to finish and one that will hold everyone tense with excitement. Buck Jones is supported by a particularly good cast which includes Helena D'Algy, Diana Miller and Harvey Clark.

The story is an original one by Maxine Alton and Adele Buffington, adapted to the screen by Charles Darnton. R. William Neill directed the production.

ATTRIBUTES VOGUE OF NEW SEX PLAYS TO VISITORS

DETROIT, March 25 (AP)—Certain kinds of visitors from interior cities and towns are responsible for the vogue sex plays are enjoying on Broadway, in the opinion of Jessie Bonstelle, producer of several New York successes and now operating her own theater here.

"New York is splotched with sex play measles," Miss Bonstelle said. "It is an epidemic that will pass. Such things perish of themselves, of their vapidity.

"Your New Yorker is no more unhealthy in his tastes for drama than anyone else. He enjoys clean plays and patronizes them. The travelling public, the man in New York for a good time, keeps these sex things going. He wants to see 'naughty' plays. He neglects the clean shows. The 'good' plays he reasons, will come to his home town and he will see them there because they are the kind he can attend with his wife and daughter."

A play has no chance of New York production, Miss Bonstelle holds, unless it carries across its pages the Broadway Success mark. She spoke of Channing Pocock, and his hawking his play, The Fool, from manager to manager, each turning it down because it did not have the Broadway hit mark.

"Don Marquis has written a wonderful thing," she said. "The Dark Hours it is called and it deals with the life of Christ. It would be somewhat costly to produce, and producers shy from it as they shy from all plays that have biblical foundations. Ben Hur had to have its great chariot race scene or it would not have succeeded. The Parable of the Prodigal Son which was staged under the title: The Wanderer, needed the big second act, with its touch of Babylonian licentiousness and sex appeal, to make it go over.

Miss Bonstelle disagrees with several playwrights who pretend to see the salvation of the drama in the Little Theater movement. Invariably, she said, these groups become cliques and snobbishness develops, offsetting whatever possibilities the Little Theater might hold for good.

CHEROKEE ROSE TOOK NAME FROM OLD INDIAN ROMANCE

ATLANTA, Ga., March 25 (AP)—Springtime, which will begin to break in Dixie before March has flown, is regarded by flower-lovers as the time of roses.

Almost all varieties are raised in the open in this latitude and farther south, almost the year around.

Rose-bushes are to be found in profusion and especially in Georgia, where the Cherokee rose rules a favorite.

This flower takes its name from the Cherokee nation of Indians which made the mountains of the northern portion of the state their habitat.

There is no authentic account of the origin of the rose but a legend, handed down from the Indians, still lives. It involves a romance between a Cherokee maiden and a Seminole brave from Florida.

The young brave, taken prisoner by the Cherokee, was doomed to die by torture, after which his body was to be thrown into flames. But before the sentence could be carried into execution, he was stricken by disease.

A tradition among the Cherokees was that no foe ever had been put to death unless he was in the pink of health. Consequently, the youth was taken by a Cherokee chief to his own hut, who set his daughter to nursing.

As the Seminole improved, her feeling for him increased and shortly before the time he was to be put to death, she found she was in love with him. She pleaded with him to escape with her help and make his way home. He reciprocating her love, refused to do this unless she accompany him.

At midnight they stole away, but when a short distance, the Indian girl said she could not go on without some memento of her old home. They returned and she broke a beautiful rose from a bush by the hut of her father.

Carrying this in her breast to the land farther south she planted it at her new home. It took root and flourished, and its milk-white bossoms with golden centers recalled her childhood days in the far-away mountains of Georgia.

From that time, this flower has been known as the Cherokee rose.

The man who wants to be good has less opportunity than the man who wants to be great.

In Loving Memory of Our Dear Brother
Who passed away two years ago, today, March 26, 1924.

Precious brother, he has left us,
Left us, yes, forever more;
But we hope to meet our loved one
On that bright and happy shore;
Lonely the house and sad the hours
Since our dear one has gone,
But, oh! a brighter home than ours
In Heaven is now his own.

Mr. and MRS. WILLIAM BROSOFSKE and Family.

DEPRESSION IN STOCKS

NEW YORK, March 25—(AP)—Further liquidation developed in today's stock market, sending the average of 20 leading industrial issues down to a new low level for the year. Net declines in scores of active issues ran from 1 to nearly 11 points, but the decline was not as general as yesterday. Sporadic rallies took place throughout the session and while they were not very impressive, more than a score of issues showed net gains of 1 to nearly 3 points on the day.

Total sales were 2,301,200 shares, as against 2,670,200 yesterday.

Banks were reported to have called about $10,000,000 additional in loans, largely for the account of out-of-town banks, one reason assigned for the recent withdrawal of funds from the call market by interior banks was a campaign for the usual heavy demand for funds by farmers for spring planting purposes.

Heavy liquidation of Baldwin, which broke 7 3-4 points to 97 1-4, the lowest price in four years, and a renewal of selling pressure against Hudson which duplicated yesterday's low of 88, was rumored to represent distress selling for the account of a prominent operator who had been active on the long side in those issues during the recent bull market, but these reports lacked confirmation. Baldwin later rallied to 99 1-2 and Hudson to 91 1-4.

Weakness also was apparent in such issues as Allied Chemical, Columbia Gas, Foundation company, Gulf States Steel, International Combustion Engineering, Kelsey Wheel, National Dairy Products, Union Bag and Paper, United States Cast Iron Pipe and United Fruit, all of which sold 4 to 11 points lower although some of them made partial recovery towards the close. Kresge Department Stores preferred ordinarily inactive broke 14 1-4 points to a new low record at 75 1-4 on 4 new sales.

Several of the motors and high priced specialties, which were weak earlier in the week, rallied briskly when a renewal of bear selling failed to break them through their previous low levels. American Can B, old stock, bounded up over 11 points to 261 and then eased to 261 1-2, and the new stock issued 1 3-4 higher at 48 7-8. Mack Trucks showed a net gain of 1 3-4 at 110 1-4 after selling as high as 111 1-2. General Motors closed 3-4 higher at 118 3-4, although it had sold a point above that figure at the decline, while it had been offering stubborn resistance to selling pressure, finally cracked under the strain, selling down over 2 points to 31 3-4 and then rallying a point.

Other industrials which showed good recuperative power were the commercial solvents issues, R. H. Macy, Philadelphia company, Savage Arms and United Drug, all up 2 points or more.

Rails received better support than the industrials, the average of 20 leading issues in that group showing a small gain on the day. Chesapeake and Ohio, Reading, St. Louis Southwestern and Southern Railway being among the issues to show net advances of a point or more.

The principal commodity markets pointed upward. Wheat rallied 1 1-2 to nearly 2 cents a bushel, cotton 20 to 29 points and raw sugar futures 4 to 5 points. Coffee futures closed 41 points net higher to 5 points net lower.

Call money opened at 5 per cent., the highest renewal rate since March 2, holding steady at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Trading in the foreign exchanges was quiet, with the principal rates holding firm. Demand sterling ruled around $4.85 7-8 and French francs fluctuated within a narrow area around 3.50 cents. Norwegian krone were up 20 points to 21.52 cents.

TAFTVILLE

The Taftville Rod and Gun club was formerly organized at a meeting Wednesday evening at St Louis hall on Dion street. There were over 40 present, who voted to organize, and began the drive to bring every sportsman in town into the club. The annual dues were fixed at one dollar. The officers elected were: president, Fred Dugas; vice-president, Alfred Benoit; secretary, Leo LePage; financial secretary and treasurer, Paul Rapat. Another meeting is to be held next Monday evening when it is expected that speakers from other clubs will be on hand to give more information about the operation of this sort of an organization. The club invites all sportmen to attend and their ideas will be welcomed.

On Wednesday evening, the Aswaubitya Camp, Fire group entertained the members' mothers and some other guests at a banquet in the vestry of Taftville Congregational church. The following menu was served:

MAKING REPAIRS TO COLCHESTER ROAD BRIDGE

Workmen of the state highway department were promptly at work Thursday making repairs to the bridge on the Norwich-Colchester road where Elias Glauburger of Lebanon lost his life Wednesday afternoon, when Glauburger's automobile knocked out a corner post on the bridge. It was expected that the bridge would be restored to use some time today or today.

DON'T OVERLOOK A GOOD THING

From Jas. Edwards Montgomery, Ala., comes this letter containing a valuable suggestion—"I feel like a new man since taking FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR. Can sleep all night, soreness in my chest is gone, so is the bad cough. My whole family use it for coughs, colds and croup and it always helps." Stops tickling in throat, corrects hacking, and puts a soothing healing coating on a raw inflamed throat. Don't overlook FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR.—Lee & Osgood Co

PINE STREET FAMILY FOUND HOUSE ON FIRE AS THEY WERE LEAVING HOME

The bungalow residence of Joseph A. Des Jardins, Pine street, was badly damaged by fire caused by an overheated stove early Thursday evening.

A few minutes after eight o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Des Jardins left the house intending to drive to the home of a relative. Mr. Des Jardins was just backing his automobile out of the garage when his wife noticed a light in the house.

She asked her husband if he had put out all the lights in the house and he answered "yes" and then went to investigate. When he opened the front door, he discovered that the house was on fire. The flames had spread so rapidly that he was unable to get to the telephone, but he secured the use of another telephone and notified the fire department. The Yantic department was called out and Squad A with Deputy Chief Henry R. Taft also responded.

Arriving at the scene the firemen found a bad blaze on their hands. It was necessary to lay 500 feet of inch and a half hose and drag it by hand across lots to the fire. The stream soon had the flames under control and after a hard fight the fire was extinguished.

The fire had caught from an overheated stove in the dining room, burned through the partitions and up through to the upper floor. There was considerable damage to the dining room, kitchen and furniture by fire and water.

SAYS CHRISTIANITY IS AGAINST KINDLY TOLERANCE

Kindly Toleration was the subject of the sermon delivered Thursday evening by Rev. George H. Heyn of Bettsfield, Mass., at the united lenten service at Trinity Episcopal church. This was the final service in the series of union services held during the lenten period by Christ and Trinity churches. The services opened at 7:45 o'clock. The scripture lessons were read by Rev. J. Eldred Brown, pastor of Trinity church and prayer was offered by Rev. C. Montgomery Budlong, rector of Christ church.

Rev. Mr. Heyn took as his text, Revelations 3:15—I know thy works that art neither hot nor cold. My subject is Kindly Toleration, said Rev. Mr. Heyn. I believe this term describes better than anything else the attitude towards Christianity of the average American citizen. I believe that those who come least to our churches will agree that the church has done some good. All will agree that the church has been kind to children. The church has done more good than harm in the world.

We find the spirit of kindly tolerance among the laity. We find the spirit of kindly toleration in the church. Many thousands of our fellow Americans do not believe the truths of Christianity at all. We ought to face that fact. It is a serious thing. America has become a pagan nation. It is more pagan now than it ever was. What has Christianity to say of this spirit of kindly tolerance.

Christianity and kindly tolerance cannot live side by side. You cannot mix water and oil. Christianity absolutely refuses to accept the spirit of kindly tolerance. Christianity is a terrific creed. People seem to believe that Christianity is an easy thing to believe. It is either the most glorious thing in the universe or it is a most awful lie. You have either got to be with it or against it. Christianity is terrific in its demands. There are other planets besides this earth but God did not choose any other planet for the revealation of His Eternal Son. That demands that we give our life and our all to Christianity.

Christianity also is terrific in its claims. It claims to be the one religion of the world. Christianity claims to be a religion which is the way, the truth, the light. If you accept your Christian vows you do so at your own peril. Christianity is terrific in its scope. We have got to realize that this Christian truth is a truth for all the world. Christianity is terrific in its love. I wish I could bring home to you something of the love of God. A great love has nothing to do with kindly toleration.

Let us get over this idea of patronizing Christianity. Let us give up our kindly toleration of Christianity. Why not join the group that works for God? Why not get out of that group that simply tolerates God?

SPOKE TO LIONS CLUB ON SELLING NORWICH

A talk on Selling Norwich by H. D. Larrabee general manager of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, featured the weekly luncheon meeting of the Norwich Lions club Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel. President William A. Anderson presided at the meeting and William R. Frisbie acted as song leader, Pete Ethier presiding at the piano. Tyler S. Stanton and George Madden entertained with pleasing solos and there were the usual club and group song numbers. The five minute speaker was George Madden who spoke of the need of a recreation field in Norwich for young people, from the ages of 17 up to 25.

Jean Kieffer, Ben Pullen and Edward Rich were announced as the entertainment committee for the month of April.

In opening his talk Mr. Larrabee said that before selling Norwich to others we must first sell it to ourselves and must realize that Norwich has some real tangible advantages which are worth selling and we must look squarely at our limitations or faults as a means to their correction.

In part he spoke as follows:

Good Place For Business.

As things stand today, Norwich already is a good place in which to do business. This is borne out by the fact that a lot of business is being done here and our savings bank statistics indicate that the people are reasonably prosperous. A wide variety of products are manufactured in Norwich — awnings to thermos bottles, belts to woolens, cutlery to velvets, cotton goods to radiators, etc. We have room for more industries here, and throughout Eastern Connecticut, and there is no question but that we need them. They must, however, come here because it is advantageous for them to do so, and no because we pay them to come, for experience seems to show that buying a factory into your town is poor business. The increase in industrial activity is therefore, much more likely to come from expansion of our present industries and the starting up of new ones, than from the re-location of already existing enterprises. The presence of a good variety of industries here now and room for a lot more is certainly a real advantage, indicating that industrial growth may be expected.

The city of Norwich is certainly very pleasantly located at the junction of these two valleys; our climate is not unduly severe, and we have seaside resorts within easy access. Pleasant locations, is therefore, another advantage and a decided one. We have also good rail and water transportation, supplemented by adequate means of local transportation. We have plenty of power available for all domestic and industrial needs. We have splendid state roads, good schools and churches and in fact all of those things which are essential as a firm basis upon which community prosperity may rest.

There are some things which we do or fal to do which tend to hinder the process of improvement, and perhaps some of them have become a matter of habit. In the first place we are inclined to overlook the existence and value of our present advantageous conditions. This is not unlike the man with the one talent, because if we do not appreciate what we already have, it is difficult to see how we are going to earn or get any more. Sometimes we do not even feel willing to admit any measure of prosperity when business is good, but it is difficult to understand how we may expect to realize prosperty when all we talk about is poverty.

A Criticism Without Correction.

A thing which we indulge a little too freely in is criticism without correction. If we see something which we believe to be wrong in either social, industrial or civic affairs, or our relations with others, we undoubtedly have a right to criticise it, or to find fault with it, if we know or can suggest some correction of that fault. Kicking about the condition without any suggestion of remedy, simply emphasizes the fault to a purpose which can be nothing other than harmful.

Suppose, for instance, that I go into a store to purchase some particular thing and that it is something which should be carried in stock. It may be that I will fail to find that thing—that I will not get all of the attention which I feel a customer ought to get in that store, so I come away somewhat disgruntled and find fault, not to the owner of that store, but rather to almost anybody else: It may very well be that while this was going on, somebody has been in my own place of business, and failed to get that care and attention to which he felt entitled, or for some reason failed to get what he wanted and, he finds fault in the same general terms. If Norwich stores are not carrying for sale the things which their customers really want to buy, it is in considerable measure traceable to the fact that Norwich people do not buy all of the goods which they can buy in Norwich, and in part because we do not tell the merchant himself just what it is that we want. Whatever the institution may be — store, office, factory, power plant, city government—it exists for the sole purpose of service. It must supply the demand or care for the needs of a greater or lesser number of people, and any institution which fails to recognize this as a fundamental is bound to fail because it cannot otherwise earn a living.

Unity of Action.

Sometimes it has apparently been found difficult to get unity of action on some given project. It is quite natural that each one should be most interested in that thing which has the most direct effect upon his welfare or happiness, but there are things affecting the welfare and happiness of others which we may help if we will only take enough interest in them to bring us into action. This, of course, is by no means peculiar to Norwich, but the general idea is too often that when the other fellow is in trouble he should work himself out, but that when we are in trouble, the other fellow should come to our aid.

Self interest we all possess, of course, but we should not close our eyes to the needs or desires of our neighbors. In fact our own best interests cannot be served without regard to the activity of others, for the very practical reason that the time will come when we will in some degree be obliged to depend upon the help or encouragement of somebody else. We can only get as we give—the benefit which comes to us from our town, our business, our air in life, is only in the proportion that we give to it of our time, of our goods and most of all of ourselves. Unless we do things for others, we cannot expect others to help us.

Confidence Is Needed.

A matter of great moment in successful business is the establishment of confidence in each other, and especially that confidence which should exist between employer and employe. Is every one on your pay roll working with you, or in the interest of the service you seek to render? If not, your pay roll money is not working at highest efficiency—it is paying for some motions which do not count. If every one in your employ knew more about your business policy and problems, they would be a lot more interested. When they know nothing about these matters, they can see no reason for many of the things they are required to do. People cannot be loyal to what they know nothing about, nor help in solving problems which they may not know exist. You pay for loyalty whether you have it or not, but you cannot buy it with money alone. It can be created only from a sense of mutual respect and confidence, but it must be mutual. Let the employer confide in the employes as much of his aims and policies as the employe will understand or become interested in; then that employe will know more about the business, have respect for the employer's ability and opinions, and he will earn and get greater compensation both in wages and advancement. From the greater confidence thus set up will come a loyalty each to the other, richer in results than is any other single agency in business affairs.

Individual Attitude Counts

Now the status of a community is the outward expression of the general desire of the people engaged in business, religious and social activity. Just as the personality of the individual is the result of all his different thoughts and actions along varying lines, so the condition, appearance and general attitude of a community is a sort of average of the attitudes of all its citizens; therefore, the little things which determine both the present and the future of the community in which they live. Group action of any sort is effective and has its place in many civic affairs, but it simply represents a line of thought or action common to several people. The moment individual thought or action become simply submerged, then group activity loses its force and value. Real progress and improvement must, therefore, come from individual action and thought, directed along constructive lines; and any community may make, within reasonable limits, such progress as its citizens desire enough to really go after. Geographic or climatic conditions may place certain limits upon the growth of any community, but within such limits a city may be whatever it wants to be. There is something which makes one place better or bigger than another having the same natural advantages. Something made Chicago grow rapidly into a great city; something has made Indianapolis, essentially a railroad junction, a biger city than Providence; something has made New York greater than Norfolk and Worcester bigger than Norwich. It is not geography or climate, but it is the people who live there and how well they make use of what they already possess.

Real progress is not likely to be a spectacular exhibition nor the result of some grand coup. It is much more likely to come as a result of the better performance of the regular things of everyday life. Scarcely a day passes that we may not improve some one of our doings in some detail, and to just the extent that we do that will daily progress be made. There is nothing too small to count. This is the basis of true growth, because each one of these bits of betterment is added to every other bit, and after a time the structure will rise to large dimensions. It is the same thing as creating a fortune by the accumulation of small savings, or the rise of a building by the laying of brick upon brick—adding a little to what is already here. These so called minor changes are of great importance primarily because they are within our reach now. Let us not be discouraged or lacking in interest because we do not today see some big deal which will by tomorrow make Norwich a metropolis, for that would be spectacular and spectacular things generally are not lasting.

Element of Progress.

The element of progress is not a thing to be secured from some outside source—it lies within the community itself. It is in the possession us here who now live in Norwich, and we can use it if we will. It is in the better use of what we already have, a fair correction of such faults as we see, a better appreciation of our town and our neighbor. It is in using our heads to realize conditions—good and bad—as they really are, our hands to lift and push and help, and our hearts to give us the courage to carry on. Let us start by selling Norwich to ourselves. Perhaps Norwich should never have a population of more than 50,000 but we have within ourselves now the means and ability to make it the best place in the world in which 50,000 people may live and do business. This might well be set up as a goal—it is a worthy ambition. Sometimes Norwich has been called "The Rose of New England." Let us there, not forget that the rose grows, and that the bud opens from the inside out.

Mrs. Gardner In Egypt.

Mrs. Leila Troland Gardner writes Norwich friends from Egypt, from the Luxor winter Palace, Cairo, telling of the wonders of her Mediterranean cruise. March 9th her travelling party visited King Tut's tomb; she had sailed on the Nile and had delighted the boatmen by her songs in French and English.

Her tour of the Holy Land was most interesting. Especially was she charmed with Bethany.

In the desert pictures, Mrs. Gardner riding on a camel, is a most attractive sight to her friends.

It is the clean tablecloth that catches the early grease spot.

ASKING CONGREGATIONALISTS TO BUILD WASHINGTON CHURCH

When the national council of Congregational churches met at Washington last October members of the denomination from all over the country had brought to their attention the fact that for the first time a Congregationalist is president of the United States. At the same time they realized the opportunity which the denomination has to build on the most favorable church site in the Capitol city (within a block of the point which L'Enfant, the engineer who laid out Washington, designated as the place for a national church) a national edifice for Congregationalists of the country, and serving them by holding out the light to all the world.

The foundation for this is the First Congregational church of Washington, the church which the president attends, and of which the Rev. Jason Noble Pierce, D. D., graduate of Yale divinity school and former holder of two pastorates in Connecticut, is pastor.

This is the proposal which was made and endorsed at the meeting of the national council, and has since been approved by other Congregational bodies. To ask from the Congregationalists of the nation a fund of $1,250,000, of which $750,000 is to be used in building the church and $500,000 held by the national council for the endowment of the work. The Washington church contributes its present site, worth $1,000,000, and a fund which has now reached $182,000.

On Sunday, February 21, these facts were presented in many of the churches of Connecticut, and a start made toward raising the state's share of the fund. The effort is now being continued from headquarters at the Congregational house in Hartford, to secure by public appeal and personal call a sum adequate to honor Connecticut's place in national Congregationalism.

PROHIBITION PROVOCATIVE OF BITTERNESS IN DEBATE IN GOVERNMENTAL CIRCLES

In Washington Yesterday Judge Ritchie of the Third Federal Distinct of Alaska Advised Dr. Clarence True Wilson to Drop His Middle Name—Advice Was Provoked by Dr. Wilson's Remarks About Enforcement Conditions in Alaska—Three Members of the House Kept Prohibition Argument Going in That Branch of Congress.

WASHINGTON, March 26—(AP)—Alaska's internal political troubles today furnished the talking point for the prohibition hubbub which is dinning on the ears of Washington with increasing intensity as adjournment of congress nears.

Judge Elmer Ritchie, of the Third Federal district of Alaska, was the center of the quarrel, during which he advised Dr. Clarence True Wilson, of the Methodist board of morals to drop his middle name. Elsewhere, in the senate, house, and at the enforcement headquarters of the treasury, there was activity in the way of enforcement orders, debate, and bills designed to change the existing law.

In the day's collection of developments were a resolution by Senator Edge, republican, of New Jersey, asking for a referenum on modification; an order by the internal revenue bureau requiring cereal beverage manufacturers to post bonds; discussions in the house as to whether a farmer "likes his toddy" and announcement by Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of prohibition work, that he is going to California to look over things on the Pacific coast.

Mr. Andrews at the same time asserted that most of the Pennsylvania manufacturers recently charged with illegal practices in handling alcohol had been dealt with before Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, told Secretary Mellon their names.

The Alaskan angle of the general excitement was brought about by a fight over the nomination of Judge Ritchie and when he came to Washington to face his accusers, Delegate Sutherland, sparring in the committee room, of the house judiciary committee, opposite Mr. Sutherland, he said he would refrain from using ugly words, but that he considered Dr. Wilson, whose veracity was challenged Wednesday by Representative O'Connor of New York, to be not a falsifier but a retailer of falsehoods. He resented remarks he said Dr. Wilson had made about the general conditions in the territory, and especially in his own district.

The committee went to great lengths in forcing into the judge's view on prohibition the enforcement of which he had given him great trouble. He accepted the belief that violation of the law was not evidence of moral turpitude. Then some one read into the record a statement quoting the judge as having declared that members of congress violated the law. To this he replied that he knew of men of high standing who took a drink whenever they had a chance. One federal judge, he said, assigned to try liquor cases, announced that it was going to be hard work, and inquired as to where he could get something to wet his whistle.

Nevertheless, Judge Ritchie insisted that he had not upbraided prohibition enforcement. His own district, he said, was as clean as any rural American country.

Delegate Sutherland read a letter from Sherman Duggan, former district attorney of Alaska, criticising the judge as being out of sympathy with prohibition and making other charges, but the judge replied they were "malicious falsehoods."

The resolution of Senator Edge would authorise states and territories to conduct a referendum as to amendment of the Volstead act. He said "if the drys have no fear that public opinion has reversed itself, then it would seem they should unhesitatingly endorse this plan for a legal national showdown."

Three members of the house kept the argument going in that branch of congress, Representatives Black, democrat, New York; Linthicum, democrat, Maryland, and Weller, democrat, New York. Mr. Black and Mr. Linthicum talked about the high cost of enforcement, while Mr. Weller, reciting a contention that women will smoke if they can't get liquor, added that "we have seen a lot of women smoking in the last five years." He also brought in the farmer, who he said, usually has his cellar supplied with cider which gets harder and harder.

The internal revenue bureau's order placing manufacturers under bond, calls for bonds of $10,000 to $65,00. The step was taken in connection with the new revenue law, taxing cereal beverages as a means of permitting inspection by prohibition authorities to prevent high power beer making.

FORMER "DRY" AGENTS HELD FOR SMUGGLING

BOSTON, March 26—(AP)—Two former prohibition agents, Hunk Wyllie and William L. Newell, were indicted today by the federal grand jury for conspiracy to smuggle liquor. They and four other men were included in new indictments brought in connection with an alleged smuggling conspiracy at Swampscott.

Former Chief of Police William L. Quinn of Swampscott, who figured in the original indictment, was excluded, as were all but two of the others named in the first indictments. After those indictments were returned nearly a year ago the federal authorities investigated the rum ring further. Chief Quinn had been already suspended after an investigation of his office by the Lynn police.

SALE OF FRENCH FRANCS IN FINANCIAL CENTERS

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—By The A. P.—Heavy buying of French francs today in all of the principal financial centers of the world demand for Paris in the New York market, breaking over seven points to 4.48, a rate duplicating the extreme low record established in March, 1924. A rally carried them back to 5.42 at the close of the market after the adoption of the Briand ministry's program for the budget was one of the principal reasons ascribed for the buying movement. The speech of Senator Snowden, stating that France could hope to obtain as favorable debt funding terms as Italy from the United States, also was regarded as a contributing factor in some quarters.

STEAMER IN ICE FLOES IN GULF OF FINLAND

BOSTON, March 26.—(AP)—A tender fight with ice floes in the Gulf of Finland was described by Captain H. Rankins of the shipping board steamer Hattrar when she arrived today from Hamburg and Reval. The vessel was caught for four days behind an ice breaker came to the rescue. When the ice breaker broke through near Helsingfors in February, 14 other vessels were caught in the gulf. A convoy was formed and the cutter led 15 vessels in single file out of the ice. Sometimes the ice breaker was forced to turn back and free one of the following ships nipped in the floes. The convoy took ten days to make the 200 mile trip across the gulf. Several steamers suffered damaged bow plates and one lost her propellor. The Hattrar came through unscratched.

RESERVE BOARD REPORTS PRICES LOWER LAST MONTH

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(AP)—Prices generally were lower last month than at any time in more than a year, the federal reserve board said today in its monthly review, while production and trade held their own.

Employment and earnings of factory workers picked up in February, reaching the level of the latter part of last year after the seasonal decline.

Particular improvement was noted in the automobile industry where production was considerably greater in volume than either in January or a year ago, although it was slightly less than in February, 1924.

TWO SOLDIERS HELD IN CONNCETION WITH HOLD-UP

HIRLEY, Mass., March 26.—(AP)—Two soldiers were arrested today a few hours after Levy Landry had been held up and robbed in his radio shop here. Landry identified Joseph Carroll and William S. Redmond, both of Company E, 13th Infantry, Camp Devens, as the men who took $10 from him after one of them had fired a pistol, the bullet grazing his clothing.

PROCLAMATION ISSUED BY PREMIER MUSSOLINI

ROME, March 26.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini issued a stirring proclamation today in connection with the seventh anniversary of the advent of the fascism movement, celebration of which has been fixed for March 23.

"The seventh anniversary of the foundation of fascism," says the proclamation, "finds our forces hale and fit as never before and worthy to celebrate the memorable occasion with the sever discipline of the strong.

"After seven years of struggle and sanguinary combat, the fascist position has become defined within its fundamental limits. At home the government has solved formidable problems with the consent of the people, while the opposition of all sorts was dispiseed. Abroad, fascist Italy is beloved or feared, and respected by all, in spite of the important manoeuvres of the old and outcast political parties which we have definitely wiped out.

"Black shirts! These seven years of struggle are the symbol of your glory, but the heaviest task still is ahead of us.

"Our watchword remains the same. We expect, as always, sincere fraternity among our comrades and iron discipline by our chiefs and all adherents, and an ardent spirit of sacrifice by everybody.

"To have saved the nation is a shining merit We must now, under the invincible symbol of fascism and without relaxation, prepare for fuchers material and moral power for the italian people.

"Black shirts! By every means and in spite of all obstacles we will achieve our ideals."

ELDERS FELT UNABLE TO QUOTE SCRIPTURES

PALMYRA, Ind., March 6.—(AP)—Confessing that they felt unable to match wits and quote the scriptures with D. Clyde Martin, elders of the Church of Christ today obtained postponement until next Thursday of hearing the heresy charges they had preferred against him.

His final trial, Feb. 27, was postponed because of the publicity attendant to the church hearing and because some of those who made the accusations had not literally followed the Bible in first going to the person accused. The second trial today was continued until next week when the prosecuting witnesses answered they had been unable to obtain a spokesman to represent them properly. Martin had said he would conduct his own defense.

TWO MEN INJURED WHEN AIRPLANE FELL

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, March 26.—(AP)—Howard Watt, of Hamilton, pilot, and J. Hill, of Haileybury, Ont., a passenger, were seriously injured when the plane in which they were flying to the Red Lake gold fields crashed this afternoon near Hudson, Ontario. The men were rescued from the wreckage by a band of Indians.

BILL TO STRENGTHEN THE RHODE ISLAND DIVORCE LAWS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 26—(AP)—Petitions for divorce in this state will be heard in open court if a bill reported to the general court today becomes law. The bill, designed to amend and strengthen the Rhode Island divorce laws, was reported to the state senate by the judiciary committee with passage recommended. It was placed on the calendar for action next week.

The measure designed to render impossible "divorce mill" scandals such as brought about the indictment of a court official and an attorney here last year, specifies that every petition for divorce must be heard in open court and on oral testimony. The present practice in Rhode Island courts permits the hearing of divorce cases entirely on depositions.

The proposed law would permit cases to be heard on depositions only when witnesses were prevented from attending court by illness or other unavoidable causes. Such depositions would be taken by a master in chancery specially designated by order of the court.

The bill also provides that petitioners for divorce must take statement under oath as to their prior life, residence and occupation. The information to be available to the trial judge. This is not required under the existing law. Another provision is that petitions for divorce should be made in duplicate and that one copy shall be transmitted to the attorney general, who may interview the parties and become a party himself whenever he believes the interests of the public or of children involved make such intervention necessary.

Leonard W. Hortoh, master in chancery, and Francis P. Bauchesne, Providence attorney, were indicted last year on charges of conspiracy in connection with the operation of a so-called "divorce mill," here. It was charged that divorces had been granted to persons who had not resided in the state, and that other irregularities had been practiced. They were convicted in the superior court and an appeal to the supreme court is pending.

Associated with this report came word that eight seniors at Connecticut Agricultural college members of the R. O. T. C. unit, would be commissioned as reserve officers on June 15 and would be attached to this division for camp duty.

SEEK MAN WITH KNIFE WHO CHASED LITTLE GIRLS

STAMFORD, March 26.—(AP)—A city wide search was being made by the police this afternoon and tonight for a man, said to have been armed with a knife, who chased four little girls. The girls, aged six to eight years, were on their way from the Cove school.

They were going down Cove road to Hamilton hill, they said, when the man appeared and waving the knife in the air chased them down the hill. The girls made their escape and reported the matter to their parents when they reached home.

The neighborhood was searched by the police but no trace of the man was found.

Senate Confirms Woodlock, 52 to 25

As a Member of the Interstate Commerce Commission—Victory For President Coolidge.

WASHINGTON, March 26—(AP)—Thomas F. Woodlock was confirmed by the senate today as a member of the interstate commerce commission by a vote of 52 to 25.

The action ended a struggle of more than a year between the senate and President Coolidge, who had insisted upon confirmation over opposition of democrats and some republicans. The roll call on the decision was not made public.

Mr. Woodlock's name was first presented at the last session, but no action was taken. After adjournment he was given a recess appointment under which he has been serving since.

When his nomination was re-submitted an adverse report was rendered by a 9 to 8 vote of the interstate commerce committee, and the fight was transferred to the floor.

Chief objection to Woodlock, whose home is in New York, had been based on the contention that he was not qualified to represent the viewpoint of shippers because of previous service as a director of railroad corporation. Opponents also argued that in presidential elections for a number of years he had voted the republican ticket, although he was nominated to the commission as a democrat.

DISPLEASED WITH AMERICAN DISPLAY OF WORKS OF ART

NEW HAVEN, March 26.—(AP)—Dr. Lorado Taft in a lecture on "Donatello and his pupils" at Yale university today, criticised American methods of displaying works of art, mentioning several examples in the Metropolitan Museum where, he claims, paintings and sculpture are shown to disadvantage.

"Our museums," said Dr. Taft, "make a specialty of unintelligent lighting. Our finest works of art are often so placed as actually to prejudice visitors against art. It is like grinding out a great musical composition on a wheezy hand organ.

"Take for instance, Donatello's most famous work, his 'Saint George,' one of the finest things in the whole world of art. Have you ever seen it treated with respect? In the Metropolitan Museum, although it stands in an elaborate niche, all that you see is a dirty cast in a dark corner. In the same hall the 'Ghiberti Gates' are set directly opposite the glare of a large window.

"The 'Unknown Woman,' which inspired Kenyon Cox to eloquent verse, could never inspire a poet in her present location; she is only a smudge on the wall."

THE REV. JOHN CONNELL DECLARED INCOMPETENT

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP)—The Rev. John Connell, a retired clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal church and former canon of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, who has charged he was fleeced out of hundreds of thousands of dollars in speculations, was declared incompetent to manage his affairs by a sheriff's jury tonight.

The petition to conserve the dwindling estate of the 86-year-old minister was filed by his great nephew, Edwin D. Morgan, Jr. The Rev. Connell lives in New York in the winter and at his home in Portsmouth, R. I., the rest of the year.

DAYTONA BEACH SWEPT BY A TROPICAL STORM

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 26.—(AP)—A tropical storm today rocked Daytona Beach, wrecked the framework of a furniture factory at Textile City, uprooted oaks and sent debris in all directions.

Damage to the reed and wicker furniture factory of the Florida Textile Products company, was estimated at several thousand dollars.

The storm, declared by residents to have been the worst since the December gale, was of short duration. Telephone service was interrupted in some areas.

No fatalities were reported.

SNOWSTORMS SET BACK NEW HAVEN ROAD EARNINGS

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—February earnings of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad were set back by severe snowstorms which seriously affected freight revenues and operating costs, the net result for the month, after all charges, being a deficit of $202,418. Gross revenues decreased $314,317 compared with February last year. Freight earnings were $556,049 less, but passenger earnings increased $143,151. Net railways operating income was $682,193 under the figures for February, 1925.

Where Advertising Helps.

People look alike; so do razor strops and flower seeds and hats and pianos. If you want to buy a Jones hat and you know all there is to know about a Jones hat, you're not likely to blunder and get some other hat. The same is true for a Jones Piano or a Jones razor strop.

The easiest way there is to know everything that is worth knowing about such things is to read advertising. The advertisements in The Bulletin are here to tell you quickly and truthfully the main facts about the things you buy and use. They are here to prevent you from making mistakes. Mistakes that may be costly.

Read The Bulletin advertisements faithfully. They will repay the time.

TRUSTED EMPLOYE HAD BEEN ARRESTED TEN TIMES

NEWARK, N. J., March 26—(AP)—John J. Corbett, arrested in Chicago today for the theft of $85,500 in Liberty bonds, obtained the securities on February 19, at the office of C. F. Childs and company, New York, for delivery to his Newark employer, J. S. Rippel and company.

Corbett had gone to New York with J. A. Rippel, a member of the firm, to exchange Liberty bonds of the third issue for those of the fourth. They deposited the bonds at the office of Childs and Co., where they were to meet in the afternoon, at an appointed hour, to get the bonds and bring them to Newark.

When Rippel went to the office in accordance with the agreement, he was informed that Corbett had obtained the bonds and departed.

Corbett appeared in several Newark banks on the same afternoon attempting to cash checks made payable to his employer. He was tracked to Jersey City where he cashed one or two bonds of small denomination.

Investigation revealed that Corbett, although a trusted employe of Rippel and company for two years had been arrested ten times or more and used four aliases.

His criminal career began in 1897. It included sentences in the Massachusetts reformatory for larceny and for picking pockets; prison sentences in Santa Clara, California; Louisville, Ky.; and Lawrence, Mass., for burglary and larceny; and arrests in Albany, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

His aliases were John J. Curtis; John J. Harris; John J. Carney, and John J. Kimball.

NEW AIRPLANE RECORD WITH "USEFUL LOAD"

VILLA COUBLAY, France, March 26.—(AP)—Two new world's records for duration flights while carrying "useful loads" were set today by the French aviator Bajac. Using a new four-motor plane destined for commercial purposes, he went up with a load of 1,500 kilograms (3,307 pounds) and remained aloft three hours 40 minutes and 35 seconds. The former record for this test was made by Lieutenant William A. MacReady of the United States army, October 2, 1924, who stayed up two hours 13 minutes 49.6 seconds in a Curtiss-Martin bomber.

Bajac's feat also gives him a new record for duration while carrying a "useful load of 1,000 kilograms (2,205 pounds), the old record having been held by Lieutenant Lucien Bossoutrot of France at two hours 19 minutes 16 seconds.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE TO RETAIN PLYMOUTH FARM

WASHINGTON, March 26—(AP)—President Coolidge intends to retain the farm at Plymouth, Vermont, which his father deeded to him shortly before his death last week.

The tract is one of five farms which the president's great grandfather, Captain John Coolidge, first of the Coolidges to settle near Plymouth, once owned.

BOTH CHILE AND PERU RELY UPON UNITED STATES

ARICA, Chile, March 26—(AP)—The announcement that both Chile and Peru have accepted the good offices of the United States for a settlement of the Tacna-Arica dispute is interpreted here on all sides as an admission by the interested parties that a plebiscite to determine the sovereignty of the territory was impossible, or at least that its realization was so difficult as not to provide an adequate settlement of the question.

$84,700 of Stolen Bonds Recovered

With the Arrest of a Paroled Convict Who Was Employed as a Bank Messenger in Newark.

CHICAGO, March 26.—(AP)—John Joseph Corbett, 36, a paroled convict, was arrested today and all but $300 of $85,500 in Liberty bonds with which he disappeared on Feb. 19 while employed as a messenger by J. P. Rippel and Company of Newark, N. J., is said to be recovered by the police.

Corbett admitted his identity and told the police that the bonds were in a safety deposit box at the Lincoln State bank. A key to the box was found in his pocket.

Police officers who traced Corbett through letters sent to him, trailed him from his room and made the arrest.

"I'm the man," Corbett told the police. "I wanted the money and I took it. The bonds are all at the bank except $300."

Corbett served time in the Massachusetts state penitentiary and is known by the aliases, "Curtis" and "Harris." He carried a bank book showing a checking account of $1,790.

FRENCH COMMITTEE FIRM AGAINST INDIRECT TAXES

Attitude of Finance Committee Places the Cabinet in a Bad Way—It is Now Regarded Extremely Unlikely That Measures to Balance the Budget Can Be Voted Before the Easter Holidays—Meantime the Value of the Franc Continues to Fall.

PARIS, March 25—(AP)—The socialists and a considerable number of radicals remain unconverted to the government's financial program. M. Peret, the finance minister, in outlining his plan for overcoming the budget deficit before the finance committee of the chamber or deputies today, told the committeemen that whatever was to be done must be done quickly, and that if they had anything better to offer than an increase in the tax on business transactions, which he proposed to balance the budget, he was ready to consider it.

The members of the committee merely reiterated the old arguments against indirect taxes, and went back to the old projects of the finance committee which the chamber rejected during the reign of the preceding cabinet.

When the attitude of the committee became known, pessimism succeeded the tendency to optimism which was shown this morning. The reaction on the franc was immediate, the dollar for the first time in history going above twenty nine francs.

In the lobbies of the chamber this afternoon the opinion was heard that the cabinet was in a bad way, that its only possible salvation was a compromise with the moderates and conservatives. This gave fresh impetus to the rumors that M. Malvy would be allowed to resign as minister of interior. M. Malvy proffered his resignation several days ago after he had been made the target of a verbal attack in the chamber.

His friends, however, declared today that they had communicated with him by telephone, and that he would soon be back from the south of France where he went to recuperate from a collapse which he suffered at the conclusion of a speech in his own defense when he was attacked in the chamber. These friends said he would remain at his post as long as the present government was in power.

It appeared clear after M. Peret's meeting with the finance committee that he would find difficulty in reaching an agreement with the committee and that a direct vote on his measures in the chamber would be necessary, as was the case with the projects of his predecessor, M. Doumer. At any event, it is now regarded extremely unlikely that measures to balance the budget can be voted before the Easter holidays.

FEARED SUSPICION OF IMPLICATION IN MURDER

DANBURY, March 6.—(AP)—Mrs. L. B. Lowry, proprietor of a tourist hotel in the Beaver Brook district, an outlying district of Danbury, reading of the arrest of four youths in New York city Wednesday on the charges of murder and robbery and fearing that she would be implicated in the crimes, this afternoon came into the Danbury police headquarters, and told of sheltering the youths and four young women from Sunday morning to Tuesday afternoon.

One of the youths, Richard Dount, 17, spent two months last summer with Mrs. Lowry recovering from an illness of pneumonia. Since his departure he has written to her several times and she has had the highest opinion of his character.

Late Sunday morning, Dount appeared at the Lowry tavern, accompanied by three other men and four girls. He introduced the men by their right names, John and Herbert Roerber and James Green, there being apparently no efforts made to hide their identity. Mrs. Lowry has forgotten the names of the girls except one, Mrs. Gree, who was arrested with the gang and is being held as a material witness.

Mrs. Lowry told the police that the party evidently suffered from no fear of the law.

WOULD BUILD 2,200 PLANES IN PERIOD OF FIVE YEARS

WASHINGTON, March 26—(AP)—A five year building program for the army air service to provide 2,200 new planes at the end of that period was approved unanimously today by the house military committee but no direct recommendation as to the amount of money to be expended was included.

The program is similar in scope to one recently approved by the house naval committee for the naval service, and sponsors of both expect them to be acted upon by the house before adjournment of congress.

Creation of an additional assistant secretary in the war department to handle aviation would be included in the military program. The name of the air service would be changed to "Army Air Corps." The corps, however, would not have independent status as a corps to the Marine corps in the navy, as was advocated by Major General Patrick, army air chief.

The program also provides for three additional brigadier generals in the air army, two of whom at least must be pilots; an increase of 400 in the officer and 6,000 in the enlisted personnel; and a requirement that at least 90 per cent of the officers be pilots, that they be assigned to command of aviation activities.

CHARLES FROST DENIES CHARGES OF INCENDIARISM

BRIDGEPORT, March 26.—(AP)—Charles Frost, 31, 103 Murray avenue, Larchmont, N. Y., on trial before Judge John W. Banks in criminal superior court, for the last two weeks charged with hiring incendiarists to set fire to his Bethel factory, took the witness stand this afternoon and denied in entirety the accusations lodged against him by Abraham "Whitey" Friedman, Sam Weisenger, alias Harry Cohen, and Bernard Isaacson, self-confessed perpetrators of an arson plot.

Frost, who organized the Xeluso Automobile Trunk and Specialty company in 1922, is a certified public accountant. He served in the United States army during the war from 1917 to 1919, and after he was mustered out became attached to the income tax unit. He was stationed as a government expert in Washington and New York and later went into field service.

OPPOSE IMPEACHMENT OF JUDGE ENGLISH

WASHINGTON, March 26—(AP)—Argument in favor of a clean bill of health for Federal Judge George W. English, of Illinois, whose impeachment for "high misdemeanors in office" has been recommended by a majority of the house judiciary committee, were presented today by three members of the committee in a minority report.

This action placed before congress the dissenting views of investigators who have had the case before them for more than a year. The three who signed the report took up each "statement of fact" in the committee report, presented yesterday, assailed the majority conclusions, and made a plea that the defendant be given the benefit of the doubt.

Reserve officers training corps courses at Boston university will be optional after that season.

LAST ATTEMPT TO SAVE CHAPMAN FROM GALLOWS

NEW YORK, March 26—(AP)—Simultaneous movements in three courts, one involving resurrection of an old and musty common law, were planned today as the probable nature of the last attempt to save Gerald Chapman, mail robber and condemned murderer who is to be hanged in Connecticut April 6th.

The three efforts under consideration are the invocation of an ancient common law known as "coram nobis" in the higher courts of Connecticut; an appeal to United States court for a writ of habeas corpus; and a motion for a new trial, based on new evidence, in the Connecticut courts.

Frederick J. Groehl, chief counsel for Chapman, after a conference of the defense lawyers today, declared probably all three, and certainly one, of these efforts would be launched immediately.

The common law, "coram nobis" procedure is very similar to that for a new trial, but has the added attraction of automatically staying the execution of a condemned prisoner. The proceeding calls the attention of a higher court to facts which existed but were overlooked, at the time of trial. In this instance, Chapman's lawyers contend he was not in the state's jurisdiction, but was a federal prisoner.

The motion for a new trial admittedly depends on the finding of witnesses who, the defense counsel say, can prove their man's innocence on entirely new grounds. Representatives of Chapman's lawyers have been scouring several states for these witnesses for the last two days, but without success.

ELEVEN MEN CONVICTED OF SMUGGLING LIQUOR

BOSTON, March 26.—(AP)—Verdicts of guilty were returned by a federal court jury today against 11 men charged with smuggling liquor ashore at East Brewster, Cape Cod. The men were from Providence, Boston, Fairhaven and New Bedford. The liquor, cases of champagne and other fine liquors, was valued at $80,000.

The evidence, largely circumstantial, included testimony that empty liquor bottles were found in the untenanted summer cottage where the men were arrested. In neighboring cottages the liquor was discovered, together with rifles and ammunition. The empty bottles, the state showed, bore the same labels as those in the seized shipment.

Those found guilty were William Hilton, Charles Ernest, George Parker, Byron Cassidy, Joseph Brennan and Walter H. Finn of Boston, Fred Hartung and Thomas H. Kelley of Fairhaven, Harry M. Stevens and Edward Young of New Bedford, and Hugh Simmons of Providence.

PECKING OF WOODPECKERS IS DAMAGING A CHURCH

HYNDSVILLE, N. Y., March 26—(AP)—A great woodpecker hunt is afoot in the parish of the Hyndsville Methodist church.

For some time several of the birds have been finding the seasoned roof and spire of the old edifice so tasty that they threaten to cause considerable damage, and Rev. Timothy Meek and the trustees have sought permission to kill the miscreants before the church is confronted with a big repair bill.

First the dignitaries appealed to the state conservation commission. Rev. Mr. Meek made affidavit that the woodpeckers were harming the property, pecking off large chunks of clapboard and shingle. If allowed to continue, he deposed, they would undoubtedly make the roof leak. His statements were supported by the trustees who had never before realized just how much wood a woodpecker could peck.

WHITTEMORE TO TELL ALL FOR RANSOM OF HIS WIFE

NEW YORK, March 26—(AP)—After talking with his wife, Richard Reese Whittemore made a statement to the police tonight, purporting to give an account of his activities as leader of a gang of jewel robbers. The story which he said would "startle New York," was offered as a ransoom for the release of the "Tiger Girl," Whittemore's 24 year old wife, who was indicted with him and the rest of the band.

District Attorney Banton, however, said that he had "discounted the story 75 per cent." The statement was over 25 pages long. Mrs. Margaret Whittemore saw her husband this afternoon for the first time since their arrest last week, when the police began to round up the gang which is said to have netted $1,000,000 through their system of organized theft.

MANUEL RODRIQUEZ FATALLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 26. — The sharp curve some 100 feet west of the bridge at the end of Columbia avenue, two miles from this city, was the site of another fatal accident at 4:30 o'clock Friday morning. Manuel Rodriquez, 39, a Portuguese, of 303 Broad street, Hartford, suffered injuries in an automobile accident there which resulted in his death shortly before 11 o'clock. The man was a passenger in an Oakland touring car operated by his cousin, Manuel F. Camacho, 30, of the same address at Hartford. The two men were on their way from Hartford to New Bedford, where, according to Camacho, they were to visit a relative. As they were approaching the curve, Camacho stated that he noticed the large road sign. He read the words, "Willimantic Two Miles", and then looked down at the road again. The machine was steered for the end of the state fence which borders the right side of the curve. In desperation the driver pulled at the steering wheel and succeeded in getting the machine started back toward the center of the road but it was too late. The right front wheel of the machine struck the first post of the fence, knocking this post and one other down. The heavy top rail, six by eight inches in thickness crashed through the right side of the car and struck Rodriquez a glancing blow in the abdomen and flush on the right arm, fracturing the member and pushing the man out of the front seat into the rear of the car. The front seat was dislodged from its fastenings, the right side running board and back fender were ripped off and the body of the machine dented. The car was later towed to a garage here.

Linwood A. Scoville of Columbia was a witness of the accident from a distance of about 150 feet. He stated that the machine was traveling at a fast rate of speed as it approached the curve and the fence. The surface of the road was dry. Scoville ran to the machine. He found that Camacho, the driver, had escaped injury. Two men extricated Rodriquez from the wreck. The man was in a semi-conscious state and was in intense pain. Scoville went to the home of Winifred E. Slater, nearby and notified the local police. Chief Allan McArthur summoned the hospital ambulance and a physician and then turned the case over to the state police at Stafford Springs, as the location of the accident is out of local jurisdiction, being just over the city line.

Meanwhile another automobile arrived and took the injured man and Camacho to St. Joseph's hospital here. While this was being done, Doctors Charles A. Jenkins and Frederick E. Wilcox motored to the site of the mishap, but finding the injured man had been removed, made a quick return to the hospital. Nothing could be done to save the injured man, however, and death came shortly afterwards. Medical Examiner L. Louis T. Mason, after an external examination, stated that in his opinion Rodriquez had died from a rupture of the intestines. He notified Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson and permission was given to have the body removed to an undertaking establishment.

State Policeman Harrison J. Hulburt and Henry Heinold conducted an investigation and took two photographers from the state motor vehicle department to the site of the accident. According to officers the machine left the hard surface of the road and traveled about 30 feet partly on soft dirt, before crashing into the fence.

Coroner Bill arrived here in the afternoon and conducted an inquest at the conclusion of which he announced that he would reserve his finding until the medical examiner had performed an autopsy and he could view the photographs taken by the state police. While awaiting the decision of the coroner, Camacho is being held under bonds. In the event that a formal charge is brought against him he will be given a hearing in the Columbia town court.

On October 10, of last year, Henry E. Tracy of West Boulevard, Hartford, a traveling salesman was killed at the curve in a similar manner. A Flint sedan which he was driving crashed into the end of the state fence and the top railing plowed through the car and rammed into his body, causing almost instant death. Medical Examiner Musson said Friday that steps would be taken to call the attention of the state highway department to the dangerous curve, with a view of having it reconstructed.

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 26.—Bench warrants, issued by State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford of Putnam, were served Friday morning on Ernest Bernard, charged with operating a gambling house at 22 Railroad street and 13 local and vicinity young men arrested for gambling in a raid on the place, last Saturday night by County Detective William E. Jackson and captain of police, Thomas F. Grady. The pool room is owned jointly by Bernard and Herman Brettschneider, and a bench warrant has been issued for the arrest of the latter. Brettschneider was in New York city at the time of the raid and was married the following day. Bernard and the 13 men had their cases continued in police court and are scheduled to appear there Tuesday, March 30. They are under bonds of $500.

The bench warrants charge them primarily with frequenting a gambling house, but it was stated that gambling charges would be preferred in some of the cases later. Those served with the warrants are: Brettschneider and Bernard, proprietors, Charles Swiston, Fred Bachand, William H. Syphers, Joseph Bernet, Arthur Hansen, Walter Lariviere, George Carpenter, Arthur Green, Basil Dyak, Frank Webb, Louis Leonard, Charles Lewis and James Brown. Deputy Sheriffs Jackson and Charles Ayer of Killingly and Chief of Police Allan McArthur toured the city during the forenoon to serve the warrants. It had been previously planned to take the men in the afternoon to Putnam where they would be bound over to the April term of the Windham county superior court. Arrangements were made, however, with Attorney Kelley, defending the group, to have the men go through that process here by Judge Frank H. Foss, acting as assistant clerk of the superior court. The bonds for Brettschneider and Bernard were fixed at $1,000 and those for the others at $300 each. During the day all but Leonard were successful in securing bonds. Henry N. Congdon furnished bonds for Swiston; Arthur I. Bill for Bachand; John Hoey for Sypher; John W. Spencer for Bernet; Arthur Hansen for himself; Gail Shamback for Lariviere; Thomas H. Kilbourey for Green and Webb; Taniste Gadue for Dyak; Thomas Skaf for Lewis; Arthur Hansen for Brown. Max Brettschneider was bondsmen for $1,000 each for Hyman Brettschneider and Bernard.

Louis Leonard was taken to Putnam in the afternoon by County Detective Jackson. There he met Guiseppe Colron, of Norwich, who furnished $300 bonds for his appearance in the superior court in April.

DISCOVERS HOME STILL WITH FULL EQUIPMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 26.—While engaged in rounding up the 15 men on whom bench warrants were served in connection with a raid of an alleged gambling place, Friday forenoon, Chief of Police Allan McArthur entered the home of Charles Lewis, one of the men sought and a resident of 41 Jackson street. Lewis was in bed and while the chief was waiting for him to dress he happened to peer into the pantry, leading from the kitchen in which he was standing. His attention was drawn to a copper coil. Getting suspicious the chief started to do a little scouting about the rooms. He came upon a 20-gallon still and the remainder of the equipment for the manufacture of contraband liquor. A glance into a few drawers in another room disclosed three full quarts of home-made moonshine. It was found that the still was owned by David Williams, with whom Lewis made his home. Chief McArthur then went to the place where Williams was working and placed him under arrest for violation of the liquor law. Williams furnished a bond and will appear in police court this Saturday morning on that charge.

Richmond, now connected with the American Thread company, on complain of a resident of The Oaks, a residential section made up of houses owned by the company and occupied by employes. He drove his car on the wrong side of the silent policeman at Lincoln square and was arrested by Officer Grant Bombria. Harrington pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, which he paid.

PLAYED HIDE AND SEEK SUSPECTING BOOTLEGGING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 26. — While Constable Louis H. Hodis waited in the rain at Natchaug bridge Friday night for a Hudson coach which he suspected of being a bootlegging car, the machine was in front of the police headquarters and the driver, Robert E. Sweet of 77 Norwood avenue, Edgewood, R. I., a traveling salesman, well known in this city, was complaining that someone was trying to hold him up. Sweet said that a sedan followed his car to this city. At the city line, near Natchaug bridge the trailing car shot ahead of him, crowding his car to the right gutter. Someone bawled at him, he claimed. He brought his machine to an abrupt stop while the sedan traveled about 50 feet further on and two men in plain clothes started to get out. Sweet swung his car around, speeded back, coming up Ash street and on to Union street, where he located Officer Monte and continued with him to the police station.

Meanwhile, Constable Hodis had telephoned Capt. Grady that a bootlegging car had gotten away from him and that he would await its return to the bridge, which leads to the Providence road. County Detective Jackson and Officer Lariviere had just left to assist the constable when Sweet got to headquarters. He explained matters and was told to go on after his car had been searched. When Sweet got back to the bridge he was again stopped by Constable Hodis and brought back for a technical violation of the traffic rules, but he was again released by Capt. Grady. It was found that Hodis lacked proper authority to make any arrest as only a uniformed officer can stop a car. It is thought Hodis exceeded his authority.

JEWETT CITY

LEW CONGDON BURIED AT PACHAUG FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, March 26.—Rev. J. W. Carter conducted a burial service for Lew Congdon, the last of the Mohegan Indians in Jewett City, at Hourigan Bros.' undertaking rooms on Friday afternoon. The burial was in Pachaug cemetery.

Lew Congdon, who died at the Griswold town farm Thursday was an Indian of unquestioned full blood, a direct descendent of the Connecticut tribes. His father was a Pequot and his mother a Mohegan Indian. For more than a century this town and Lisbon can trace its only Indian residents. In the persons of various members of the Congdons. For many years Joe Congdon was a blacksmith in Jewett City. He was Lew Congdon's uncle. The family were wonderful workers in iron and they held in secret knowledge a process of tempering wrought iron to the mercantile value of the finest steel.

Over three-quarters of a century ago, a certain Isaac Glasko took several of the Congdon family as apprentices, and turned them out as one famous Masonic artisan was known to be. A cunning worker in metals. Tradition records that Glasco, before divulging his secret to his Congities, bound them by so solemn an don apprentices, bound them by so solemn an oath that none ever after presumed to reveal the secret process. Lew Congdon's grandfather Steve Congdon, over 100 years ago a blacksmith in Plainfield, was in his younger days, a grand sachem of the Mohegans and used to parade on Indian days, clad in the feathers paint, and totems, befitting his rank among the tribes.

L. D. Howe of Palmer avenue, knew Lew Congdon well he having at times worked for his fathers, the late Deacon Howe. One day, while employed in a field near the old Howe homestead on the Packerville road, Lew told his companion that when he was a year old, according to the tribe's tradition, his mother smeared him from head to foot in a sort of greasy pigment which she brewed in a kettle, during the dark of the moon, that he might live, without harm, a long life. He was getting close to a hundred when he died Thursday.

Long before the days of drop forging in steel and many years antedating the finished Remember product these Congdon smiths could hammer an ordinary piece of wrought iron into an axe, then by means of the old den formula that they alone possessed could fairly transform it into the consistency of steel.

The Pachaug Community club gave one of the best programs the members have heard and seen for some time, Thursday evening. Community singing was led by Harold Geer. Miss Verna Tarbox sang Who Knows? her encore being Little Bit of a Fellow. Elmo Karjalo played two cornet solos. A set of 12 musical tableaux was a very charming number, and moved like clockwork. The Jewett City people who were present were so well-pleased with this number that the people who took part were asked to repeat it at the Congregational church after Easter, which they consented to do. Mrs. Harold Geer read the poetic descriptions, and as the songs were sung by Mrs. George Briggs, Miss Sadie Thompson, Harold Geer and Byron Kinnie, the tableaux were shown. Sweet and Low, School Days, Old Black Joe, Love's Old Sweet Song, Last Rose of Summer, Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt, Seeing Nellie Home, Mother Machree, A Perfect Day, Over There, Long Long Trail and Star Spangled Banner were the tableaux. The impersonators were: Mrs. Benjamin Goldstein, Roland Goldstein, Grace Campbell, Robert Shattuck, Herbert Campbell, Ruth Morgan, Theodore and John Edmond, Charles Campbell Mr. and Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. Elmo Karjalo, Frances Montgomery, George Frink, Bessie McCluggage, Mr. and Mrs. William Edmond, Frank Morgan, and Wayland Stetson, Mrs. E. H Hiscox was the accompanist. Sandwiches, pie, cake and coffee were served. The committee was: Mr. and Mrs. William Edmond, Mrs. Elmo Karjalo, Blanche Montgomery and Verna Tarbox. During the business meeting, conducted by George Palmer, it was voted to hold meetings in Pachaug town hall in the future. The committee for the next meeting will be appointed at a later date.

Midget, Mrs. Thomas Gray's cat, whose particular ambition is to hunt snakes, caught two lively ones Thursday and brought them to the mistress to be admired. Then comes the report from Frank Burton of a flock of wild geese being seen, and peep frogs heard this week. "Spring has came" was the answer. But nothing doing! Friday afternoon snow began to fall, and a regular snowstorm for hours dashed the hopes of an early spring especially as Friday was April's calendar day. Automobile windshields were obscured, and all outside work was suspended.

Sunday evening at the Christian Endeavor meeting at the Congregational church, there are to be stereoptican views, and the Pachaug society has been invited to attend. The subject of the pictures will be either The New England Coast and up the St. Lawrence River, or Scenes in Italy.

Mrs W C. Jeffers has returned from Boston where she has been with her son, Clarence of Plainfield. Reports from the Deaconess' hospital, where he was operated upon, are very encouraging.

Many readers of the Danielson News Friday were fully in sympathy with the item concerning next week—hoy week. Public services are to be held in the Baptist church on four nights, when no social event should keep Christian people from boserving (on) at least, for these last most solemn and sacred days in Christian history. St. Mary's church observes the regular masses and ceremonies before Easter Sunday, as has been the custom of the Catholic church for centuries.

Myrtle and Marian MacFarland of Norwich are with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Robertson while the parents are in New Haven.

The body of Henry Hazard was brought from Norwich to Pachaug cemetery for burial Friday. He was a resident in Griswold for years, and has children living in town.

Why rub clothes threadbare

—when this new way soaks them whiter

NOW anyone can get the week's wash amazingly white and clean—without touching a washboard—without rubbing the life out of clothes and hands!

You just soak the clothes an hour or two in the morning—or overnight if you like—in Rinso suds. Then rinse—the dirt floats off—and the clothes are sweeter and cleaner than you could rub them! Even the most soiled parts need only a gentle rub between the fingers to make them snowy.

So safe for clothes

Rinso is a new kind of soap, granulated. It contains no acids, harsh chemicals or bleaches—nothing to injure white clothes or fast colors. No laundry soap is safer for clothes or easier on hands.

Use Rinso instead of bar soap, chips or powders. It's all you need, even in hard water. Just use enough to give creamy, lasting suds. Clothes washed in Rinso last longer, for there's no wear and tear rubbing against a board. You don't even need to boil the clothes, because Rinso soaking whitens better than boiling. Sterilizes, too!

Fine in washing machines

Rinso gives wonderful results in washing machines; recommended for safety, and for a whiter wash, by 23 washing machine makers.

Let Rinso do the wash this week! See how much work it saves you, how much whiter it gets the wash, how it spares your hands from becoming red and wash-worn. Ask your grocer for Rinso. Follow directions on package.

"Monday was a day without rest for me until after I tried using Rinso for the family washing. Now it is a matter of but little over an hour before the clean—spotlessly clean — clothes are hanging on the line to dry. Some laundry soaps have failed to accomplish results desired because of the water in this city, but I find that Rinso conquers this evil and gives me clean clothes with little work on my part."

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

MRS. EDWIN BENNETT DIES— STRICKEN AT LODGE MEET

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 26—Mrs. Maria Elizabeth Bennett, sixty-three, died at 5:30 Friday morning at her home in Brooklyn. Mrs. Bennett collapsed a week ago last Thursday night while presiding as royal matron at a meeting of Harmony Court, Order of Amaranth, being held in Masonic hall, Danielson. She was removed to her home and remained unconscious much of the time until her death.

Mrs. Bennett, wife of Edwin Bennett, was one of the best known residents of Brooklyn, where she had lived for many years. She was born in Williamantic May 19, 1863, a daughter of Edward A. and Elizabeth Riley Blish.

She was a member of Trinity church, Brooklyn, a member of Danielson chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, member of Dorcas Rebekah lodge, of Harmony Court, Order of Amaranth, of Brooklyn grange, in which she was an active worker and of Quinebaug Pomona grange. Mrs. Bennett is survived by her husband.

TO SAVE OR NOT TO SAVE TIME THE COMING PROBLEM

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 26—Once again the rumble of the daylight saving argument is heard in the land. Killingly has passed it up for several years, maintaining its activities on standard time throughout the year. Likely it will do so this year, but April is near at hand and as it comes one hears the revival of all the old arguments for and against daylight saving, usually inaugurated during the coming month. In that it is largely bordered by communities that have daylight saving schedules each spring and summer, Killingly cannot wholly escape from talk about it, nor the consequences of it. Then, too, the railroads change the running time of trains, and that's of special interest, particularly in the early morning, to farmers who ship milk to Boston. Another thing that counts is that many who live here work in nearby communities that have daylight saving, and that means getting up mighty early in the morning that they may be at their labors on time. There isn't anything as yet to indicate that Danielson will abandon standard time this spring in favor of a daylight saving arrangement, but there is bound to be much talk about it for the next few weeks.

Friday morning at the chapel in Westfield cemetery upon the arrival of the body of Mrs. William Sherman from Malden, Mass., the burial service of McGregor Woman's Relief corps, which was represented by a delegation of about 18 members, was conducted by the president, Mrs. Cora Page, the chaplain, Mrs. Elizabeth Dawson, the senior vice president, Mrs. Lucy Strong and acting junior vice president, Miss Lillian E. Bailey. The color bearers were Mrs. Marion Cook, Miss Helen Grover, Mrs. Catherine Wood and Miss Florence Wood. The committal service was conducted by Rev. Roger C. Stimson, pastor of the Danielson Methodist Episcopal church.

The hook and ladder truck of the fire department is back in service with its rear wheels cut down and 5-inch solid tires of rubber pressed upon them. Responding to the alarm for the fire at the Perkins house on Maple street Monday afternoon the truck "threw a shoe" in that one of the solid rubber tires on a rear wheel came off, to roll away and imprint a dent in the fender of a fine new automobile that happened to be in its course.

Late Wednesday night the rear wheels were taken off, carried down to Providence early Thursday morning, were under cutting and refitting operations during the day and were brought back here in the evening and at once put back on the truck. It was found that the type of rubber tire that has been in use on these wheels is no longer available, so the wider and heavier tires were pressed on after the wheels had been cut down to make this possible. As re-rigged, the rear of the truck is down a bit, but this can and will be remedied.

The past season has witnessed wheel trouble on both the big pumper and the hook and ladder truck. In both cases necessary repairs were made with promptness.

PUTNAM

DEMURRER SUSTAINED IN MUIR-PELOQUIN CASE

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 26—Judge Edgar C. Dickenson of the superior court, has handed down a decision sustaining the demurrer to the complaint of Adelard Muir against the estate of his uncle the late Nazaire Peloquin. This in effect throws Muir out of courts, unless an appeal is taken to the superior court.

The action was begun in the superior court in Putnam two weeks ago and at the start legal objections and problems were encountered that led to the agreement among counsel that a demurrer should be filed and briefs submitted, to determine the status of the parties.

The facts in the case show that Muir who built the Peloquin block on Main street as contractor for his uncle, Nazaire Peloquin, put in a bill amounting to $10,000 against the uncle's estate, after the uncle died. The bill was not allowed by the administrator, Judge David Flagg, of the Putnam Probate court. Subsequently another bill was put in with items added for work done on the Peloquin block. This block, it is understood, amounted to around $14,000. This was also disallowed.

Muir then consulted a lawyer, and according to his statement authorized the lawyer to take an appeal from the action disallowing the claim. According to Muir's contention the lawyer never brought the necessary action, so the statutory period passed without action being taker.

Muir then retained another lawyer and the more recent proceeding was taken to seek an extension of time for the filing of the appeal from the disallowance of the account, on the ground that Muir had done all he could do and that it was the fault of the attorney first retained that the statutory period was allowed to lapse.

The court now finds that the passing of the statutory period is a bar to further action by Muir in the premises; and, unless appeal is taken, and the decision of the superior court is reversed, Muir is out of court.

Last summer he spent several weeks at the Palmer homestead, where he was born and lived until a young man. He was the youngest of the ten children of James Band and Sarah Holmes Palmer. Four sisters and a brother survive him. He also leaves his wife and three children, who have often visited in Canterbury.

GOOD GOVERNMENT

Good government is a subject which should interest every citizen. That is a greater number however, than it actually does for there are those who take a stand in opposition to about everything that is proposed or done. They are on the off side, ready to criticize but never ready to help bring about a change such as would help to approach their ideal.

There is a committee of 200 organized in Chicago for the betterment of conditions in that city and the chairman of the executive committee in a recent address declared that indifference is the greatest crime of which the good citizen can be guilty in politics. He proceeded to point out how the primaries and the elections are boycotted because they maintain that no ticket is satisfactory to them, and because of the position they take they give support to the forces of evil in politics.

That observation holds good in small as well as large communities. There are those who are persistently clamoring for something to be done, for a change to be made, for conditions to be improved and, yet they do not exert themselves to assist in the doing. They entirely neglect the duty which rests upon the shoulders of each and every individual citizen.

It is not sufficient to say that one more or less vote will make no difference. It is not responding to duty to refuse to attend the caucus where candidates were either unwilling to sacrifice themselves for such purposes under prevailing conditions or because they lacked the support of the unreasonable citizens.

Good government is not a matter that should be left to a few. It calls for the constant and unqualified support of the entire body of citizens imbued with the desire for results and it cannot be too freely and strongly emphasized. To insure good government it must be insisted upon by the many.

TESTING AUTO DRIVERS

Because of the conditions which have developed as the result of the large increase in the number of motor vehicles, the many accidents and fatalities, states which have heretofore given too little attention to the issuance of licenses for operators are being reminded of the need of such protection.

There is the need for adequate legislation and proper enforcement, but even then there is laxity when a state permits the licensing of drivers without undergoing some kind of examination concerning his mental and physical condition. At least that is the belief of the health commissioner of New York and through resort to such a requirement it is felt that there would be prevented many of the accidents that happen in that city.

This is not exactly a new suggestion. It has been repeatedly pointed out that careful tests are required of the men who sit at the throttle of a locomotive which runs on rails, which is limited as to where it can go and governed by the operating signals of the system. They are tested for fitness to do the work that is required of them. On the other hand there are those auto drivers who constantly exceed the speed of many an engineer, who have the free run of the highways and who may be so far as known totally unfit mentally or physically to operate a car if consideration is given to the safety of others.

These days of speed, chance taking and disregard for the rights of others had the number of accidents and fatalities in the highways increasing every year. This doesn't mean that all users are reckless or careless, but there is quite clear evidence that many of them are and it is that portion of them that is constantly making new restrictions and new rules necessary. The time ever comes when mental and physical tests will be required it may be because of the irresponsibility of a class of automobile drivers. It may be felt that there is enough reckless driving, but there are those who, by conduct, are constantly forcing the adoption of more.

DISCOURAGING CRIMINALS

The increase in crime and the many deaths at the hands of gunmen have resulted in a stronger demand for the carrying of firearms and the greater punishment for those who carry such death dealing weapons.

In New York there is a law which carries a heavy penalty for the possession of firearms without a permit. This has worked to the advantage of the gunmen, for many in compliance with it deprive themselves of a means of defense, while the robbers and murderers have no intention of respecting the law and are able to get their guns without signing up for them.

This has resulted in a growing sentiment for the placing of the penalty of death upon those burglars and bandits who are found armed. They carry their weapons for the purpose of using them if necessary. It is a very important part of their equipment and there are those who use them freely and regardless of self protection. Repeated instances can be brought to mind of cases where people have been promptly shot down simply as a part of the terrorism that goes with the holdup game. They have no respect for life and there is no reason why they should be dealt with so leniently by the law that they are permitted to continue at their practices with only slight interruptions.

If the criminals who place such great dependence upon firearms were faced with capital punishment for their deeds, and given to understand that the law would be enforced, there's reason to believe that there would be less encouragement to enter or remain in that kind of business.

The criminal knows full well the value of the firearm. He bids defiance to all kinds of laws and could be expected to do his utmost to throw off the effects of a law calling for capital punishment for robbers caught armed, by separating himself from his gun when danger threatened, but whatever would result in discouraging the combination must be regarded as desirable.

COMMISSIONER WOODLOCK

Although for some time it looked very much as if the senate would refuse to confirm the nomination of Thomas F. Woodlock of New York as a member of the interstate commerce commission, that action was finally taken by a vote of more than two to one.

Commissioner Woodlock is a member of the commission at the present time serving as the result of a recess appointment. It is not because of lack of qualifications, but because of sectionalism and politics that it was feared confirmation would be withheld. In naming him for the commission President Coolidge was actuated by the known ability of the man and the desirability of obtaining such for that highly important body.

There was no effort to deny his qualifications. The attacks upon him were undisguisedly political, it being maintained by some that he wasn't as strong a democrat as they desired and others based their opposition upon the fact that his opinions concerning the railroads, expressed while serving in an editorial capacity, were not satisfactory. In the hearings that were given him by the interstate commerce committee of the senate there was opportunity for delving into these matters and from the statements that he made and the answers that he gave he made a deep impression.

It is believed that the senate has done the wise thing in confirming this nomination and that the service that will be rendered by the commissioner will abundantly bear this out. The vote does not indicate, however, the need of spending the five hours that were required in reaching the decision

PACIFYING CHILE AND PERU

Progress is apparently being made in the effort of this government to undertake mediation of the Tacna-Arica dispute between Chile and Peru. With both countries accepting the idea there is evidence of progress, but it is remembered that the same sort of progress was made during the early stages of the conference that resulted in the agreement to conduct a plebiscite.

Just what the plan of mediation is has not been revealed. Whether it is the idea of selling the disputed territory to Bolivia remains to be disclosed. It is apparently too soon to give the plan publicity for fear of wrecking the whole proposition.

That it is planned to supplant the plebiscite is indicated, but the abandonment of that has not taken place. Evidences have shown the difficulties faced in carrying that through, and so strong has become the feeling first on one side and then the other, that if the plebiscite is held it would be only after the greatest difficulties and with slight chance of terminating the troubles.

That has been perfectly apparent to observers of the South American situation, and if it is possible to avoid any further friction and end the difficulties by some other method it is certainly to be hoped that the present move will be as successful as the present developments might indicate.

There was no expectation of an easy task when an adjustment of the long standing quarrel was undertaken by this government. Expectations have been realized even before registration for the plebiscite was accomplished and it will be a happy solution of another course proves successful.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Have you ever seen an apple orchard that had been allowed to go back to nature? If so, were you particularly charmed with the sight? You probably saw something that was completely choked up with brambles in confusion. The trees themselves were a useless tangle of branches bearing small and imperfect fruit. Without care other than what nature gives it, soon it becomes a sorry spectacle. What is needed to make it beautiful and productive is the hand of the skilled pruner to transform chaos into order. Do you know why you can buy an old, abandoned farm back in the country for a very reasonable sum? Simply because in the hands of nature the land has gone to seed, and the buildings are in the last stage of delapidation. Nature never puts on shingles and clapboards, but with terrible certainty it will take them off—in time. Nature is a good thing as a basis for man's work, but in itself it's mighty failure.

Is it not perfectly apparent why the Easter season is generally followed by large accessions to the churches? It is more so as a rule than at other times. Pastors of all denominations put more emphasis on the vital points of religion between Ash Wednesday and Easter Sunday. They lead their people through these last weeks of Christ's life on earth in his intimate contact with his disciples, showing how their spiritual eyes were opened to the great facts of redemption as never before. Not only are ministers more active in preaching these great facts of religion, but the people give more attention to them. For awhile they turn from the lighter things of this world to consider the great fundamental facts of the spiritual world. That is the solution. These additions to the churches are the human response to the claims of the gospel when they are given a fair chance.

Recently the attention of the world has been drawn to the personality and deeds of Saint Patrick. That such a character was a real historical person has been established beyond all reasonable doubt; and the reason why it was ever called in question is due to the perfectly plausible fact that so many myths had gathered around his name, involving humanly impossible deeds that many were led to question his existence at all. These myths however, give presumptive evidence of his striking character. Now myths are never sufficiently important to have lies told about them. People of little importance are not talked about any more after their death than before. It is the shining mark that attracts the legend and myth; imagination makes them do the unlikely if not the impossible. If judged by the legends associated with his name, Saint Patrick must have been great.

Big cities like big men have to pay the price of their bigness. It is not something they can get at a bargain counter. It is quite possible that big cities like big bridges or big towers may be crushed by their own dead weight. Now this is more than barely possible if there has been faulty construction and inadequate maintenance. I came across this very trenchant paragraph in a recent issue of The Golden Age: "Chicago is a safe enough place if you are dead; but if you are alive you may get killed any time." A friend reports having witnessed two holdups in a single visit. A guest of the Adventurer's club of that city a few years ago said that he was anxious to get back to the jungles of Africa, among the roaring lions, trumpeting elephants, and sociable hippopotami and rhinoceri, rather than take any more chances dodging trolleys, automobiles and holdup men in the Loop district." It ought to be remembered that the Indian name for Chicago is a word meaning "wild onions."

For a great many years the trend of migrating has been, is now, but let us hope shall not ever be, from the country into the city, from the farm to the workshop. The time was when most of the money making opportunities were held by the cities and probably continues to be at present, but certainly not to the extent as formerly. Beyond question a certain reaction has set in, simply because the size of one's income by no means settles the problem of living. The general trend from the country to the city has made the expected happen: crowded conditions, increased expenditures, and of course, less enjoyment and comfort. It has brought about a state of abject poverty that the country knows nothing about. The automobile has made it possible to enjoy the broad spaces of the country as not dreamed of a few years ago.

This reaction is not without important moral values. Over crowded conditions are not only dangerous to physical health, but become the breeding spots of moral disorder, and like measles and diphtheria they may spread as an epidemic. If one takes note of the evidence gathered in our police courts he will find that crime for the most part is hatched out in the pestilential slums. The writer, however, is far from asserting that the country hamlet is a replica of heaven, but it is not to be compared to the immoral quagmires of our cities. Years ago it was the best life of the country going to the city, and now it is the best life coming back. If in the next decade there shall be used as much ability in developing the country as the city in the last we shall reach the desired El Dorado.

The world has always had its fads and probably always will until we get a race of men of more sense than has yet appeared. Every now and then somebody breaks out with this proposition: "Let us get back to nature." Whenever I hear that I feel like asking: "What nature, or whose?" I have seen some of these nature workings from which I would beg to be excused. One day I threw a bit of tough meat into my hen coop, and once an old hen that was old enough to have known better, seized it and tried to gulp it down whole, but it wouldn't gulp. For a moment it seemed as though the biddy would be a has been. At length she dislodged it. Now if you will believe me, the old bonehead tried to swallow it again, and again seemed to be treading the brink of death when another old hen grabbed an end of the meat and tore it in two and both lives were saved. From that kind of nature may the good Lord defend us!

Did King David once have this craving of getting back to nature? If not how will you explain Psalm 55:6 which reports him to have said: "Oh, that I had wings like a dove! for then would I fly away and be at rest." Would he? Where would he have flown to? Personally I think it would have been undignified for any man, and especially a king to go through the air flapping his wings like a dove. To get the average man anywhere would require bigger wings than any dove's I have ever seen in New London county. Is it not a fact that the feathered tribe even with wings don't all of them find rest? Take the non-migratory birds in our northern latitude where in winter it is not unusual to have wide areas covered with snow for many weeks, and in consequence the birds in great numbers perish. Is nature always kind to the birds? Does the saddest want to get back to that kind of nature?

There's many a tip twixt the cup and the lip in the modern machinery

A MUNICIPAL RAILWAY EXPERIENCE.

Mr. Moderator, I have swallowed so many figures that my swallow is sore. Our street railway is a white elephant. We can't sell it. We can't give it away. The only thing to do is to discontinue the service and junk the property."

So said Judge Howell M. Lamprey, the other day at the biggest town meeting ever held in Hampton, N. H., and his remarks were followed by applause. At the conclusion of his speech it was voted overwhelmingly to discontinue service, to make the selectmen a committee to junk the railway, sell the franchise and dispose of the physical assets to the best advantage. The meeting then proceeded to the next article.

The Exeter Street railway was built in 1897 through the efforts of Wallace D. Lovell of Newton, Mass., and ran from Exeter depot to Hampton beach. The road was so successful that the promoters so enthusiastic that they wished to extend their system from Hampton to the Massachusetts state line, along what is known as the Lafayette road, and from the Massachusetts line to Amesbury. Permission was easily obtained and work commenced. When the extension was completed the two lines were consolidated and became known as the Exeter Hampton and Amesbury Street railway. These were the happy days. One could ride from Hampton depot to Exeter for ten cents, from Hampton depot to Hampton beach for five cents, and from Hampton to Amesbury for 15 cents. And the railway made money!

The Automobile Arrives

One pleasant summer day at the beginning of the century the rumor ran through the village that a horseless carriage had come to town and was standing in front of the Hotel Whittier. Great was the excitement. People came from far and near to see the sight. None dreamed that an era was closing, and that the advent of the automobile would make the electric car in the country towns as obsolete as the stagecoach. Later in the season two or three more machines passed through town; the next year they were thicker; the third they were so common that people no longer ran to the door and windows when one went by. In 1903 Hampton people felt quite up to date when it became known that Irving Powers had purchased a one-cylinder car and that Doctor William B. Mack had bought a Stanley. The exhaust on the doctor's car could be heard a mile, and his patients knew that he was coming as soon as his car left the garage.

Anyway, in time, autos came thicker and faster until the roads were choked with them. Their competition began to cut down the receipts of the street railway companies. The Exeter, Hampton and Amesbury line suffered with the rest. It was at a peculiar disadvantage because the bulk of its business was concentrated into three months. The managers tried to adapt the road to the changed conditions. They increased facilities, they changed superintendents, they practiced all kinds of economies. But to no avail. The road steadily went astern. Finally the management applied to the public service commission for authority to discontinue the whole or part of the road, or to sell it a purchaser could be found. The towns served by the road began to feel anxious. It was felt that it would be a great misfortune to both Exeter and Hampton to have the road suspend operations. The only alternative was to have one or both towns take over the road. At a hearing at the town hall, Exeter, Monday, Oct. 21 1918, before the public service commission, President Allen Hillis stated that from 1909 to 1917 there had been only one year in which the receipts had materially exceeded the expenditures, and that the safety of the public required an expenditure the coming year of $10,000 to put the road in suitable condition.

At the March meeting in Exeter, in 1919, a committee was appointed to examine the property and appraise its value. The committee consisted of Leonard F. Smith and Arthur O Fuller. The committee attended to its duties and reported that in its judgment the value of the whole property was $49 005 42. Exeter then voted not to purchase.

The Enabling Act

There was no provision in the New Hampshire statutes for a municipality to take over a street railway, and so an enabling act was necessary. Such an act was drawn up, passed both branches of the legislature, and was approved by the governor John H Bartlett, March 28, 1919. It was entitled, "An act to authorize cities and town to acquire and operate street railway properties." Under the provisions of the act cities and towns were authorized to acquire street railway properties in cases where the railroad had been authorized to discontinue operations of its road or a substantial portion thereof. To make it still easier it was also provided in the act that notes and bonds issued by cities and towns to acquire and operate street railways should not be included in any existing debt limit. Thus the ways were greased for a municipality to glide rapidly and easily down into an abyss of indebtedness.

The question has been raised as to whether this enabling act was constitutional. Of course, this is a question for the supreme court, and can only be settled by that tribunal. But a layman may have an opinion. In 1879 there was inserted in the constitution of New Hampshire the following article "That the general court shall not authorize any town to loan or give its money credit, directly or indirectly, for the benefit of any corporation having for its object a dividend of profit or in any way aid the same by taking its stock or bonds." The question comes up in this connection. Did the town of Hampton, when it took over the property of the street railway, benefit or aid a corporation having for its object a dividend of profits? If it did, are the railway bonds a legal obligation against the town? If they are not, can the town legally assess and collect taxes to pay interest and principal of such bonds. The town of Hampton never will repudiate its obligations. But it might be possible for any taxpayer at any time to raise the question, and if the supreme court should decide that the act in question was unconstitutional some embarrassing complications might arise.

Hampton Takes Over the Road

There was a sentiment among many in Hampton that the continued operation of the railway was necessary to the town's prosperity, and especially to the welfare of Hampton beach, and determined efforts were put forth to have the town take over the road. The propaganda was aggressive and persistent. At the March meeting in 1919 a committee was appointed to confer with committees from other towns and with the railway officials as to conditions and to report at an adjourned meeting. The report of the committee was unexpectedly optimistic. The road was in much better condition than they had reason to think. It was a going concern. If the town took it over it was the opinion of experts "that with reasonably good management the property should show a balance over all operating expenses, maintenance and fixed charges of $5,000 per annum."

At a meeting held Sept. 2, 1919, it was voted to purchase the railway property at a cost not exceeding $80,000. But when the committee met President Hollis he would not listen to these figures. Finally at a special town meeting, held Dec. 20, 1920, it was voter to purchase the road at a price not exceeding $80,000. As this was a special town meeting there was some question as to the locality of the town's action, and so the matter came up again at the annual town meeting, March 8, 1921, when in an atmosphere of excitement and turbulence the town finally voted to take over the road.

In order to purchase the road the town issued bonds to the amount of $76,000, with $12,000 additional for equipment. These bonds bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum. The railway bonds mature in 1946, and the equipment bonds in 1932. Interest has been paid regularly, but no sinking fund has yet been erected to cover the bonds which mature in 1932. The town, however, hopes to retire these bonds at the rate of $5,000 a year, buying them in the open market.

The management of the road was put into the hands of six directors, with Charles E. Greenman, shoe manufacturer, as chairman. The directors are very able business men. They have given much time and thought to the road. But they have not succeeded in making it pay. They are not to blame. The stars in their courses fought against them. Each year the road has carried fewer passengers and a smaller revenue has been reported. One illustration will suffice. In 1925 the road carried 326,383 passengers against 406,390 the preceding year. The total revenues of the road were $25,217.04 in 1925 against $43,040.03 in 1924. Each year there has been an operating loss, which the town has made up. At last the voters became discouraged and decided to discontinue the road.

Results of the Experiment

What are the results of this experiment? What lessons, if any, are there for other towns? What for the legislature and the state? Hampton has increased its bonded debt by $88,000. The town has been called upon to pay the road's annual deficit and in addition has voted a subsidy each year of around $5,000. In orther words, it has cost the town to run the road, in addition to the interest charges around $10,000 a year. And this for a period of five years. It is estimated that when all bills are paid and the last dollar of indebtedness cleared, this adventure of socialism will have cost the town of Hampton in the neighborhood of $250,000.

What has the town to show for its investment? It has 21 miles of rusty rails, which may or may not sell for enough to pay for the cost of their removal. It has about the same mileage of copper wire. It has poes strung along the highways. It has one carbarn situated in a swamp. It has some dilapidated rolling stock and a battered snow plow. It has one franchise for an electric road, which it will sell cheap. Yes and it has a big lot of valuable experience now that it is too late.—Edgar Warren in Boston Transcript.

From Small Beginnings

James Hogg, The Ettrick Shepherd, a Great Scotch Poet

Robert Burns, the Scotch farmer, became a great poet and so likewise did James Hogg, the Scotch shepherd Neither of these men had advantages in the ordinary sense of the word. Both were in most humble circumstances, without any learning except that which they could pick up. The fact that such men could rise to fame shows the power that lies within the reach of almost any person who has real ability. Society neither makes nor unmakes any man, every man is his own maker.

James Hogg, the boy, sat among the Scotch hills and watched his sheep. The rounded, treeless hills rose before him. In the valleys the foliage looked green and cool. The sheep browsed contentedly and kept cautious eyes on the watchful dog. The boy had nothing to do—but he was busy. In his hands was a book from which he had been reading. He was looking at the sheep, but his mind was far away in Greece, where, so his book told him, other shepherds had watched their sheep and had entertained gods and goddesses. "Bright-eyed Apollo," god of poets, and Pan, the shepherds' god.

The boy's father and grandfather and great-grandfather had all been shepherds who had thought only of their sheep. From some mysterious source the boy, without going to school had gained a love of books. He had borrowed every book that any one would lend him. Like Abraham Lincoln in a time to come, James Hogg read because he had the keenest thirst for learning.

Year after year he read and dreamed and thought he would be completely happy, if he, too, could join the elect and write books. At 24 he sent one of the many poems he had written in imitation of those he had read to a magazine. It was printed and his delight knew no bounds. He kept on writing and at 31 issued a book of his own poems. After this he continued during the rest of his life, until his death at 65, to write books. At the same time he continued either to be a shepherd or a farmer, sometimes failing miserably and losing money and sometimes succeeding. The great Sir Walter Scott was one of his most kindly friends. While he was always a rough shepherd in his manly nature made him loved. Even in London, which he once visited, he was welcomed as a great literary figure. The shepherd of the hills had joined the company of the elect.

Sunday Morning Talk

HIS LOVE

And it came to pass, when the time was come that He should be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem. Luke 9: 2-1.

Christ loved the city of Jerusalem, and understanding that every step He took He went into the deepening shadows. Yet He went on like a conqueror. When He beheld the city He wept over it. Take this illustration as a picture. There is nothing finer in art. Take it as a sermon, there is nothing deeper in human pathos; take it as a revelation of God and no one can fail to realize His marvelous love for unworthy humanity even though He knew they would reject and crucify Him. How His heart must have grieved at the hardness of their hearts in spite of His great love and sacrifice for them. How He must grieve now when so many reject His great love.

Philosophers have speculated about Him and His two natures, theologians have called Him infinite, eternal and unchangeable, and the common people grow confused only to say that He is the One to whom they have given their souls and that they will gladly live for and die for the one who was divine enough to go to Jerusalem facing death for them, and human enough to have His eyes blinded with tears as He looked over the city. He knew all about the suffering and yet He went on; He knew "One of you shall betray me," and yet He went on; He knew about the sin of Peter, and yet He went on; He knew the scourging that would meet Him, but He never faltered.

If you could have seen His face, possibly it might have been accurately described by that expression in Isaiah, the 50th chapter and seventh verse, "For the Lord God will help me; therefore shall I not be confounded; therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed." Because of all that sin and the world had made Him suffer, and because of what I see in His face as He goes to Jerusalem I am against sin and against everything that was against Him.

"Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane, and saith unto the disciples, sit ye here while I go and pray yonder. And He took with Him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Then saith He unto them, my soul is exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death, tarry ye here and watch with me. And He went a little farther and fell on his face, and prayed saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me, nevertheless, not as I will, but as thou wilt." In this connection read Matthew 26th chapter and 39th verse, "And when they had sung an hymn they went out into the Mount of Olives."

How simple the words are, yet there had never been such a going out before. Let us follow Him as He goes, for this is Gethsemane, and this garden has stood for agony ever since. Why do you suppose He cried out in the garden? Was He not bearing the terrible weight of the sin of the world, your sin and my sin were a part of that great load. Will we willfully add to that suffering? After Christ has suffered so much for us how can we be so hard hearted and indifferent to such a great love so much greater than any earthly love? How can we continue in sin and add to His suffering by our ingratitude.

Because He was about to be branded as a sinner, treated as a sinner, put to death as a sinner, He cried aloud in anguish over the sin which we trifle with or even love. We feel that those who crucified Christ were terrible and they were, but are we not crucifying Him afresh every day of our lives by our own sin?

In Fox's "Book of Martyrs" there is a story of one of God's children who was put into a sack of venomous animals, and said as he suffered, "I can stand all this for Jesus." How much are we willing to stand for Christ? Did you hear the prayer of the Savior? It is not the kind that is offered by the average person. It was crushed out by His suffering. Have we ever offered such a prayer?

It is this part of the Christian experience many of us have not touched. Like Jacob at Jabbok's Ford when he said, "I will not let thee go except thou bless me." We say was God a Father. He permitted His Son to suffer as He did, and I answer yes. "Yes, Jesus believed it." Although He was full of agony it was "My Father," although there was not a soul in sympathy, He called God My Father.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Cultivating a Child's Mind

Mr. Editor: May I please explain a letter I permitted you to publish in your paper last week after I realized the high motives of the producers of a picture shown at the Palace theatre?

Certainly a parent should encourage anything that can overcome the present serious conditions which many believe are due to telling little children things or allowing them to be impressed with evil depicted on the screen.

May I also give a few words of Rev. Stafford Brooke, rector of St. James, London, England, in Queen Victoria's reign?

From his sermon on Child Life I formed the basis of my ideas that have so far proved successful whenever used.

The only truth to tell the little child before anyone else has a chance to talk to him, is, that he, himself, his soul, was created or made by God in heaven and brought by the angels.

His replies later on to those who scoff at him will surprise you.

Rev. Stafford Brooke, wrote: "In the directest opposition to the poetic instinct of Greek or Christian poetry and philosophy to the natural instincts of the human heart, to the teachings and acts of Christ to the revelation of God in childhood, is the dreadful explanation of the original sin."

As the child learns that in the natural order of things everything has an opposite in this life, having taught him that he is created divine, in God's image, tell him later that he is born into this world," with a defective nature that makes man differ from God, from angels or from brute; that which makes him, as far as we know, the only being in God's universe capable of progress, a defectiveness contemplated by God who wished for a being to rule over all in His universe, the history of which should be attainment of perfectness through struggle against defectiveness.

"Our first feeling should be reverence for the divine within our children, to help them to recognize that divine idea and to express it through life in noble form.

"It should be the basis of education.

"Children's minds are as ductile and impressionable as wax.

"The other basis of education that teaches them they are born of sin and the devil, has an irresistible tendency to degrade them. It only shows how near they are to God that they are not degraded more.

"What possible theory is more likely to make them false-running, unfavorable than that which calls them children of sin or the devil, and acts as if the one object were not to develop God within them, but to slash the devil out of them.

"And then having done this devilish work and turned the brightness and sweetness of childhood into gloom and bitterness, and having trodden into hardened earth the divine germs in his heart, what happens? 'You send him out into the world already a ruined character, taught by you to live without God in him, without God in the world, but to believe in and be suspicious of evil and not in good.

'Do not complain if he disappoints you if he turn out a cruel, dishonorable, miserable man.

"It is you who made him so, and God will have a dreadful reckoning with you.

My grandfather, a noted doctor said: "Cultivate a child's mind as a flower garden of thoughts. Allow no weeds to take root!"

Half Seeing is Half Living

If our eyes are not accurate the resulting strains injure health and happiness. Good health is a matter of good nerves.

If the nervous system is weakened by eyestrains, physical discomforts are noticeable. Headaches and indigestion are frequent.

Further than this the brain is affected. The power to concentrate and think quickly is lessened—irritable natures are almost invariably traced to poor nerves. Certainly no one can really enjoy life under such circumstances.

Eyestrains cause most nervous disorders. Even the smallest inaccuracy in vision weakens nervous force. Scientific investigations indicate that seven out of ten persons have faulty vision. This is positively unnecessary. Good glasses will correct poor eyesight and make eyestrain impossible.

Correct errors in vision before they injure your health. Form the habit of regularly consulting an Expert Optometrist. Save your eyes.

BELIEVE COLCHESTER YOUTH SHOT HIMSELF WHILE OUT HUNTING

Continued investigation by the state police of the shooting of William Kochan, a 14 year old Colchester youth, who has been a patient at the Backus hospital since Feb. 21, has brought the authorities to the conclusion that the young man shot himself while hunting.

About a week ago Kochan's condition apparently took a turn for the worse and the authorities were notified, resulting in an investigation to determine how he received the severe wound in the thigh which sent him to the hospital. The report in Colchester was that he had been shot while hunting in the woods with his brother, but Kochan would not tell at the time how he had been hurt.

Now the state police are convinced that the wound was accidentally self-inflicted.

Kochan's condition has improved very much this week and it is now confidently expected that he will recover.

Fined in Preston Court

Costick Uczeztich and Joseph Frunik both of Preston, were each fined $5 and costs when presented in the Preston town court Thursday night on charges of breach of the peace.

The two were arrested by the state police following a battle with clubs between the two, in which Uczeztich suffered a head wound, which required 15 stitches to close. The fight occurred on Feb. 15 at Preston.

ATTORNEYS CLASH OVER MOTION IN HULL SUIT

Judge Allyn L. Brown took the papers and reserved decision in the superior court short calendar session in New London Friday morning on a motion for transfer of jurisdiction in the $250,000 damage suit of Mrs. Ellen Brewster Hull of New London, widow of State's Attorney Hadlai A. Hull, against Sage-Allen & Company, Inc., Edward N. Allen, vice president of the corporation, and Miss Florence Kenefick, former store detective, all of Hartford.

Attorney Berry, counsel for the defendants, brought the motion and argued for it on the ground as Mrs. Hull was the widow of such a well known man as the late state attorney and because her counsel is Attorney Arthur B. Brown, who the lawyer had large influence with juries in this county, it would be impossible to find a jury that would be impartial.

Attorney Brown sharply resented the argument made by Attorney Berry, and argued that transfer of the trial to another county would put the defendant to unnecessary expense and that there was no reason to believe a fair trial of the case could not be had in this county where the suit is brought.

Mrs. Hull charges slander, false imprisonment, assault and battery, malicious prosecution and other counts. Here is a second suit brought by Mrs. Hull against Edward N. Allen and others and the same motion was argued for this case. Attorney Berry also argued a motion to amend a plea in abatement.

Judge Brown directed that two weeks be the time for filing more specific statements in the cases of Angus Park vs. James Graham; Angus Park vs. Edwin W. Higgins; Angus Park vs. Herbert M. Leroy; Angus Park vs. Charles Foster.

Attorney John F. Gallagher and Henry Cragan of Stonington were appraisers for the Braided Thread Corp., while Attorney Benjamin P. Hewitt of Mystic was confirmed as temporary receiver.

Allowance of $45 to be paid within three weeks was granted to Bertha Richardson to defend the divorce action brought against her by Frank H. Richardson, while $35 is to be paid her by Mr. Richardson at the time of trial.

Disclosure of defense within two weeks or judgment was granted in the case of Butler vs. Lamos.

Statutory continuance of three months was granted in the case of Lucas vs. Aztec Yarn Spinning Manufacturing company.

WILDCAT CAUGHT IN BOZRAH

In a stone trap set among the Bargytown ledges Burrel Pierce caught the wildcat pictured above. The animal was found dead in a figure-4 trap. It weighed 8 pounds and measured 28 inches from back of the ears to the root of the tail.

In the picture William Walden, a famous hunter of the Gardner lake district of Salem who is well known by the name of "Dummy" Walden, is shown holding the cat with his dog taking a great interest in the capture.

GRANGE WOMEN WON IN ENTERTAINMENT CONTEST

The meeting this week of Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, reached a high tide in the entertainment line when the women of the grange put on their entertainment in competition with what the men did two weeks ago. Steiner hall was filled with the attendance of 170, which included visitors from Groton, Pachaug, Bozrah, Preston City, Franklin, Ekonk, and Ayer, Mass.

Mrs. Lenny Whitham of Groton, state lecturer, Miss Bennett of Norwich Town and Miss Alice Bishop of Bozrah were the judges. Their decision was that the contest was so close that the points stood 96 for the women and 95 for the men, largely because of double credits given the men in two particulars of the scale of marking.

The women's entertainment was given completely in costume under the direction of Mrs. Katharine Smith, one particular group number that won especial praise being a minuet given in full costume of the period.

The programme began with the opening address by Mrs. Smith, which was impressively given, and was followed by the solo, America The Beautiful, by Mrs. Ida Richardson. Tableaux entitled "Patriotic Scenes, Old and New," were carried out as follows: Uncle Sam, Miss Lillie Wolfe; Spirit of '76, Mrs. Mary Austin, Mrs. Pukallus; Libert, Miss Belle Rathbone; Barbara Fritchie, Mrs. Edward Cook; Spirit of 1917—Red Cross nurse, Mrs. Susie Lillibridge, Mrs. Adelle Spalding; Salvation Army lassie, Mrs. Ivy O. Peckham; soldier, Mrs. Ora Spencer; sailor, Mrs. Vera Sterry; Preparedness, by farmerettes, Mrs. Vera Sterry, Mrs. Irene Burns, Mrs. John Lavalle; Spirit of 1926, Mrs. Wrigley. The pianist for the tableaux was Miss Nellie Howie and the reader Mrs. Fred G. Bliss.

The programme continued with the following numbers: Recitation, "The Minuet" Mrs. Anna Woods; colonial dance, "The Minuet", ladies, Mrs. E. Moray, Miss H. Cruthers, Mrs. F. Hiscine, Mrs. Myra Waters, gentlemen, Mrs. L. Mitchell, Miss F. Brown, Miss B. Rogers, Mrs. D. Rogers; recitation, "The Deacons' Masterpiece", Mrs. Fred G. Bliss, with encore; tableau, "Community Spirit", Mrs. Katherine Smith, and "The Star Spangled Banner." Mrs. John LaValle, Mrs. Charlotte Powell, Mrs. Vera Sterry, Mrs. Irene Burns, Mrs. Anna Woods, Soloist, Mrs. Ida E. Richardson.

The programme concluded with a novel motion song illustrating community spirit.

Refreshments consisting of fruit cocktail, cake with whipped cream, cookies, with flag favors concluded one of the finest entertainment evenings the grange has enjoyed.

The refreshments were served by the feast committee, Mrs. Jennie M. Davis, Mrs. Ethel Rogers, Mrs. Alice Clark and Harry L. Clark.

OIL AND EDUCATION ARE STIMULANTS TO NAVAJOS

SAN JUAN INDIAN AGENCY, Ariz., March 26 (AP)—Oil and education are leaving the stamp of their influence on the Navajo Indians.

Wealth from the one is enabling them to "buy" civilization, and education teaches desires. Soon, it is to be expected, the Navajos will be as affluent as the Osages in Oklahoma.

The Indian agency has been kept busy providing schools for the brown-skinned Navajo youngsters. A. H. Kneale, superintendent of the reservation, reports the San Juan school can-vas was doubled in the past year, and 650 children now are taught the ways of the white man. The San Juan schools teach only six grades. Three hundred and fifty higher students are scattered in Indian institutions throughout the west.

Most of the first grades have never been out of sight of their own "hogans." These are family dwelling places built by piling mud on conical frameworks of poles. They have never seen shoes nor hats, never eaten at a table, nor ever seen a stove, furniture, newspaper or chair. Civilization and American patriotism as well as the English language and arithmetic are being taught them.

"The children have never eaten what a civilized person would call a meal," Mr. Kneale said. "They have thrived on beef and horse meat, goats' milk and corn cakes served on dirt floors of the 'hogans.' They do not know what sanitation and hygiene is, and they have not seen the simplest tools that make civilized people comfortable. But they learn quickly. In addition to the three Rs we teach the girls to cook, sew and keep house and the boys carpentry, farming and the manual arts."

The Navajos have a natural aptitude for agriculture and stock raising. Far back in history they were not famous as warriors but as tillers of the soil. Today they are shepherds, shepherds of 170,000 individually owned sheep. The name Navajo was given by the Spaniards and means "people of large fields."

Mr. Kneale said the adults were quickly taking up the civilization the new generation takes home from school. Modern machinery is being used for farming and the "hogans" are being transformed into houses.

The oil which now is pouring wealth into the laps of the Navajos was discovered four years ago, but inaccessibility prevented rapid development. Thirty-six wells have since been drilled, most of them good producers. A small pipeline has been completed to Farmington, N. M. A larger pipeline is projected. The Navajos receive a royalty of 12 and one half per cent.

The Navajos, however, although one of the least civilized of the tribes never has had to be suported by the government. The San Juan is one of six Navajo superintendencies having a total population of 35,000. In addition to sheep, the Indians have cattle, goats and ponies. A few of the ponies are used as beasts of burden, many are slaughtered for food, but the most have no use. They simply cluttee up the landscape and eat the reservation grass.

Every Navajo woman is a weaver and a girl learns the art as soon as she is able to walk. Rugs valued at $100,000 are sold from the San Juan reservation yearly. Navajo pottery and baskets add to the income now being swelled by oil.

DEFENDS ENGLISH STAGE AS SERIOUS PROFESSION

LONDON, March 26 (AP)—When John Beckett, laborite member of commons, referred to the bejewelled peeresses at the opening of parliament as a vulgar, garish mob of underdressed women, and compared them to chorus girls, he started something in the theatrical world.

These days one may say almost anything he likes about the nobility and escape unscathed, but the land of Shakespeare resents onslaughts on the stage. Of course, Mr. Beckett, who has achieved fame by wearing a huge sombrero which has perhaps the widest brim in the country, was not attacking the stage. He was after the nobility. But indirectly he hit the stage hard enough to get a sharp reaction.

"It seems an amazing thing, and a wicked thing, that frequently when people have something particularly nasty to say about somebody they compare their victim to theatrical people," declares Miss Fay Compton. "In this country the stage is a serious profession, and our chorusses are filled with well-bred, highly educated girls who are working hard and honestly to make careers."

Miss Compton is one of the leading actresses in England and is one of the most beautiful women on the stage today. She is best known for her work in Shakespearean roles and other "straight drama."

Miss Campton also has served her time in musical comedy, and there is not much she does not know about chorus girls.

"Garish and vulgar!" repeated Miss Compton. "Why, our chorus girls haven't the money to be garish and vulgar even if they were inclined that way, which they aren't. They are hardworking girls with small pay and most of them can't afford to dress better than I am dressed now."

Miss Campton glanced down deprecatingly at an exceedingly modest outfit of very ordinary material which she was wearing. She was costumed for the impersonation of a girl of the East End.

"The great majority of our chorus girls have no inclination to vulgarity for the simple reason that they come from good families and are well bred," continued Miss Compton.

"We take the stage very seriously. Ambitious girls make the chorus merely a means to the end. They must start somewhere in the profession, and the chorus is the logical place for those intending to act in musical plays. The majority of our girls have no time to think about 'fine' clothes. They have no time to display them even if they had them. They work from morning until midnight. When they are not on the stage, they are rehearsing and taking lessons in singing and dancing. They are a very earnest lot.

"So far as our choruses being vulgar and garish on the stage, that is equally untrue. Reputable producers don't stage vulgar and garish scenes in this country."

Apropos of the general discussion Miss Compton referred to the morals of the stage, although Mr. Beckett had made no reference to the moral aspect.

"Immorality is no more prevalent on the stage than it is in any other section of the community," she declared, and added with a little smile:

"I believe you refer to it as moral turpitude in America."

"If you wish to learn just how high minded and straight our chorus girls are you should visit The Theater Girl's club which my mother runs in Soho," Miss Compton said. (Mrs. Edward Compton, the mother, also has been a noted actress.) "There are hundreds of chorus girls there—most of them well-bred, and all of them upright, hardworking girls who are living on tiny incomes. And never a complaint because they are obliged by the rules to be in at eleven o'clock every night, or as soon after that as their theatrical engagements permit. Why anybody, least of all a labor leader, should refer to them in disparaging terms is beyond comprehension."

Miss Compton is at present playing the title role in J. M. Barrie's "Mary Rose" at the Haymarket. Between shows she is acting for the Gaumont film company, but she does not like appearing on the films. She prefers the "legitimate" stage and her audience.

PROSPECTORS AFTER GOLD DISAPPEAR

DENVER, March 26 (AP)—The "Klondsin Jacks," the prospectors after gold are passing. Hardly a week now goes by but word comes down that another has been found dead in a rotting cabin in the "ghost cities" that dot the high country of Colorado and the mining west.

The towns, many of them, are dying too. Once well worn streets are grass grown, and pack rats haunt the buildings.

Decay—a sort of dry rot—has overtaken them. Doors creak mournfully in the breezes or grumble at a mountain bale; sunshine and rain pour alike through gaping holes in roofs and the skeletons of houses are outlined through walls bared by storms.

The name "ghosts cities," is apt, descriptive in the direct way of the names of the old camps; Crested Butte, Bald Mountain and Crazy Woman ranch were all named Indian fashion for obvious reasons. Down in the southern part of Colorado, there is even a Cannibal plateau, so called because a guide named Parker charged parties of hunters and tourists high rates and then ate them. The graves of some of his victims may be seen today.

The names now linger in memory, but most of the bonanza mines are flooded or caved in. Scientific methods have supplanted the old time prospector and Colorado is talking about a new kind of mining boom in deep ores.

President Grant and his daughter visited Central City and the residents paved the sidewalk from the street to the old Teller House with gold. The Teller House, a four story building, is one of the few things in the town that attempts to keep up an air of prosperity. A few travelers stop there and some mining men make it their home.

Most of the other buildings are deserted. Saloon signs hang over the streets and are legible. In one of the dance halls the proprietors did not bother to remove a grand piano and it has settled with the caving floor. Bars are covered with years of dust.

Black Hawk, near Central City, is in the same plight. Some old tunnels have been opened, a few people work them but vacant houses stand row on row. The two towns were the center of the Colorado mining boom which for years held the nation's interest.

Many of the towns are virtually without inhabitants except for one or two old prospectors who still dream that the boom days will return. Nevadaville has two men left; American City about the same number. A person can wander through Owl, Tincup, Mound City and Aultman for days at a time without seeing a face.

Nevadaville had the first Masonic lodge charter in Colorado and the third in Kansas territory, which then embraced this state. The lodge still exists and men travel by hurro, in automobiles on afoot long distances to attend regular meetings. Aultman was called the richest town in the world, although it lost the title to several places in the Chilean Andes.

Gunnison, Colo., on the western slope, started as a mining town. It has become the center of a rich ranch and livestock region. Ouray, the most famous gold camp in the San Juan district in southwestern Colorado is still existent but only as a country town. Tom Walsh discovered the Camp Bird mine outside Ouray and sold it to British interests for millions of dollars. The late Senator Samuel D. Nicholson, rose to wealth in the San Juan district by ownership of the Ute and Ulay properties. Silverton, Telluride and Lake City were other leaders in the district which embraced a population of more than 25,000.

The towns once spelled romance in capital letters to a large part of the nation. They were built with Indian labor and money, the materials often being hauled for miles over treacherous mountain trails. Most of these were too inaccessible to make railroad the buildings and shipping the lumber out practical. So they are left to ruin.

DEPRIVED OF RIGHTS OF ITALIAN CITIZENSHIP

ROME, March 26.—(AP)—King Victor Emmanuel signed a decree today inflicting the loss of all rights of Italian citizenship and confiscation of his property on Vincenzo Vacirca, an Italian resident of New York. The decree also provides for the forfeiture of citizenship for two years, and seizure of his property, for Angelo Tonello, a resident of Lugano, Switzerland.

Vacirca, the decree says, carried on in the United States "a systematic and ignoble blackening of Italy."

STUDENT VOTE IS WORRYING POLITICIANS OF JAPAN

TOKYO, March 26 (AP)—How Japanese students will vote, now that a law is effective giving them suffrage, is worrying the politicians. There are many thousand students past 25, the voting age under the new statute.

The majority of the students are said to be democratically, if not radically inclined and, if a Students' party should be organized, the "old-line" leaders are unable to predict what the outcome might be.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

CREATE GAS, SOURNESS AND PAIN HOW TO TREAT

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificia digestents are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

AMERICAN RACEHORSE WINS ENGLISH STEEPLECHASE CLASSIC AT AINTREE

AINTREE, England, March 26.—(AP)—Jack Horner, American-owned racehorse, won the classic English steeplechasing plum—The Grand National this afternoon, covering the famous Aintree course of four and a half miles, with its hazardous hedges, in leaderless style. Four lengths behind was another American-owned horse—Bright's Boy, who came in third. Old Tay Bridge, owned by Mrs. W. H Dixon, repeated last year's performance, being first over the last fence but was beaten on the flat toward the finish point, and came in second.

Jack Horner's time was nine minutes, 36 seconds, only one and 3-5ths more than the Grand National record of 1904.

"Jack Horner could have gone around again. It was like an armchair ride." These were the words of the Scottish Jockey Watkinson, who rode the winner. The owner C. Schwartz, whose purchase of Jack Horner for 4,000 guineas a few months ago was considered a foolhardy speculation by many English racing enthusiasts, announced: "All the family and all my friends were 'on' the winner." This is presumed to mean that there were big winnings, for Jack Horner was an outsider, with betting 25 to 1.

As for the thousands of others who ventured their shillings and pounds on the Grand National, most of them contributed to the coffers of the bookmakers, for the favorites fell early and often. Silvo, owned by W. H. Midwood, one of the most fancied entries, failed to take the first fence, and Mrs. Partridge's Sprig, the favorite, could not clear the fourth.

The Aintree classic lacked some of its usual thrills of injured horses and riders who often litter the course in the vicinity of difficult jumps. One horse, however, broke its neck, and five jockeys had to be taken to the hospital with minor injuries. Less than half of the thirty starters finished the course.

The disappointments of the day for the huge cosmopolitan crowds gathered here were the usual one of the weather, which was dull and rainy, and the unusual one of the absence of the Prince of Wales from the big race. This absence was accounted for by a severe earache and strict orders by the doctor to remain indoors. The Duke of York also stayed in London on the doctor's advice, because he is recuperating from a recent attack of influenza.

Big races in England never fail to develop stories of fortunes made by venturing a few shillings, and tonight it is a story of a youth of Llanelly, Wales, who has made a double winning of £2,600 Sterlings, by staking a pound note on two outsiders—King of Dubs, a 100 to be shot, which won the Lincoln handicap on Wednesday, and Jack Horner for today.

It is estimated that 250,000 persons saw the Schwartz horse win the classic on the first occasion of the Schwartz colors appearing on an English racecourse.

Mr. Schwartz said tonight that he bought Jack Horner for 4,000 Guineas with a stipulation that he was to pay 2,000 more if the horse won the Grand National.

"It has been the ambition of my life win the Grand National," he added, "and, naturally I am delighted at my success. English racing circles will see more of us in the future."

Schwartz is leaving for the United States on Tuesday, but will return to England after a few weeks.

TRAINING CAMP DEVELOPMENTS SHOW THAT GIANTS WILL BE IN PENNANT RACE

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Developments at the training camps this spring have given the National league pennant race a new aspect highly favorable to the New York Giants.

The metropolitan outfit, in sharp contrast to the champion Pittsburgh Pirates, has broken camp at Sarasota, Fla., after a successful campaign of preparation which finds many observers optimistic of their chances. The Pirates, on the other hand, have been hit by one bad "break" after another.

Max Carey, one of the mainsprings in the Pittsburgh offense, may not be able to start the season as a result of illness. Traynor and Moore have also been out of the line-up temporarily, while Grantham has been ill of spring. Glenn Wright recently joined the cripples, completing the infield casualty list.

Manager McGraw has every reason to be optimistic. He pronounces his team one of the strongest New York ever entered in a National league race. Wire Breaker whips in a favorable comment. He declares the club "a wonder that should win."

Other critics point to great pitching, powerful hitting and brilliant fielding as indicating that the Giants will get away to a good start, while the Pirates, crippled by injuries and illness, appear likely to start under severe handicaps. This situation is the reverse of that in 1925, when the Giants were hard hit by mishaps.

"We have picked up a real find in our new outfielder Travis," says McGraw. "Jackson will hit, and he has speed and ambition. The rest of the team is all set. The pitching is fine, in fact better than in many seasons. All the doubts carried over from last season have disappeared, and we leave Sarasota with excellent prospects."

McGraw's mound corps stands out this year, particularly with Hugh McQuillan back in form and Jimmy Ring added to a staff which already included stars in Greenfield Scott, Fitzsimmons, Nehf and Virgil Barnes. Kelly's return to first base has strengthened the infield, while Jackson and Cohen have apparently recovered from injuries which put them on the bench last year.

"If the Giants are not shot to pieces by injuries I can't see how they will be beaten this year," says one critic. "The regular full team was intact in only 29 games while the Pirates had their regular line-up on the field in 76 contests. Frisch was out 40 games, Jackson 30 and Lindstrom 60. Meuse, and Young were each absent in 20. Mike McQuillan was out the entire season.

YALE BASEBALL LEADER THREATENED WITH ILLNESS

NEW HAVEN, March 26.—(AP)—Captain Dan Lindley of the Yale baseball team, is threatened with appendicitis and has gone to his home in Englewood, N. J. It is believed, however that he will return to college next week, in time for the southern trip with the team during the Easter vacation.

Rain and snow kept the team off the diamond today but Coach Joe Wood said the results of the first week of outdoor practice had been satisfactory.

LACOSTE'S ILLNESS WILL KEEP HIM OUT OF TENNIS

PARIS, March 26.—(AP)—Rene Lacoste, who conquered William T. Tilden and Vincent Richards in recent indoor tennis matches in New York, may be lost to French tennis for the entire season of 1926. A cold, which settled in his lungs shortly after his brilliant victories in America. is degenerating into chronic bronchitis and it is feared that Jean Borotra, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon will have to bear the full brunt of the Davis cup campaign.

LaCoste has been unable to enter the Paris eastern covered courts tournament, but the Tuileurn French tennis ace remains optimistic and today he expressed the belief that he would be in condition to play in the French championships beginning May 28.

LaCoste, who never had much weight to lose and is always trained to the minute, is now fifteen pounds below his normal playing weight and faces a big job of building up. With him out of the Davis cup team, French tennis enthusiasts fear that France will find much difficulty in reaching the challenge round.

STRIBLING PLANS ACTIVE PUGILISTIC CAMPAIGN

NEW YORK, March 26—(AP)—Young Stribling, Georgia's agile and rugged fighter, has decided upon a vigorous campaign in both light heavyweight and heavyweight ranks.

Fresh from his victory last night over Jimmy Slattery, Stribling today placed himself among the challengers for Paul Berlenbach's 175-pound crown while negotiations also went forward to match the Georgian with Gene Tunney, Dempsey's prospective 1926 opponent.

So far as a title bout with Berlenbach is concerned, Stribling must wait until Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., has had another crack at Paul's championship, the state athletic commission decided today. On behalf of his son, "Pa" Stribling offered to post a $2,500 forfeit with his challenge to Berlenbach but the commission refused this and informed him that Delaney had first call.

There is some prospect that Tunney and Stribling will meet at Madison Square Garden in May but the likelihood is that Promoter Tex Rickard will prefer to stage this attraction in an outdoor arena. Both "Pa" Stribling and Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager, however, expressed willingness to accept terms for an indoor bout.

JOCKEY PULLS WILD WEST HERO STUNT AT TIJUANA

NEW YORK, March 26.—(AP)—Monty Edwards today is the hero of the jockeys at the Tijuana race track. In the sixth today Jockey Prendergrass' saddle girth snapped in the stretch and Edwards, alongside on Gray Rock, pulled up to the hapless rider and threw his arm about his shoulders, the horses crossing the line as one.

Great Luck defeated Kingman and Brother John in the Tijuana feature of a mile and 70 yards. The time was 1:43 1-5.

Fie Under Game through to victory in the feature at Tampa downs in sloppy going. Clearview and Norseland followed in the mile event which was covered in 1:44. Longwood's course was without feature of note.

CHILL WEATHER HAMPERS BASEBALL EXHIBITION GAMES

CHICAGO, March 26. — (AP) — Two southpaws and football weather jolted the Chicago White Sox today and brought spice to a dull day for most of the major league ball clubs. The Hose lost a hot game to the Dallas team of the Texas league, 3 to 2.

The Collins crew collected seven scattered hits, against five for Dallas, but were stumped in the pinches by the off-side deliveries of Shuman and Darrough. Having scored once in the first inning, Dallas put the title away in the fourth by converting three singles off Thurston into two tallies.

The St. Louis Browns came near suffering the same fate at Palmetto, Fla., and finally compromised on a 5-5 tie with the Buffalo International-ale. Darkness stopped hostilities with the count tied at the end of the 14th inning.

The St. Louis Cardinals ran in 11 tallies on 15 hits at Waco, Texas, in turn granting the locals six runs on ten hits and two bobbles. The Chicago Cubs did about the same thing in San Francisco, winning from the Seals of the Pacific Coast league, 9 to 6, connecting 15 hits while their adversaries made a dozen. Detroit in condition to play in the French championships beginning May 28.

LaCoste, who never had much weight to lose and is always trained to the minute, is now fifteen pounds below his normal playing weight and faces a big job of building up. With him out of the Davis cup team, French tennis enthusiasts fear that France will find much difficulty in reaching the challenge round.

RACINE BOWLER MAKES A PERFECT 300 SCORE

TOLEDO, Ohio, March 26.—(AP)—The feat that bowlers in the International circuit have been striving to accomplish for years—that of a perfect score—was accomplished here today in the American Bowling Congress tournament by Charles Reinle of Racine, Wis.

Bowling in the doubles with R. Riegel on one of the early squads Reinle laid 12 perfect pocket hits down the runways for the 300 score and that it is possible for a bowler to make in one game.

His reward will be a gold medal donated by the A. B. C. and addition he stands in line for the highest doubles game of the tournament, 825 made possible by a 225 and his perfect game. The 300 is an A. B. C. record for all time, according to congress officials. The former mark was 297.

The pair collected 1,175 for their three games and went into eighth place in the standings, with games of 369, 426 and 380.

Bowling on only the late afternoon shifts, J. Trombetta and L. Huebner of Chicago collected games of 461, 452 and 387 for an even 1300, which is 44 points under the leaders, for second place.

Higher Standards For Hoff.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 26.—(AP)—Charley Hoff's propensity for unusual heights in vaulting necessitated construction of a special set of elongated pole vault standards for the Norwegian champion's visit at Washington University field house tomorrow night.

Measurement of the regular equipment revealed that the standards could be raised no higher than 13 feet six inches. An additional foot was added to the standard rack.

OXFORD-CAMBRIDGE ROWING CLASSIC TAKES PLACE ON THE THAMES TODAY

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, March 26—(AP)—For the seventy-eighth revival of their classic annual eight-oared race, the crews of Oxford and Cambridge universities will take to the Thames shortly after noon tomorrow.

Both crews have suffered from lack of experienced material and have been further weakened by sickness and by the handicap of bad weather in the training season, but they appear to be so evenly matched that an exciting race is promised for the thousands who will line the bending course of the river.

The weather man tonight said the prospects are that the eights will be favored with mild weather, and that there should be little wind to add to the difficulties of the four and a quarter mile course from Putney to Mortlake.

Both shells started this year with few veterans, and rough, cold weather made training extremely difficult. At the last moment measles has removed J. C. H. Booth from the Cambridge boat, and he has been replaced at No. 4 by R. T. B. Cressy, a substitute.

In their practice spins this morning both crews displayed much nervousness, and their trials were comforting to the backers of neither camp. Number five of the Oxford shell, H. B. A. Edwards, "caught a crab" and threw all of his mates out of line. Cambridge appeared no better. The light blues shipped a lot of water before they got moving, and but for calm water would have been in a fair way to being swamped.

The Cambridge crew will try a new stimulant for the big race. Just before the start each man will be fed two teaspoonfuls of brown sugar. Rowing experts explain that this is a fine stimulant and that it will be most effective at the critical stages of the race.

Thousands of old varsity "blues" and sports followers who have never seen a university but enjoy a good race will be unable to see the struggle this year, because tide conditions make it necessary to begin the race shortly after 12 o'clock, not giving city workers time to get from their offices to the course.

Oxford has won 40 of the varsity classics and Cambridge 36, the race of 1877 being a dead heat. Cambridge won on easy victory last year when the Oxford shell was swamped in rough water.

Mrs. Reddy Doesn't Believe Reddy

The truth some folk just won't receive.
Because, forsooth, they can't believe.
—Old Mother Nature.

It really is that way sometimes. Things are so difficult to believe that people simply won't believe them. Perhaps you know how that is. You may want to believe, but the thing you want to believe seems so impossible, that you can't believe. Reddy Fox found it that way with Mrs. Reddy when he told her what he had seen over in the Green Forest.

It had not taken Reddy very long to get Bowser the Hound so puzzled that he finally gave up and went home to Farmer Brown's. You see, Reddy had gone straight to the Laughing Brook, run for some distance in the water, jumped to the top of an old stump on the bank of the Laughing Brook and from there jumped as far as he could. In this way he had broken his trail. Bowser simply could not find that trail again.

Then Reddy had hurried as fast as his legs could take him straight back to the big hemlock tree where he had seen the stranger. But Gray Fox, the stranger, was no longer there. Prickly Porky was still up in the tree. He paid no attention to Reddy, so Reddy could find out nothing from him. After a while he discovered the scent of Gray Fox, so he knew that he had come down out of the tree. But the scent was so old by this time that Reddy decided it was not worth while to try to follow it. Instead he hurried home to tell Mrs. Reddy.

"My, dear, my dear, I have the strangest news in the world for you," said Reddy Fox to Mrs. Reddy.

"What is it?" asked Mrs. Reddy.

"We have a cousin over in the Green Forest," said Reddy.

Mrs. Reddy sniffed. "Huh. Is that your news?" said she. "I knew that long ago. Everybody knows it. It's the talk of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows."

"But this cousin wears a gray coat," continued Reddy not at all disturbed. "He wears a gray coat with red trimmings."

Mrs. Reddy began to look interested. "It can't be as handsome as our coats," said she, turning up her nose.

"My dear my dear, I have the strangest news in the world for you"

"No," said Reddy, "it isn't. But this is the real news. This cousin of ours climbs trees."

Mrs. Reddy turned and looked very hard at Reddy. "I don't believe it," she declared. "I don't believe a word of it."

"It's true, just the same," cried Reddy. "I don't care whether you believe it or not, it's true. I saw him myself way up in the big hemlock tree."

Mrs. Reddy sniffed again. "That story may go with some folks, but it won't go with me," said she. "I don't know what is the matter with your eyes, but something's wrong with them. You needn't tell me that there is any Fox that climbs trees. Of course, you and I jump up in a tree sometimes, but that isn't climbing."

"This fellow was way up high," persisted Reddy. "Bowser the Hound was at the bottom of the tree barking at him."

"Probably it was Bobby Coon up there," retorted Mrs. Reddy. "I've got to see him climb a tree before I'll believe any such story as that."

CASES ON TRIAL FRIDAY IN THE THIRD DIST. COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 26—The third District court session Friday, Judge Oliver H. Williams on the bench, occupied the entire morning. Judge Williams called the following:

Criminal Docket

State, Amos L. Kenyon, director of public aid of the town of Hopkinton, complainant vs. Richard Waters. Continued two weeks.

State, Thomas E. Brown, chief of police of Westerly, complainant, vs. Angelo Tursno Continued two weeks.

State Frank H Brown, chief of police of Hopkinton, complainant, vs. Harry H. Lanman. Continued two weeks.

State Thomas E Brown vs. James Bruno. Marked ready.

Civil Docket

New writ entered—Westerly Furniture company vs. Catherine Healey. Entered by Mr. Ferguson and if unanswered during day, continued two weeks.

Clifton D. Hall vs. Angelo Pucci. Continued one week.

Richard J. Lord vs. Tefft's Motor Sales. Continued one week.

Trial Calendar

State Thomas E. Brown, complainant vs. Cristine Gradolini. It was alleged that March 21st the accused had assaulted James Rosso. Frank Capazzano was called as interpreter and the case proceeded but a short time, when Judge Williams stated that although the interpreter did the best he could, he did not want a trial of the accused under these circumstances so he had the case marked passed until later in the day.

Charles Ruisi was later sworn in as court interpreter. Cristine Gradolini told the court that, in going down stairs and going to the defense of her husband she struck James Rosso. She said that she had not procured counsel and a plea of not guilty was entered for her and the case continued to April 3rd and was released on her personal recognizance in $500 bail, without surety. Witnesses summoned in the case were ordered to report at that time without further notice.

The first case tried was the assault complaint, Thomas E. Brown vs. James Bruno. Patrolman Fred Ferraro, testified that he visited the home of Mary Gencarella, 87 Pierce street, where he was called March 14th, when a fight is reported to have taken place there. Although objecting Attorney Ledwidge stated that the complaining witness and wife might appear before the judge. Judge Williams ruled that the defendant have his position inside the rail and James Bruno took his seat.

James DeBartelo, 14 Pond street, was called as a witness by Solicitor Ferguson and the witness claimed not to understand English but proceeded to give his evidence when Charles Ruisi became interpreter. He testified that in the house of Angelo Gencarella between 9 and 10 o'clock, March 14th he was sitting under the table and had a tooth "knocked" out by James Bruno. He said that the fight started when he sought to play the Italian finger game and follows as the assault called the police by telephone. Chief of Police Brown testified that he saw Bruno at the Westerly police station where he was brought and reported him to have said that he hit DeBartelo because of an old grudge.

James Bruno, the defendant, living at 50 Oak street, told the court that he was invited to the home of his sister, Mrs. Gencarella, to supper and while there DeBartelo and a companion started and was offensive. Intoxicated conduct was observed by him. He said that as he rose to strike, but he hit him first. Cross examined by Ferguson he said that others in the party were Romeo Serrito, a cousin, Rose Gencarella, Frank Esposito, Charles Bruno, Louis Gencarella and Louis Juliano, Marvin Dortch, a colored man, called at the time of the fight. Other witnesses testifying were Mary Gencarella and Angelo Gencarella, husband and wife of 87 Pierce street and Officer Fred Ferraro. James DeBartelo and Chief Brown were called in rebuttal.

Without argument, Attorney Ledwidge claimed the defendant justified and moved for acquital. Judge Williams found the state had sustained its case and adjudged James Bruno guilty, imposed a fine of $50 and costs. Attorney Ledwidge claimed an appeal and offered Frank Capazzano as surety.

The last case tried was that of State, William L. Kay, deputy chief of police of the town of Hopkinton, vs. Georgietta Jordan and Albert Jordan of Moosup town of Hopkinton. The complaint related that between January 3 and March 26th the defendant, mother and father of minor children, Delbert, Lucy and Roy, neglected to send their children to public school. Both defendants on the stand testified that their feelings were hurt when the school teacher had said that the children were dirty, ragged and lousy. The father testified that he was a wool chopper and the mother worked but on short time and it was difficult to clothe the children.

Attorney Williams, on the defendants' promise to do all in their power to keep their children in school, had the case continued two weeks for sentence and said that he would personally visit them in their homes, also take the matter up with the school committee of the town of Hopkinton.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Rhode Island State Highway association in Greenville, R. I. on the subject of "Cost-keeping in Highway Construction" Highway Engineer A. L. Leon of Westerley, among other things stated that towns could not be too accurate in system of costs for road builders are the ones upon whom the criticism falls and the only glory they can reap is in the satisfying of themselves that they are on the right track and then tell the taxpayers just what and how their money has been spent and thereby hope for larger appropriations and he predicted that we will come scones of later. In Westerly he said that previous to 1923 the appropriation for highways had never been over $65,000. They started increasing to $70,000, then $100,000, and in the past year $120,000. He said that building standard penetration roads of native stone with hand labor for excavation and spreading stone costs had ranged from $2.06 maximum to $3.04 per square yard minimum and that hauling stone cost $1.953 per ton to $1.34 for a hauling distance of 6 1-2 miles or thirteen miles round trip. A three hour discussion followed the reading of the paper.

In attendance at the thirty-second annual state conference of Rhode Island Daughters of the American Revolution Friday in Providence from Phebe Green Ward chapter of Westerly were the regent, Mrs. Carrie G. IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Several small fires were the principal happenings in Norwich 50 years ago this week. Following the disastrous fire of the week previous, which destroyed the almshouse with a toll of 14 lives, the selectmen hired a house not far from the site of the old almshouse and were preparing it for the accomodation of the town's poor. Interesting extracts taken from the files of the Bulletin of March 1876 are as follows:

Monday, March 29, 1876—The selectmen have hired a house owned by W. W. Colt, not far from the site of the old almshouse, which they are preparing for the town's poor. It will be ready in a few days when the latter will be moved there from the police station.

It was reported in town yesterday that William Adams who broke into John Clark's hat store two years ago, and was sent to jail for some months, shot himself Saturday in Colchester, while under arrest for a burglary in that place.

There is a strong feeling of opposition to the appointment of Mr. Stoughton as minister to England. It is generally believed that he is the person who makes the bitters and altogether too valuable a man to leave the country.

Tuesday, March 21, 1876—A few minutes after 9 o'clock last evening fire was discovered in a barrel full of rubbish in the jewelry store of A. Plaut on Main street, near Market. An alarm was struck from box 16 but the fire was put out by the firemen throwing the burning stuff into the street. The damage was slight.

Wednesday, March, 22, 1876—The seventh anniversary of Wauregan lodge, No 6. Knights of Pythias, was celebrated in their lodge room last evening. A number of knights from other places were guests of Wauregan lodge The event was a very pleasant one and its occurrence, we hope, will find the lodge in as prosperous condition as now.

The violent storm of Monday night did comparatively little damage in the city though a number of trees were blown down one on Manning street, breaking the fire telegraph. The roads were badly washed and the streams much swollen. The wind blew at a velocity of 55 miles an hour and the rainfall was very great.

Someone who thought the roof of the Second Congregational church was on fire raised an alarm yesterday morning. Box 32 was struck when it was found that the smoke came from the chimney.

Thursday, March 23, 1876—Early yesterday morning the interior of the hat store of Charles Menck, on Franklin square was found to be on fire, out giving an alarm Officers Plunkett, Sullivan and McCarthy entered the place and succeeded in putting out the fire. They deserve credit for their cool action.

The alarm from box 31 last night was caused by the burning of the barn of the Hon. Jeremiah Halsey, near East Broad street, which was entirely destroyed. The first was set by an incendiary who was heard about the place shortly before it broke out.

Locrenia gave a performance in Breed hall last evening which was well received by the audience. Mr. Eb Parker drew the gold watch. Today there will be matinee and evening performances

The Union forest, which includes some state land in Stafford as well as more than 600 acres in the town of Union, has been renamed Nipmuck forest. SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
In The Comparative

Jim McLean was the village Smith;
Little the cash that he started with,
The forge he used and the coal that fed it
The shoes and nails obtained on credit;
But Jim said "Reckon I'll worry through
For all the work that I get to do
I aim to do—an' that ain't no bluff—
A leetle better than 'Good enough!' "

Now Jim was not of the oily style
That's always wearing a beaming smile.
Some people called him "a mite too pert"
And Jim, at seasons, was brusk and curt;
But his patrons stuck, and the new ones came
They said "He's cocky, but just the same
The jobs that he does are staunch and tough.
A leetle better than 'Good enough.' "

The village now is a rousing town
Which grew and won to its high renown
Because of the factory spreading out
A hundred acres, or thereabout.
And the tools and articles fashioned there
Have made Jim into a millionaire.
For Jim's jobs are—with no bunk or guff—
A leetle better than "Good enough!"

That "Leetle better" is such a lot!
In any business, no matter what.
For "Good enough" be it understood,
Is seldom enough and rarely Good.
The bridge or the house or the tool you make
Is Good enough—till it comes to break
And then you wish you had wrought your stuff
A leetle better than "Good enough!"

A Venture in Poultry

My wife and I were getting old, and tired of the farm,
So thought a life less strenuous would do neither any harm.
We bought a small ten-acre tract near by a thriving town,
And planned to start a poultry farm and do the thing up brown.

We bought a lot of fancy birds, at fancy prices, too,
For nothing less than "firsts" for us we knew would ever do;
Then "Poultry Hints and Secrets" and "Facts About the Hen"
Were added to the journals that we were laying in.

We made a hen house large and warm, according to the book,
With air-tight back and open front, nearby a running brook;
Some grassy runs, all fenced about with closely woven net,
Were made to keep the laying hens from those we wished to set.

There's more in feed than in the breed, 'most all the writers say,
So our flock was fed with choicest food to make the biddies lay:
A morning mash, with table scraps, and bran and meal stirred in,
Some scalded oats, a little salt and meat sliced very thin.

A dozen nests, the latest traps, were placed with utmost care
About the walls and on the ground, lined with grass and hair;
We mastered every minor point connected with he work;
No phase was left unstudied, no task was ever skirked.

A year has passed, and wife and I are back upon the farm:
Our fancy birds were sold constrained to market rather warm.
The fancy head and fancy eye and faultless, fancy legs,
Are points that may be valuable, but they never laid an egg.

When You Know a Fellow

When you get to know a fellow, know his joys and know his cares.
When you've come to understand him and the burdens that he bears,
When you've learned the habit he's making and the troubles in his ways,
Then you find that he is different than you thought him yesterday.
You find his faults are trivial and there's not so much to blame
In the brother that you jeered at when you only knew his name.

You are quick to see the blemish in the distant neighbor's style,
You can point to all his errors and may sneer at him the while.
And your prejudices fatten and your hates more violent grow,
As you talk about the failures of the man you do not know.
But when drawn a little closer, and your hand and shoulders touch,
You find the traits you hated really don't amount to much.

When you get to know a fellow, know his every mood and whim,
You begin to find the texture of the splendid side of him;
You begin to understand him, and you cease to scoff and sneer,
For with understanding always prejudices disappear
You begin to find his virtues and his faults you cease to tell,
If you seldom hate a fellow when you know him very well.

Then next you start in sneering and your phases turn to blame,
Know of him you censure than his business and his name;
For it's likely that acquaintance would your prejudices dispel
And you'd really come to like him if you knew him very well
When you get to know a fellow and you understand his ways,
Then his faults won't really matter, for you'll find a lot to praise.

My Own United States

The poet sings of sunny France, fair olive laden Spain,
The Grecian isles, Italia's smiles and India's torrid plain;
Of Egypt, countless ages old, dark Africa's palms and dates;
Let me acclaim the land I name, my own United States.

I love every inch of her prairie land, each stone on her mountain side;
I love every drop of her waters clear that flow in her rivers wide.
I love every tree, every blade of grass within Columbia's gates;
The queen of the earth is the land of my birth — my own United States.

The poet sings of Switzerland, braw [illegible]
The shimmering sheen of Ireland's green, old England's rockbound shore.
Quaint Holland and the Fatherland their chorus high praise relates;
Let me acclaim the land I name, my own United States.

GREETINGS FROM MARIGOLD

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Think it's about time I wrote a few lines, or the most of you folks will think I am a new member.

Eight years ago I joined the Corner and have enjoyed it very much indeed. Only sorry that I did not know of it before. The first picnic I attended was at Lucy Acorn's, a neighbor of mine, and I thought it was all very lovely.

I thank the Social Corner Member who sent me the calendar at New Years. It is pleasant to be remembered. Also I thank all sisters who sent me Christmas and New Year greetings; they were much appreciated.

Club No. 1 had a lovely anniversary gathering. It was nice to sit there and watch the sisters having a good time, of course myself included. Was pleased to see so many of the Norwich sisters with us. I missed Joan. How come you weren't there?

Marie: I expected to see you at the anniversary, made inquiries and was told you were moving that day. Some job. Hope you will enjoy your new home and perhaps you will be able to come to a meeting later on.

Lucy Acorn: You sure have done well on rugs. Would love to see one of them. Perhaps if I can persuade Bob White to join me calling on you some day this summer you can show us one.

Mary of France: Where art thou? Called the other afternoon but had no luck. Will try again.

Nema: I have missed you.

Glad to read that the Shore Line sisters had such good luck with their first gathering and may they have a rapid growth. The Corner is certainly growing with six clubs.

Best wishes to all.

MARIGOLD.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC START

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Last week Tuesday, I accepted an invitation from a Social Corner sister, Tatting, to join her on the day mentioned, when the Shore Line club No. 6 first saw daylight, it being their initial meeting, and, if appearances count for anything, this is to be one of the liviest, most enthusiastic, and interesting clubs going.

Several members assisted the hostess, Tatting, with one of the grandest spreads ever eaten by yours truly. Everything was set at noon on a large table in the dining room, and here 13 ladies had the pleasure of testing Tatting's fine cookies. Sister's and Interested Reader, should not be overlooked, for a full fledged Bostonite could not refrain from pronouncing the baked beans, and brown bread the "best ever." Pansy 3rd, also entertained with ukelele solos and her rendering of popular songs, made the whole affair a decided success.

Interested Reader: Your poem was certainly great. It deserves great credit, as well as the undivided efforts of Tatting. E. L. M. and yourself in giving those who are interested in having a club in this section of the state an opportunity to belong to the Corner club.

We are all looking forward to the meeting on April 20th, with another of our new Shore Line club members, at North Stonington. Some active club for its second birthday! May I have the pleasure of joining the Social Corner club, of the Shore Line club No. 6 On the 26th, we all shall share the happy thoughts of our Mystic friend, who attended the first meeting at Tatting's, and wish her a long life and many more happy birthdays to come.

Hope to be numbered one of your members, with the non-de-plume.

DEATH OF PLEASANT GUEST

Dear Social Corner Members: Another member has gone from us whose pen name was Pleasant Guest. Mrs. Emma Jackson of 141 Pleasant street Willimantic, was taken to St. Joseph hospital on Friday, March 12 and lived just three days, going out on March 15 and was laid to rest on March 17. She planned to attend our meeting on March 10 but did not feel equal to it. She was a past matron of Radiant chapter No. 11 O. E. S. and our ceremonies were performed at her home. She will be missed by her friends especially on the street where she had lived many years. Her husband and two daughters were laid to rest several years ago, and of late she remarked she had more relatives on the other side than here.

It causes is to think, as we realize, others and perhaps strangers are to occupy her pretty home. Even now her household goods are going and they were so dear to her that she seldom used the better pieces. The associations conected with them were best known to her and will never be understood by any other person. It is better to use our things ourselves. If they are scratched bent, or broken you'll know who did it and try to feel your enjoyment with them paid in full

FLAX

Dear Editor and Corner Pals: Greetings to all this fine spring morning. Thanks Mr. Editor for the yellow slip and a little later I'll let you know about its use. Am storing it just now.

Thanks to you Lucille, Wisteria, Elnora and others who sent me birthday cards.

Each time the Corner members gather or contribute to the Corner page, much useful information may be gained so am going to furnish a bit about flax. The word flax from the Anglo Saxon fleax, flax from feax, the hair. It is a plant having a bark whose fibre is used for making thread and cloth such as linen, cambric, lawn, lace, etc. From the seed we obtain linseed oil. It was found growing in Egypt 5,000 years ago. There are many kinds of the flax plant in different parts of the world. The plant is annual and has a straight slender stem, two or three feet high branching at the top, and bearing beautiful blue flowers. The leaves are narrow and lance shape. The stalks are hollow pipes made up of a woody part called the boon, and a fibrous rind from which the threads in spinning are made. When the flax is ripe the plants are pulled up by the roots. It is then ripped, to separate the seeds from the stalks. This is done either by hand, by drawing the stalks, a handful at a time, through a kind of large iron comb, called a ripple, which pulls the seeds off or by machine made for the purpose. The stalks are then retted or rotted by soaking them in water, which dissolves a kind of vegetable glue or gum and thus loosens the fibres from the boon. The next step is breaking by which the fibre is separated from the boon. The flax brake has a wooden handle, which works up and down on a board. The under side of the handle and the upper side of the board are grooved, those on the handle fitting into those on the board, so that when the stalks of flax are squeezed between them the woody part is crushed but the fibres of the bark are not broken. The brake is worked by means of a treadle pressed by the foot of the worker. The hand brake is much used in Russia, Holland, and Belgium, but in most other countries the breaking is done by steam machinery. The boon, or woody part being separated from the fiber either by beating the stalks with a broad flat wooden blade called a scutching blade, or by a scutching machine. The ripping, retting, breaking, and scutching of flax are usually done near where the flax is raised. The fibres are then tied up into bundles and taken to the mills, where they are prepared for spinning into thread. These fibres vary from 26 to 36 inches in length. The part next to the root is coarse and strong, the middle part finer and not quite so strong, and the top part still finer and weaker. The fibres are divided into three lengths from which threads of different fineness are made. This is done by a machine which pulls them apart, instead of cutting them, as this makes them better for spinning. Pool retting is done by putting bundles of the straws into pools of stagnent water which ferments. This makes it bluish. The Irish treat flax in this way and produce some of the finest linen known to commerce. Flax next goes through the process of reckling. The heckle is an iron comb with sharp teeth, through which the flax is drawn by handfuls. This combs the threads straight and takes out all the coarse and broken ones which are called tow. Heckling is now done mostly by machinery. The heckled flax, which is called line, is now sorted by hand, the different thicknesses being put into separate places in a sorting box. The sorted fibres are next spread in rows upon a long cloth called a feeding cloth, one row partly overlapping the next one, and pressed between iron rollers, which make them longer and more even flat. This is called spreading, after which the fibres are taken in tin cans to the drawing frame, in which the fibres are joined together at the ends, and made into one length. They are then taken to the roving frame, where they are twisted slightly, and wound upon bobbins ready for spinning into thread.

RECIPES FROM VIOLET

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Will write a few lines so as to help keep the Corner page full. It seems nice to have the weather warmer. Springtime will soon be with us and the flowers will shoot forth with their birds and blossoms for Easter time.

How are you Peggy Anne? I haven't seen any letter from you in a long time. Nor from Aunt Hester. I met you at Aunt Abby's picnic. That was the last social I went to.

J. E. T.: How are you? Suppose you are busy house cleaning. I haven't started yet. Have been very busy sewing as I like to do all I can while the weather is so cold and stormy. Then when warm weather gets here I can go outdoors with the baby more. He is now nine months old, some larger than when you last saw him (ha, ha) in the large box.

Will send in my soup recipes: 2 onions (small) or 1 large one, cut up fine with knife, 2 tablespoons or butter in kettle, put onions in it and let simmer till they are partly cooked. Then add 1 can of tomatoes and some water (about 1 pint) 1 can of tomatoes, and 1 can of peas, salt to taste, dash of paprika, dash of curry powder and also just a little of celery salt, add about 2 tablespoons of grated cheese to it and 1 box of maccaroni cooked in salted water. Boil for 20 minutes to a half hour and serve with crackers. It is delicious.

Peach Pie: Make a rich crust and put in canned peaches and add about 3 tablespoons of flour, sprinkling it over fruit. Then put on top crust and bake in a moderate oven till crust is done and pie boils, about 30 to 40 minutes.

One Cent Apple Pie [illegible]

Sauce: For a small pie about a dozen good sized apples, peel and quarter them. Take about 1 cup of granulated sugar and put into sauce pan with apples and about 1-4 teaspoon of nutmeg and about teaspoon of butter. Let cook for a few minutes on top of stove. Then add crust.

For crust take 1 pint of flour, 2 teaspoons of baking powder and pinch of salt and a good big spoon of shortening. Mix ingredients all together, then use just enough milk to make it soft enough to roll out. Then lay it over apples in sauce pan and put in oven and bake till crust is done. For sauce take 2 cups of milk, 1-2 cup of sugar, 2 eggs, a pinch of salt. Use corn starch enough to thicken it to consistency of thick cream and flavor with vanilla.

When pie is taken from oven turn out on a platter and put cream sauce over it. It is very nice.

L. T. H.: Was so glad to see you for the week end and also to read your letters in Social Corner page.

Best wishes to all and sympathy to those who are sick or have lost their loved ones.

A FEW BIBLE FACTS

Dear Corner Sisters: In the Bible, Old and New Testaments, there are 3,586,473 letters, 775,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books.

The longest book is Psalms, which has 15 divisions. The shortest is second John which has one chapter of 13 verses. The longest chapter is the 119th Psalm, which has 176 verses. The shortest is the 117th Psalm which has two verses. The longest verse is the ninth verse of the eighth chapter of Esther. It has 90 words. The shortest is the 35th verse of the 11th chapter of John. It has two words.

The eighth verse of 118th Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible.

The 37th chapter of Isaiah and the 19th chapter of second Kings are alike. In the 107th Psalm the eighth, 15th, 21st, and 31st verses are alike. Each verse of the 136th Psalm ends alike

Esther is the only book in which the name of God is not found.

The 21st verse of the seventh chapter of Ezra contains all the letters of the alphabet. I think this is worth knowing so am sending it into you.

I am sure someone will like to read the The Last Hymn. I have had it for years and send it to print when there is a chance.

Here is a little conundrum. What is coal the most contradictory article in commerce?

Because when purchased instead of going to the buyer it goes to the cellar.

OLDEST WOMAN'S CLUB

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: As we all have been reading, writing and attending the anniversary of the various clubs this month, I thought it might interest some of you to know that the oldest woman's club, perhaps I may say in the world, was organized 118 years ago last June and is located at Bridgewater, Somerset, England. A man was responsible for it and a great man too—Samuel Taylor Coleridge, the poet.

It was first located at a small village a few miles from its present location, where he sat when he wrote an inspiration for its banner which is carried every year, still, in the annual parade of the members. During the summer of 1807, when the club was born, the first parade of its members, (hoop-skirted and pokebonneted) was almost a public scandal. The situation was saved however by the fact that every woman in the village was included in the membership, from the one titled lady to the humblest cotter's wife. What could the men do under the circumstance except to submit? As I sit here writing the thought comes to me, will our dear Social Corner ever attain such an age? Who can tell?

Large trees from little acorns grow.

Chick-a-dee-dee: The memorial service carried out by you at our anniversary was very impressive.

Daisy Dean: I have made dozens of your soft molasses cookies and they are fine.

Forget-me-not: Here is my recipe for brown bread.

Brown Bread: One cup yellow meal, 1 cup flour, 1-2 cup molasses, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in water, 1 teaspoon salt.

Mix with milk sweet or sour, have it thin. Bake in slow oven or, steam 2 hours.

Success to the Corner.

GREETINGS FROM CATNIP

Dear Editor, Social Corner Sisters and Friends: What a beautiful day! How I would like to go out and enjoy this weather, but I am timid about going out alone as I can't see as well as I used to. It will be one year in April since I had the cataract taken off my left eye and it seems a long time for me to regain my sight. I get lonesome and blue. The people that come in and see me are so happy and can see so much it makes me feel bad because I can't see. I pray for sight and strength every day but it comes slow. I have not been out since our last meeting and I had such a good time. I was so happy and I guess I made club number 2 happy when I presented the American flag to them. I was sorry I could not go to Willimantic but that morning I got up with a bad cold and I have had it ever since. I promised several sisters I would go and was sorry to disappoint them but when the weather is fine will try again. I did not see many names in the Corner last week that I knew. I hope to do better in the future and write.

Dreamer: Where are you? I think you ought to write. We would like to hear from you. Tell Mr. Dreamer I guess he will have plenty of visits to make when he comes to Norwich.

Lucy Acorn: Glad to hear from you. Electric lights are fine. I have them now. How are the chicks coming on?

Crimson Rambler: How are you? Hope to see you at Club 2 in April. I hope I will be well so I can be there. Love to all the dear sisters that are sick and shut in. I will ring off and make room for another member.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Not long ago a friend of mine planned a surprise for me. She informed me that some day I was to take a trip, but I was not to know my destination—that was a secret. When the day arrived I was carried by auto to another town and was feeling very much mystified when we stopped at a house all decorated with the Social Corner emblem—the yellow ribbon—and I saw my friend on the porch. Who had planned this surprise for me. Them on joining the rest of the company I saw a friend whom I had corresponded with for years but did not know she was a Social Corner member and my surprise was complete.

With your permission, dear editor, I will join the Social Corner and take for my pen name.

REBECCA.

RUTHINA JOINS CORNER

Social Corner Editor: Received the pin. Thanks for sending same. As I selected the pen name belonging to another am sending again.

Will take the name

SOCIAL CORNER FLOWER GARDEN

Dear Corner Friends, one and all: How do you all do this lovely morning? Hope the sick ones are improving as the birds are now singing in large numbers outside.

E. L. M.: From the different accounts I have read of the formation of Club No. 6 should judge it was a howling success. So glad Interested Reader was able to attend, also glad so many turned out to join. I know they never will be sorry and I know they will be welcomed in the Corner. Hope to see your club grow larger, as good weather comes.

Theoda: Thanks for pretty card; always so glad to hear from the earlier members. The verse was real cute, never saw one like it.

Maple Leaf: I say thank you for pretty and useful birthday gift. Shall always think of you when I use it. Very appropriate as well as useful.

J. E. T.: My! how you must have surrised your neighbors. The man of the house nearly had a fit when I told him the news. Please accept our congratulations. What are you going to name the baby elephant? Think Honorable Patches a very appropriate name. Your pretty birthday cards at hand.

Dom Pedro: Your letter containing seeds received. I say thank you.

I am wondering if any of the sisters have as many different flowers from members of the Social Corner as I have. I will give a list: Paula, Theoda, Linnette, Maple Leaf, Lorna, Dom Pedro, Wurdy Belle, Savilla, Savilla's Daughter, True Blue, Elsa, Josh, Aunt Abby, and Nellie Ely. One can imagine what a Social Corner flower garden I have in the summer.

Have any of the Corner members the poems entitled, The Face of the Bar Room Floor, written by Hugh Antoine D'Arcy, also Blood Stains on the Snow? I have been told there are two parties in the city who have the words. As I have heard so much about each poem, I am very desirous of obtaining a copy of each one and hope some one may send them in to the Corner page. Have been told The Blood Stains on the Snow, has been recited from one of the city theater stages.

Maple Leaf's Daughter: I like your new pen name. You will have many guessing now. I knew right off who was who when I read your last letter.

Maple Leaf: Next time you call, do stay long enough to say, Hello! Nice day, even if it was raining "cats."

Paula: Where are you? Are you running that oil stove, you wrote about recently? I never knew you had one. How long have you had it? Good wishes to everybody.

TEACHING THE CHILD

Dear Social Corner Editor and Friends: Many thanks to the editor for the prize check. They are always much appreciated.

And so many interesting and helpful letters each week. I enjoy every one of them.

If every mother could understand her children, instead or having to learn so much by her own experience —which means not doing the best— the mother's task would be easier, but perhaps not any more interesting.

"People now are being taught to guard their mental health just as they have been taught to guard their physical health. Physical health depends to a great extent upon mental health. Excessive anger, hatred, envy, grief, jealousy, fear, malice, depression and other mental conflicts if persisted in often cause serious mental and physical trouble."

It is most helpful to remember that the child is just a person and that he should develop by the process of natural growth both mentally and physically, and that the habits he forms at first will greatly influence his whole life.

It is easy to give him a happy disposition. The infant of a few days has learned the routine of his daily life and although he sleeps 20 out of the 24 hours, we soon find out that he has been very much awake and has used his mind during those four hours.

The infant of three months knows the expression of your face—approval or refusal, smiles or scowls and expects pleasant diversions such as his rides and daily calls on friends, etc.

From six months to a year he should learn to respect the rights of others, learn to let other people's property alone—not to touch mother's machine or father's books.

When he can walk he should easily learn the danger of fire, falls and crossing streets, etc. When he is two years he has learned to talk the language he hears in his home. This seems the most wonderful feat in learning. We might help them more than we do, by using the same phrase each time and sometimes only two words as the child begins to talk.

We never want the mental growth to stop, and if not he must have the right care. So formal teaching must begin at two years. Some one should tell him the names of the letters on his blocks many times a day.

Connecting each letter with something or someone he likes, as F is father's letter. Don't try to teach him at this age, just let him hear you tell it over and over each day as if you yourself were very much interested in it.

Tell every day the pictures in geographies and catalogues, and you will be surprised how soon he will be interested and how much of it he remembers. Teach him numbers too. Keep a record of the child's advancement it will be useful for future study.

ECONOMY IN DRESS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I enjoyed the anniversary meeting March 10th, and many thanks are due Theoda and all the other helpers who did so much to make it pleasant. Think I deserve a scolding for eating a piece of the cake which was for those whose birthdays come in March. Did not realize it was not made for me until too late. It tasted good.

Hope I can make someone laugh, so will tell about two funny happenings.

A child came into a neighbors home one day and said, "We've had our pictures tooken. Sue's had her tooken and Dan's had his tooken and I've had mine tooken and we've all had em tooken."

At school once a girl read from the Bible and instead of reading, John had his raiment of camel's hair and a leather girdle about his loins. She said, "John had his raiment of Campabout his lower elements."

Now I will change the subject to economy in dress.

To be well dressed is the desire of most women and to dress economically is the necessity of many. There are a few women who are not within strict limitations as to the amount of money they can spend each year upon their clothing, and this is well for an unlimited amount can as readily be used without gaining the result desired, that is, to be well dressed upon all occasions.

The average house mother often buys a hat, a gown or a pair of shoes when in extreme need. The greatest thriftiness is maintained when a certain sum of money can be saved from one season to another. With this on hand one is able not only to buy more advantageously, but to have at the same time everything fresh and in harmony.

of may not be a small item of expense. One must not consider lace-trimmed garments but the plain ready made garment is most satisfactory and may be purchased at special sales. This underwear will be transformed by the addition of a crochet edge or failing this, a strong, inexpensive lace may be purchased.

Three sets at least should always be kept on hand and if one is nice with her needle an extra set or two can be made as fancy work and worn for best. If silk must be used, white or natural color pongee is very nice.

Regarding shoes the best are the cheapest. Cheap shoes never look well or wear well and may positively disfigure the feet. One pair of good street shoes will do if two pairs cannot be afforded and with good house shoes will not prove very expensive.

There is nothing which so adds to or detracts from a women's personal appearance as the hat she wears. Millinery should be of good quality, becoming and extreme styles should be avoided. Flowers are unserviceable. Good flowers are expensive and cheap flowers tawdry. For the woman who can afford but one hat each season, a general or street hat must be selected which is dark and harmonizes with the suit and gowns.

To the woman who keeps a cash account the incidental items of dress will be found to cost a surprising amount unless extremely good care is taken of each article. A stitch in time saves nine Fresh gloves and veils should not be worn upon all occasions but time and place should be considered.

Most women prefer few gowns so that they may have something new each season in quiet, simple taste. They find that it is better economy to wear one or two piece dresses with a coat than to wear a suit. Suits and coats should be inobtrusive in color to avoid becoming tiresome to one's self and friends. At the beginning of a season overstuffs is marked at high prices but after the peak is over prices are greatly reduced. A suit or coat bought at this time will not only give good satisfaction the present season but be of good service the next.

The one piece gowns may be made at home or by a dressmaker and should be a lighter tone to brighten up the wardrobe. If purchased ready made, one must search for the substantial, well made gown and pass by the more fanciful creations.

Economy in clothes means that one must be able to select what we really need with discrimination, what will be becoming and wear well. We should do most of our own sewing if possible. We must know the difference between a real and so called bargain. By keeping our clothing in proper shape, well brushed, cleaned and pressed we shall add greatly to its wearing qualities. An individuality in dress should be cultivated. Not extreme style but quiet becomingness is the end every woman should aim to achieve who wishes to dress in good taste and with economy.

Best wishes for a happy Easter.

GREETINGS FROM SCOTTIE

Dear Editor and Social Sisters: Aren't we having lovely weather? I think we enjoy it after so much snow and cold, and I think this season of Lent and Easter is a wonderful time. It calls to mind that Christ is risen and lives for evermore. We need such reminders to call a halt from worldly things and make us look up to Him who died and did rose again that we might live and be with Him if we try to do His will and love one another as He has commanded us to do. What a beautiful world this would be if we reigned supreme!

I was pleased to see the Corner page full to overflowing last week.

Sister Ready: I am in the same boat with you, last month was very short, and March is slipping away too so I must keep up my end.

Nema: Didn't we all have a nice time March 10th up at W.? Neighbor Eveready with her assistants made it very pleasant for all the Norwich sisters, 15, I think.

True Blue: I hope you got home safe.

Country Sister: Bring your violin April 17th.

Amy: I called on Remember Me and gave her your message. She is very poorly. She was pleased to hear from you. I often think how little we appreciate health until it is taken from us.

Deliah Dear: Am glad you are gaining.

Delight: I was glad to see your name once more in the Corner page.

Best wishes for the Corner.

GINGER COOKIE RECIPE

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Well we have had a nice day today and it won't be long now before we will have the good old summer again and then we will forget a little about the cold and all the snow that we have had this winter. What a fine time we had up at Willimantic at Club No. 1. I met a number of sisters I knew. How nice it is to meet old friends and also to make new friends. Hope all of my helpers will be on hand early at our next meeting on April 7. I wis that I could write such nice letters as some of the sisters do. I would feel like writing all of the time and keep the Corner page full and running over.

Ginger Cookies: 1-2 cup molasses, 1-2 cup sugar, 1 heaping tablespoon lard 1-2 teaspoon ginger, 1-2 teaspoon salt. Mix all together and then add 1-2 cup boiling water. Add one teaspoon of soda to the water and stir in the other mixture and add flour enough to roll out. Try them they are very good.

FANNIE M. K. (Club 2).

WASHING WINDOW SHADES.

Dear Corner Sisters: A great many times your window shades become too soiled and faded to keep up to the window while the rollers are yet in a good condition.

I remove shade from the roller, and then soak them in luke warm water about two hours. Make a solution of borax about one-half cup to two gallons of water (or if you haven't borax use washing soda). Then rinse well in luke warm water and hang them out doors straightened out as well as you can. I put mine through the wringer. If you haven't a wringer, just hang them out without wringing. Make a starch with quite a good body to it and take curtains in and starch, hang out to dry and let them hang until just ready to iron.

Iron them lengthwise. Let air for a few hours, then paint them any color you want them by placing boards across old boxes and stretching perfectly smooth. Then use a "thin, flat paint."

When one side is dry, repeat the operation on the other side, and when dry tack shade on roller upside down, the top for the bottom. If any part is ragged cut it off, run in a hem and bore a hole in the midle of the stick for a shade pull.

TATTING PLEASED WITH HELP RECEIVED

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Owing to the illness of my husband, I was very sorry not to have been able to have sent a letter to the Social Corner sisters. I wish to thank all the members who assisted me in entertaining the ladies who attended the opening meeting of the Shore Line club No. 6, and now it is all started in a most flourishing manner. Please accept my hearty thanks, to all who so kindly responded with all the nice things contributed in last Saturday's Bulletin.

Tatting, also, is looking forward with great pleasure to attending the meeting at North Stonington, on April 20, when one of the new club members will entertain, for it is sure to be a real treat to listen to the program planned, and as all know what a wonderful reputation the ladies have gained for their delightful spreads.

I wish to extend my thanks, to the committee who assisted me with the preparation, the clearing up of my dinner and social program. Believe me to be interested in the welfare of The Shore Line club, No. 6, of Stonington and shall expect to see all the pen names of the newly formed club members each week, with good sunny letters and recipes.

PEDDLERS

Dear Social Corner: The letter by Balsam Fir about the origin of the Mixe apple which I have a vague remembrance of either reading or hearing some time before in my life put me in mind of the many peddlers who used to go to and fro through the land in days gone by before autos were thought of and trips to the cities were an all day affair. They were the only very few by the families living away back in the country—maybe once or four times a year they got some things couldn't be found at the country store which also might be quite a number away, and so the peddlers "came in handy." I have read lately two or three articles about the passing of the tin peddler's cart, which used to be a sign of spring like the wild geese. When the muddy roads began to get settled the housewives soon it was about time for a tin peddler and began looking over their sacks and piles of rags and old garments, too much goes by to be of any other use, which had collected through the winter for the dispensation of trading them off for needed articles of tinware, spoons and then some day the would appear driving over the hill with usually a red shiny cart, and a white horse. Most of them seemed to favor that combination as perhaps being more showy and striking in appearance. And there were always great stacks of rags, filled or to be filled, a rack of brooms and a quantity of jingling and rattling tinware, always solemnly declared to be the best in the market which probably rusted, or developed leaks before he came again. But they did duty for a while and then there was the pleasurable excitement of looking them over and trading off something they didn't want for some that they did and excitements were none too plenty.

The coming of the peddlers was a welcome relief after the monotony of the winter months of snow and cold. Many other than the peddlers came also.

For some years when I was [illegible] a Mr. Lown (from Hartford, I think) used to come through our town about once a month. Some of the sisters may remember him also. It used to have cloth of various kinds such as was in common every day use and stockings and little notions generally and I think some kinds of dishes. I can remember just how he looked and a very nice man to trade with he was, too.

Then there were the pack peddlers, with carried jewelry and watch cases. They were not so plenty since I can remember but in the years further back they seem to have caused strange tales and made unsavory reputations for said pack, their stock in trade. When I was a small girl there was an old tavern in Canterbury where a pack peddler was supposed to have been killed by the landlord. He was known to go there to spend the night and nobody saw him go away and it was said to be one room in the house where no one ever stayed all night through the night. However was a room that could be closed off from the rest of the house and I remember hearing what was supposed to be the ghost of the murdered peddler and couldn't sleep. Finally the old tavern burned down and I have heard that bones were found buried in the cellar by someone. Curiosity enough in three. But that is one of the things I have found as the country has developed is gone and we know all we ever shall know about it. It was considered quite the proper thing to have a haunted room in our old inns and taverns and I wonder if with the increased time and the many stories on ghosts and "haints" that we used to hear and read about some people pretended and lied back on the old stories to please where they are said to belong. What place have they for them in this world of autos and airplanes, telephone radio, and jazz of half a thousand and one activities of this busy workaday world?

I can remember when I used to frighten myself almost to death with ghost stories found in old magazines. Till my mother luckily found them and used them to light fires with. I got so I was afraid to go into another room in the dark but I have lived quite a while and have never seen anything or that kind more alarming than the old lady did who said that she never saw but two ghosts and one of them proved to be a white sheet hung on a rosebush. The other she didn't see but it got into the house and carried off two candles and a pint of spirits, which she had kept in case of an embarkation, meaning an emergency.

Well, I think I have discoursed long enough and have wondered some distance from my original subject and so will close with best wishes.

POETRY

Palm Sunday

Lord, we should fain scene little palm branch lay
Upon Thy way;
But we have nothing fair enough or sweet
For holy feet
To tread, nor dare our sin-stained garments fling
Upon the road where rides the Righteous King.

So, Lord, our stubborn wills we first will break
If Thou wilt take;
And next our selfishness, and then our pride,
And what besides?
Our hearts, Lord, poor and fruitless though they be
And quick to change and nothing worth to see.

—Susan Coolidge

Courage

Because I hold it sinful to despond,
And will not let the bitterness of life
Blind me with burning tears, but look beyond
Its tumult and its strife;

Because I lift my head above the mist,
Where the sun shines and the broad breezes blow,
By every ray and every raindrop kissed
That God's love doth bestow;

Think you I find no bitterness at all?
No burden to be borne, like Christian's pack
Think you there are no ready tears to fall
Because I keep them back?

Why should I hug life's ills with cold reserve,
To curse myself and all who love me?
Nay!
A thousand times more good than I deserve
God gives me every day.

And in each one of these rebellious tears
Kept bravely back, He makes a rainbow shine:
Grateful I take His slightest gift, no fears
Nor any doubts are mine.

Dark skies must clear, and when the clouds are past,
One golden day redeems a weary year:
Patient I listen, sure that sweet at last
Will sound His voice of cheer.

Then vex me not with chiding. Let me be
I must be glad and grateful to the end
I grudge you not your cold and darkness—me
The powers of light befriend.

The Date of Easter

Thirty days hath September
Every person can remember
But to know when Easter come
Puzzles even scholars—some.

When March the twenty-first is past
Just watch the silvery moon,
And when you see it full and round,
Know Easter'll be here soon.

After the moon has reached its full.
Then Easter will be here
The very Sunday after.
In each and every year.

And if it happens on Sunday
The moon should reach its height,
The Sunday following this event,
Will be the Easter bright.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Mother—Loko, dear, there's the church where your father and I were married.

Tiny Tot—Who took care of me that day, mummy?—Good Hardware.

Can't you help me select a gift for a wealthy aunt who is awfully weak and can hardly walk?

Clerk—Well, how about some floor wax?—Chicago Phoenix.

I told her I wanted her as a siren for my car.

Well?

She ranks among the snubbers.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

First Motorist—By the way, how's that baby of yours coming along?

Second Motorist—Fine! He's just beginning to jaywalk.—Life.

I told my wife that if she bobbed her hair I would leave her.

But she bobbed it; and you're still living with her?

You bet I am. I'll show her she can't bluff me.—Life.

Bobbie was reading history, and, looking up suddenly, he asked: What is beheaded, mother?

Having one's head cut off, darling, she replied.

After a thoughtful moment Bobbie remarked: I suppose defeated is having one's feet cut off?—Tool Hardware.

KALEIDOSCOPE

Christmases and birthdays are gala occasions for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stowell, of Windham, Vt., for Ouida May, as she has been named has so many relatives to remember her. The list includes 24 own uncles and aunts, five uncles and aunts by marriages, 10 own cousins, four grandparents one great-grandparent, and a small army of second cousins.

The story is told by Arthur Drummond, a farmer of Elmdale, Kas., of an old hen that was determined to "set" but would not use the nests in the henhouse. She went out in the orchard and stole the nest of quail. The old hen sat on ten eggs of her own and a dozen quail eggs. She hatched eight quails and ten chicks. Then one day the mother quail came along and took all the little quails away.

Ears suffered from fatigue and when they are tired they do not work so efficiently, according to experiments being conducted at the University of Wisconsin by Drs. G. A. Goldsmith, I. S. Luenzman, L. Sammons and S. W. Zimmerman. Using as their apparatus a watch mounted on a moving carriage, they confirmed a belief that keenness of hearing is less at night and at the end of the week. Mental work always causes a decrease in keenness of hearing, the scientists find. Sever exercises may sharpen hearing, but this depends on the amount of exercise and the condition of the subject. The ears are a rather delicate barometer of physical fitness, the tests indicate. Diminished power of hearing may give warning of approaching bodily or mental fatigue some hours before the individual is aware of any change in his condition.

NEW LONDON PATROLMAN RETIRES-ENDS TWENTY-SEVEN YEARS' SERVICE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 26—Patrolman Michael B. O'Neill will be retired as a member of the New London police department Monday next. At the same time the officer will be transferred to the veteran police reserve, which transfer will carry with it half pay for the officer, the rate of compensation being based upon the salary at that was paid at the date of retirement which is $150 per month. As was anticipated, Patrolman O'Neill this afternoon made formal application for retirement to Captain Charles A. Pinney and that official immediately approved the application, which was forwarded to City Manager William A. Holt. That official will recommend to the members of the city council next week, the retirement of the officer and the recommendation will be approved.

Patrolman O'Neill, who has been a member of the department for 27 years was appointed to the force in October, 1898 and has served continuously ever since. Until a few months ago Officer O'Neill apparently had sound health but during the early winter he showed symptoms of breaking down a fortnight ago his wife underwent an operation and since that time the officer displayed unmistakable signs of ill health being impaired and it was that condition that prompted him to retire. This he justly deserves for during his long term of office he has proved himself a faithful and efficient guardian of the law.

Mary Lampert has sold a house and lot on Stuart avenue, Ocean Beach, to Pauline Rappaport.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Hobbins B. Stoeckel today denied the application of two new London auto owners to operate their cars, for the commissioner suspended their licenses indefinitely. One of those denied is Charles H. Stetson, 200 Montauk avenue, proprietor of a barbershop at 201 Williams avenue. Stetson was arrested by constables in Waterford two weeks ago, charged with operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor. Later he was presented in the Waterford town court where a fine of $100 and costs was meted out. The other owner is George St. Lear, United States coast guard sailor, stationed at the state pier. Commissioner Stoeckel also ordered the operator's license of Thomas Lamrad, 137 Jefferson avenue, recently suspended, to be returned to the owner.

The police last night were called upon to remove a dangerous object from the highway. Everett Daniels, of Telford, in driving his automobile through Williams street, near Rosemary street came upon the state highway sign lying across the road. Daniels' automobile barely missed the object. The police were notified of the danger and Patrolman Augustus Ray and William Riordan were sent in the police automobile to have the sign removed from the highway.

Without home or friends, William Ward, 75, a familiar character about the city for a number of years this afternoon was committed to Hillside, the city's institution for the care and shelter of unfortunates who become destitute because of adverse conditions or ill health. Ward has been in poor employment a long time and lately ever since the advent of prohibition, prior to that time he was employed about saloons. Of late Ward has been a familiar figure standing in a certain daily on Bank street and in front of the place where he was formerly employed. He also has made it a practice of daily seeking and obtaining lodging at the police station. This afternoon when Ward appeared at the station house with his clothing wet from rain and snow, instead of being provided a bunk in the tramp room, Ward was placed in a cell and was given the alternative of going to the institution or taking a six months jail sentence on a charge of drunkenness, when in the police court this morning. Ward was determined not to enter the city's home for the poor, but after having been locked up an hour he finally consented.

The plant of the Day Publishing company was threatened with serious damage by fire, early this morning, but for the prompt discovery of the fire by Patrolman Augustus Ray and the quick action of the officer damage of considerable volume would probably have resulted.

Patrolman Ray was making his rounds through North Bank street shortly before 2 o'clock, when he observed a glare in the rear of the plant, peering through one of the windows the officer discovered the blaze. Trying to gain admission to the building by windows without success, Ray hastened to the entrance to a store room and forced the door. Entering the building Ray rushed to the press room where there is a waste paper bin. This is beneath the main building, and the entrance to the bin is in the press room where the bulk of the refuse paper is collected. The paper was ablaze in a big blaze. Ray emptied a considerable quantity of water upon the burning mass before the blaze was extinguished, the officer proceeding to throughout the fire before any woodwork became ignited.

The fire department was called out shortly before 10 o'clock last night to an dilapidated barn in the tract on West Cedar Grove and Jefferson streets was discovered ablaze. An alarm was sent in from Box 281, corner of Jefferson and Lincoln avenue, but before the department reached the burning building it was doomed. There was nothing of value in the destroyed building.

Welch Ustach furnished business for the police court this morning. He was all alone as accused. Welch was very drunk on North Bank street last night when Patrolman Opperman went through the street. The probation officer was also a witness of the condition of the accused, although Welch denied that he had drank anything when he had a chance to explain. That attitude brought a fine of $10 to the the accused and he went to jail. Thursday was payday for Ustach and he spent his money for booze.

The outlook for building construction in New London when settled spring weather arrives is declared by mechanics to promise an abundance of work.

The weather today was of the sort that merchants objected to in a great degree. The day began with snow that was followed by rain and then in turn by a wet snow that was as disagreeable as any that came during the winter.

Peter Dorsey, 2nd, left New London last evening for Peru, Ind., where he will begin his duties as the agent of the American Circus company which operates several cricuses. He is employed as purchaser of hay, grain and feed for the shows which include Hagenbeck and Wallace and the Sells Floto companies. The first exhibit will be in Chicago. The shows will work each during the season.

The Sound steamers from this port to New York are reported to be enjoying a patronage both in passengers and freight that is larger than the normal business of the line. Freights are especially heavy.

Very few residential changes are contemplated in this city the first of April, which is the annual "moving" day in New London. Many residences have been erected in New London since April last, but they are for their owners. That has been the case in recent years so that removals are fewer each year.

Unless the weather changes for milder days, the display of Easter finery will be a limited one this year.

There is a strong probability that the city will lay some permanent paving during the coming year. The council is still considering the budget and there will decide what is to be done in this direction. The streets that have been paved, cemented or laid in Belgian blocks are confirmation of what The Bulletin has often said, that these streets have been practically inexpensive in the way of repairs since the pavement was put in place. Water street was a swamp practically till the Belgian blocks were laid there. Since then is has been inexpensive in the way of repairs. Ocean avenue was laid with cement, laid by the state, it is true but that highway has worn splendidly and is in as good condition as when the cement was first laid. Little Methodith street, one on which there is much teaming, was also laid with cement some 12 or more years ago and that is in fine condition also. State and Bank streets tell the story of permanent paving in their own condition. No highways in the city are more used for every sort of travel by vehicles, yet they stand up well and will wear for years to come.

There is a belief that Montauk avenue will be cemented or laid with asphalt, in part, during the coming summer. The entire avenue cannot be done in a single year for the length is about three miles and the cost would be more than the city could afford, but a section of it could be laid, it is believed, without increasing the taxes of the property owners. That work is regarded as of much greater and pressing necessity than is the widening of Bank street. The so-called cold patch that was put down on Bank street at the lower end has not stood the wear it was expected to stand so it is likely that no more of that work will be attempted. The work did smooth off the brick pavement, but the top dressing is now showing the effect of wear and tear.

NIANTIC CAR OVERTURNS—BUMPS KAUFMAN MACHINE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 26—George A. Taylor, and rneet Fellows of Niantic, had a close call from serious injury this evening when the machine in which they were riding and which was being driven by Taylor, overturned, at the corner of Montauk avenue and Bank street, being in collision with a car owned and driven by Dr. Charles Kaufman, Montauk avenue. Taylor sustained a slight cut on the left hand but Fellows did not receive as much as a bruise, Taylor's car was considerably damaged but Dr. Kaufman's auto came out all right.

Taylor and Fellows started for New London in the former's Ford sedan about 7.30 o'clock and as the car descended the grade of Bank street, corner of Montauk avenue, Taylor evidently did not observe the physician's car as it was about to pass Hobron street and turn into Bank street. Taylor intended to drive into Hobron St., and just before the two cars crashed, Taylor, it is believed, realizing the collision was imminent and attempted to avoid one by speeding the car and attempting to drive around and in front of Dr. Kaufman's machine. In this attempt he was unsuccessful for the Kaufman car struck the Ford just behind the front seat in such a manner as to cause the latter car to overturn, with Taylor and Fellows prisoners within. Dr. Kaufman, with the assistance of pedestrians the Taylor auto was righted and the two young men scrambled out, to the surprise of witnesses entirely unharmed. Both Taylor and Dr. Kaufman reported the accident at the police station.

COLCHESTER BOY SHOT HIMSELF ACCIDENTALLY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 26—As a result of the investigation of State Policeman Frank Kulowski of Groton barracks, into the shooting of William Kachran, 14, of Colchester, last month, it is revealed that the youth received the wound by accidentally shooting himself. The boy had been hunting and received the gunshot wound in the back. He has been under treatment at Backus hospital, Norwich, since the accident and at one time his condition was critical. His condition at the present time is such as to indicate that he will recover.

TOTAL OF 38 MEN TAKE TEST TO JOIN POLICE DEPT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 26—New London will have plenty of police officers after tonight, for at the Jennings school, Colt street, this evening 38 young men desirous of becoming members of the New London department were given mental examinations by Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney and City Manager William A. Holt. The city charter provides that there shall be a supernumerary list of 13 officers at all times, but for several years this number has not been maintained. There is but one supernumerary officer at the present time. Henry Sylvia and he has performed regular duty continuously over a year. With the resignation today of Patrolman Michael O'Neill a vacancy exists and with vacation of officers starting April 1 and at which time motorcycle officers will be assigned to duty, there will be need for several supernumeraries the greater part of the remainder of the year.

An automobile in which Miss Oliveria Wood, 8 Schoolhouse Lane, was a passenger and in which were two male companions, was damaged this morning on the Norwich road, near Quaker Hill when the car skidded on the concrete highway and crashed against a stone wall. Miss Wood suffered an injury to her right elbow and received treatment at the private hospital, after which she went to her home. The state police are conducting an investigation.

A slight fire occurred at the establishment of the Sidney Manufacturing company, Shapley street, early this morning when a quantity of soot became ablaze in a chimney. A still alarm to fire headquarters resulted in the Niagara Engine company responding. Chemicals sufficed to extinguish the fire and without damage.

Miss Jessie Stewart of Fishers Island; Miss Anna Weaver, 32 Franklin street; John Fraser, 417 Montauk avenue and Miss Alice Sariell, 57 Ocean avenue, patients at Lawrence Memorial associated hospital, were discharged today.

The Gulf Refining company has secured an option of a section of the property, corner Main and Church streets of Sidney Sulman and with the completion of the sale, which involves a price of $25,000, within a few days, the purchasing company will cause a gasoline filling station to be erected upon the same.

Attorney Frank L. McGuire is confined to his home, Vauxhall street, suffering from a severe attack of the grip.

Isaac Prottas, 63, died last night at his residence, 26 Shapley street after an illness of several weeks. Mr. Prottas was a retired merchant and is survived by his wife, a son, Abraham Prottas, this city and a daughter, Mrs. Sadie Glater of Hartford. Hyman Prottas of New London, a brother, and Mrs. Fannie Abeleszky, also of this city, a sister, also survive.

Patrolman Michael Dorsey is confined to his home, Montauk avenue because of illness.

The police are inclined to believe that the allegation of Dr. Anthony Crocicchia, proprietor of Moon's pharmacy, 452 Bank street, which was reported Thursday as having been entered by a crook Wednesday night and three vials of morphine and a vial of cocaine stolen, is not true and that the place did not receive attention of a dope addict. The rear window, which Patrolman Michael Corcoran discovered broken and which it was claimed, was used by the thief as a means of entering the drug store, has, according to the police been broken a longtime and Patrolman George Laboue, who was in the pharmacy when Dr. Crocicchia arrived at the place following being informed that a break had occurred there and who declared that the morphine and cocaine had been stolen, has reported to the police station that the narcotics are kept in a glass case and which is always locked and that when the doctor attempted to open the case the physician was unable to do so.

An automobile owned and driven by Joseph Ricatto, 195 Huntington street and a machine driven by Nelson Germaine, 76 Broad street, were in collision late this afternoon at corner of Huntington and Federal streets. Both cars were damaged in excess of $10 and Ricatto was ordered by Patrolman Ernest Opperman to appear in the police court tomorrow morning to answer a charge of reckless driving. Both cars were headed north on Huntington street, and with Germaine's car in the lead. At the corner of Federal street, Ricatto's auto overtook the Germaine car, but before Ricatto could apply his brakes his machine crashed against the rear of Germain's car.

The trial of Jacob M. Linicus of Mott avenue, Ocean Beach, charged with reckless driving, will take place in the police court tomorrow morning, the trial having been continued from the date of Linicus' accident several weeks ago. Linicus was driving his car southerly on Montauk avenue and at the corner of Sherman street ran down Miss Alice Svenberg of Lee avenue as she alighted from a trolley car Miss Svenberg was knocked down and sustained among other injuries a fractured leg.

Broadway Theatre

"Peggy of the Secret Service" is essentially a picture of action and thrills made against a colorful background. Its excellence is substantially increased by the work of Peggy O'Day who plays the death-defying Secret Service Operative assigned to the task of arresting a Turkish official who has purloined the beautiful piece of jewelry known as "The Star of Asia." A high grade of photography and subtitles are other factors in making this first rate entertainment.

Realizing that his patrons have an appreciation of red-blooded action the management of the Broadway theatre has booked "Peggy of the Secret Service" for his house for Sunday night. It is the first of a series of eight pictures dealing with the exploits of daring Peggy O'Day in running down criminals for the Secret Service.

It has been announced that the second feature Sunday night will be shown the new J. J. Fleming production "Scarlet and Gold" starring Al Ferguson and released by Davis Distributing Division. "Scarlet and Gold" has already aroused wide-spread comment in other cities where it has been shown, winning enthusiastic comment from the public and the press. It is said to be a highly entertaining picture full of incident and action and dramatic enough to satisfy even the most blase movie goers.

A comedy and news are the short subjects.

Broadway Theatre

H. H. Winchell, manager of the Myrkle-Harder Stock company which will appear at the Broadway all next week, was a guest today of the management of the Broadway. The company is in Meriden this week.

The Myrkle-Harder company has been in existence now for 27 consecutive years and Mr. Winchell states that many managers with whom Mr. Harder has booked his company, year after year for all that length of time, have assured him that never before has the Myrkle-Harder company presented a finer list of plays nor a more pleasing personnel of players to interpret them than those which are this season appearing under this standard. He states also that this opinion has been borne out by the almost continuous packed houses that have greeted them at every point of the routes booked for them this year, and the New England time, where they are now appearing, he says, has proven, so far, the most wonderful of all. Not only as to the financial results but in the enthusiastic manner in which the audiences have greeted them.

The opening production will be "The Whole Town's Talking," A. H. Wood's big laughing success. Tickets can now be purchased for any of the evening shows and our advice is that you get them in advance as they are reserved.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

The William Fox photoplay, Over the Hill, which comes to the Breed theater Sunday, Monday and Tuesday was made from Will Carlton's celebrated Farm Ballads, and is called the greatest ever made.

William Fox, the noted picture producer, regards Over the Hill as his favorite over all the pictures he ever produced. At the time when it was ready for its initial screening, and before its sensational Broadway success had started, Mr. Fox issued the following interesting statement:

"I watched the development of Over the Hill from the moment the first scene was written. I watched it throughout the months of production and subsequent success. It represents a Labor of Love. In it I take a pride which has never been exceeded—or even equalled—in all the years Fox Film Corporation has been issuing pictures."

Topics of the Day, the Pathe news and an educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Today's bill consists of Buck Jones in The Cowboy and the Countess, the Green Archer a Van Bibber comedy and the Pathe news.

Feature Moving Picture at Y. M. C. A.

A genuinely interesting six reel feature historic moving picture will be shown tomorrow (Sunday) in the big gymnasium of the local Y. M. C. A. The title of the picture is "The Heart of a Hero," in which Robert Warwick takes the part of Nathan Hale. The story opens at the quaint New England schoolhouse where Nathan Hale is engaged as a master, respected and revered by all. The peace of the community is being threatened by the impending trouble between England and the colonies and the time has come when each colonist must decided with which side he will cast his lot. Nathan Hale, convinced that the colonial cause is just throws his heart and soul into the Revolution, forsaking everything else dear to him. The spirit of sacrifice exhibited by the country schoolmaster and his sweetheart, Alice Adams (Gail Kane) up to the point where he renders his immortal speech is symbolic of the devotion that inspired the colonists in those dark and uncertain days with the fire of patriotism that has, and always will spur Americans on to greater achievements. No true American can help but be profoundly impressed by the patriotism display in this remarkable characterization of Nathan Hale. Men and women, and boys and girls fourteen and over are invited. This picture will be specially interesting to the older boys and girls as well as adults.

Admission of course is free, and the doors will be opened at 3:30 p. m.

RECOVERY IN STOCK PRICES

NEW YORK, March 26—(AP)—Stock prices headed upward in today's market, but the rally was stubbornly contested by bear traders who hammered the public utility and food shares, driving several of them to new low levels for the year. Closing quotations were irregular, numerous gains of 1 to nearly 6 points in active issues being counteracted by a smaller number or net declines ranging from 1 to 6 points.

Trading showed a marked falling in volume, the day's sales aggregating 1,677,400 shares, as compared with 2,301,000 yesterday and 3,705,600 the day before.

The recovery in the general list was influenced by the widespread speculative belief that the market was entitled to a technical rally after the recent sustained decline and by the improvement in credit conditions. Call money dropped to 4 1-2 per cent. after renewing at 5; brokers' loans drop ped $81,660,000 in the week ending March 17 brinaing the total reduction since January 6 to $337,176 000 and the reserve ratio of the New York Federal Reserve bank increased from 77.5 to 81.4 per cent. in the last week.

The weekly mercantile reviews reported several encouraging features Bradstreet's says that "warmer weather, some improvement in country roads and the nearer approach of Easter have given a slight impetus to wholesale and retail buying." Dun's states that "lower prices for both securities and commodities are a prominent phrase as the first quarter of the year nears an ending," adding that "the practice of buying mainly for well defined needs, which has been rigidly adhered to, has kept supplies of goods in a position where quick turnovers are possible and there is no evidence of a general decrease in the public purchasing power."

Trading in today's market was of a nervous character particularly in the motors and high priced industrials. Stocks purchased for a turn on the upside were quickly sold on the first sign of weakness and short sales, in many instances were hastily covered in indications of a rally.

Hudson opened 1 1-4 higher at 83 and up to 87 3-4 dropped to 82 3-4 and then rebounded to 83. General Motors closed 5-8 higher at 119 3-8 after fluctuating between 118 1-2 and 120 1-4. Mack Trucks sold as high as 113 1-4, slipped back to 110 1-2 and then advanced to 110 3-4, up 1-2 on the day. General Electric closed 3 points higher at 299 1-8 after selling between 296 1-2 and 304 1-2. United States Steel common closed 3 4 higher at 129 1-2 after having sold as high as 130 1-8 and as low as 129 5-8.

The morning drive on the public utilities was predicated on the theory that current levels were out of line with their yield and earning power. Such stocks as American Water Works, North American company, Public Service of New Jersey and Columbia Gas were hammered down 2 to nearly 6 points but all made partial recovery from their low record.

Liquidation of the sugar shares apparently reflected the recent weakness in the raw sugar market which, how ever improved today. American sugar Refining fell 3 1-8 points to 97 a new low for the year but recovered half of this. Another severe bear attack on Wool-worth's ruined that issue from near 5 points to 39, as compared with a high of 83 3-8 earlier in the year, but rallied to 33 1-2 at the close.

Commodity markets were mixed active wheat futures rallied 3-4 to 3 3-4 cents a bushel May wheat closing at $1.61. Cotton was 4 to 8 points net low er. The coffee and sugar markets were steen.

Time money attracted slightly being quoted at 4 5-8 to 4 3-4 instead of 4 1-2 to 4 5-8. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

A sharp break of over seven points in French francs, which carried them down to 3.49 cents duplicating the extreme low record for all time established in March 1924 featured the irregularly lower foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held firm around $4.85 7-8 but most of the continental rates showed sllght recessions.

TAFTVILLE

One of the most enjoyable of the [illegible] get-togethers was the [illegible] entertainment given for [illegible] and their guests by the Pontoosuc Wheel club at the Naturalization room on Pratte avenue Thursday evening. Over a hundred members gathered for the event, which proved to be a royal good time for all who attended.

Before the interesting entertainment was scheduled to take place in the [illegible] there was delicious luncheon served in the dining room. This was served cafeteria style, and consisted of ham sandwiches, cheese sandwiches, hot frankfurters, pickles, potato salad, cake, soda, coffee and cigars.

After the luncheon, the members retired to the hall where the programme was opened by selections played by the Pontoosuc Wheel club orchestra. Following this there was an exhibition of the Charleston and other dances by Albert Labarre and Caesar Martin. These were followed by George Seidel, comedian and monologuist. Mr. Seidel told a number of new stories and jokes on his record, which always go with the audience.

Joseph Tremblay, Jr., and Caesar Martin played a number of harmonica duets. Their repertoire included all the numerous up-to-date melodies, as well as something classical, and they received a big hand. Fred Holdsworth, who was chairman of the committee that had charge of the entertainment, introduced St. Mary's trio, Edward Connelly, Nicholas T. Spellman and Horace Corning. They gave a very fine programme, with solos by all three of the members and Mr. Connelly a number of stories, all of which the members greatly enjoyed.

Robert Pepin made an announcement of the charity dance which the [illegible] are arranging for the benefit of William W. Peabody, who [illegible] and a feature title, entitled [illegible] can raise enough money to purchase both. He asked the support of the Club in this matter.

Joseph Lamere gave an imitation [illegible] of a cornet and various musical instruments. He also sang a short song. Those were Thomas John B Benoit, who gave a buck and wing dance, Frederick Bangs and a violin solo by William Roach accompanied on the piano by Edward Kelley.

Mrs. [illegible] of St. Mary's T. A. society gave a well attended whist party in their rooms in Prattville Tuesday afternoon. The prizes were awarded as follows: Miss Alice Fontaine, first; Mrs. Margaret Donahue, second; Mrs. Anna Yeomans, third. The first consolation went to William Murphy and the second to James Murphy. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge, consisting of Miss Agnes Murphy, Miss Anna Donahue and Miss Mary Ward. Members of the committee in charge of the affair were [illegible]

WILD MAN MYTH IN NORTH STONINGTON

North Stonington's "ape-man" who is reported to have been prowling about in the North Stonington woods for about two weeks, is still at large and the chances for his discovery or capture are still remote. Inhabitants of the rural settlement are divided in their theories concerning the identity of the strange creature. Game Warden George Denison of Stonington said Friday that he scoured the North Stonington woods for two days in the early part of the week and was unable to detect any signs of the man or animal, whichever he may be. Lafayette F. Main, one of North Stonington's most prominent farmers, says that the "ape-man" is merely the product of someone's imagination. His credulity in the matter extends only as far as the mysterious cries heard from the swamp. These, he says, may be caused by foxes whose high pitch howls are not uncommon. To show how absurb the story is, he continued, the tale was first started that the creature was a horse, in an upside down posture, pawing the air with its hoofs.

The report was first heard that the "ape-man" frequented the vicinity of the Miner farm, estate of the late H. D. Miner. One of Mr. Miner's daughters was said to have seen the creature but she flatly denied that such reports were true. A man was seen near the farm, but there was no doubt about his bein a man, she said. Furthermore he went his way peacefully, didn't yell; nor did he jump off of ledges or haystacks.

HI-Y CLUB HAS TEAMS IN ATTENDANCE CONTEST

The Hi-Y Club held a large and enthusiastic meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening. The meeting was called to order by President Frank Moseley by singing one verse of America. The Blessing was asked by Thomas Baldwin. The song period was in the hands of "Ted" Moore assisted by Edward Smith at the piano, Reginald Laubin with the violin, and Douglas Hunt with the clarinet.

A fine report was read by Secretary Harry Waters. The standing of the teams in the attendance contest was read as follows: Harry Waters 72; Otis Fellows and Elliot Granam tied with 62 points; Lester Armstrong 52; Frank Moseley 49; John Bell 43.

The club divided into two groups for Bible study under the leadership of Henry D. Johnson and Boys' Secretary L. H. Davis.

EVENING OF CARDS UNDER GROTTO AUSPICES

Twenty tables of whist and pinochle were in play Friday evening in Grotto hall at the enjoyable evening of cards given by Nemrod Grotto. Those to take the prizes in whist were Mrs Lloyd G. Brothers and Miss Berwick W. S. Spencer and William W. Tanner, and the door prize was awarded to Mrs. George N. Chappell. Fruit punch was served and dancing concluded the evening for which The Boomers orchestra played. The entertainment committee in charge consisted: Louis Brown, Robert A. Gray, Jesse Jones and Elmer Johnson.

NORWICH TOWN

Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church is to be the officiating clergyman at the Sheltering Arms service Saturday afternoon. The choir of that church will provide the singing.

Stereoptican slides on Hawaii will be shown; also pictures of Anchednagar, India, accompanied by an explanatory talk.

At Anchednagar, a former active member of this society, Miss Gertrude S. Avery, is located, being engaged in the missionary field under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Miss Avery is on her second year's work, having left Norwich in the fall of 1924.

About seven o'clock Thursday morning a Norwich Town resident attracted by the squaking of wild geese, discovered a flock of 28 making their flight north, from the vicinity of the fair grounds. The geese were flying high and at first from a distance looked quite small. As they approached they made an interesting sight passing through the sky, folowing the leader, which had the greater number in its wake, at regular distance apart. The lines were very straight and by the naked eye the distance between the birds seemed almost exactly equal.

Carl O. Small of Waterford was a caller on friends in Norwich Town on Friday.

Will Address State Convention

Agent L. M. Crandall and associate agents Otho G. Chase, Lawrence E. Millen and Mrs. L. M. Crandall will attend the convention of New England Mutual Agents in Hartford this (Saturday) morning where Mr. Crandall is on the program to give an address on "Selling Plans" for life insurance underwriters.

Mr. Crandall has been selected to speak on this topic at the Hartford Golf club, where the meeting is to be held, because of the fact that he has been a consistent producer with the company ever since he became associated with the New England agency in 1920. He has just completed a three and one-half year record of consecutive weekly production. He was awarded a bronze medal last year for state leadership and for holding 45th place in the United States among New England agents; and this year he has stepped up to 42nd position among New England Mutual agents in America and will receive the bronze medal for the second time at the Hartford convention. For three consecutive years he has won the old policy holders's contest which is held in June of each year. This year he won by producing $105,000 dollars worth of business in that month.

Mr. Crandall is delighted to win for the second time the coveted prize bronze medal which is given by the company to those agents whose production reaches $300,000 to $500,000 in paid-for and accepted business for the year just closed.

Spoke to Student Nurses

Miss Abby P. Carley, bacterologist at the Backus hospital, gave an interesting talk to the public health nurses of the city and the student nurses Thursday evening. Mrs. Carley's subject was "The Laboratory, It's Scope, Function and Relation to Hospital Efficiency."

SUSTAINED INTEREST IN REV. J. R. DANFORTH TALKS

There not only is no abatement in the interest in the splendid series of lenten addresses by Dr. J. Romeyn Danforth at the local Y. M. C. A. but there are many evidences that it is increasing with each weekly meeting.

At the sixth in the series Friday noon, Nathan A. Gibbs presided. The hymn used was "I Gave My Life for Thee", and this was followed with a fervent prayer by C. Edward Smith, after which Hugh Kinder rendered sweetly, the hymn, "Art Thou Weary, Art Thou Languid". Mr. Gibbs in a very pleasing manner told of the genuine pleasure it was to have Dr. Danforth for his fourth annual series of noon meetings at the Norwich Y. M. C. A.

The topic of the address was "The Power Above Us", and among other things the speaker said: "Next Friday noon completes the series, and it will be I trust a fitting climax to the seven talks, and we shall consider "The Power of the Cross." Today we think of the power above us. Those who have gone up far in aeroplanes tell us that in a cloud they have sometimes lost the sense of which way is up. It might be very disastrous to think you were rising when in reality you are falling. It is so spiritually and morally. Paul thought he was doing God service when he was doing the opposite. We have to have some consciousness that there is a power above us before we realize that there is an up and also a down to life. You cannot even prove our own existence by mathematics much less the existence of God. But unless one has sunk to the very bottom of all human possibilities he can feel a downward pull and know it is downward. We know there are worse depths than we yet have reached. No just in the opposite direction is "up", if we may call it so, and upward is God.

"The story of creation tells of the tree of knowledge of good and evil. To know the one is to know the other, but to do the one does not mean to do the other also. Christ knew evil but never did it. He resisted all temptation but he understood what others suffered in their fall. One of the descriptions of prayer calls it "the upward glancing of an eye." It is the soul reaching upward. And he who reaches upward, even though his reach be very short, touches God. He is not far from any one of us. How awkward we were when boys we stretched ourselves at very inconvenient moments. And yet one grows by stretching, bones and sinews and muscles are extended to full length and given a chance. It may be that some prayers are very awkwardly expressed. A man once told me he had been praying like the devil. And what he meant was a very good thing. It was from the very depth of his being that he had renewed toward God, and God heard him.

"Our knowledge grows by experience and action. Do the thing we know and we learn more. Reach toward God and by that very power we prove his power toward us."

Dr. Danford closed the meeting with prayer and the benediction.

In this difficulty, Choirmaster Bruckseh of St. Andrews kindly agreed to present the Vincent cantata with the singers who had given it at St. Andrews.

MAKING ENROLMENTS FOR TEACHER TRAINING COURSE

Enrollment is being made in the various church schools of the city and surrounding communities for the teacher training course which will begin on the Thursday after Easter. Professor O. W. Warmingham of Boston university will be the dean of the school and conduct the assembly period between the first and second sessions of each evening.

In Mr. Denny's course on the New Testament the text boo kis The Worker and His Bible by Barclay, and for his second period Mr. Denny will use Weigle and Tweedy's little book on Training the Devotional Life. It will facilitate the work of the committee if those who are to use the text books would report their needs for the same to the secretary, Rev. F. C. Dunbar as soon as possible that a sufficient quantity may be secured.

The sessions of the training course will be held in the United Church rooms on Thursday evenings at 7:30 o'clock. The course is being conducted under the auspices of the Norwich Council of Religious Education.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

AMERICAN LEGION

Connecticut department of the American legion with a quota of 12,027 members is forging ahead in a nation wide campaign to make 1926 the greatest membership year in the history of the organization nationally.

This department had attained 35.15 per cent of its quota according to membership returns on the books of the national treasurer on March 15. In accordance with the national membership program the department quotas for 1925 were set considerably in excess of their 1925 total membership figure.

Florida was the first department to surpass its quota, going "over the top" in quota on March 11.

National membership contests already finished and now under way will play a big part in making 1926 the record membership year, legion officials declare. The D'Olier, MacNider and Emery contests, ending 30 days prior to the national convention in October, are inspiring departments to greater membership efforts.

The D'Olier contest will be won by the department enrolling the highest percentage of its eligible veterans. The MacNider trophy will go to the department attaining the highest percentage of its average membership for the four preceding years.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS

Comprehensive additions to the group buildings at the Veterans of Foreign was new national home for widows and orphans of ex-service men located at Eaton Rapids, Michigan, are projected this spring according to the announcement of Albert J. Rabins, past commander-in-chief of the V. F. W. and president of the national home, following the recent annual meeting of the officers and trustees of the home. Ground has already been broken for a New York state building at the home. Two state of Michigan buildings will also be erected this spring and further additions are projected by the department of Pennsylvania V. F. W. and others.

The basic principle in the operation of the home will be the maintenance of family groups, especially the keeping of mother and children together. Individual homes or "building units" are to be erected, supplementing the buildings already in use, so that widow and children may live together. In cases where an ex-service man is disabled to such an extent that he cannot support and maintain his family arrangements will be made to accomodate him with his family.

Provision has been made for future expansion so that the home can eventually accomodate 1,500 children. Athletic grounds, a community center, a school and a community church are included in the plans.

MAN SHOT IN CAPTURE OF AUTOMOBILE RUM TRAIN

Connecticut and Massachusetts Troopers Fired on Car Near the State Line at Southwick, Mass.—Wounded Man Was Taken to Springfield Hospital—His Five Companions Each Furnished Bail of $500—A Fourth Automobile, the Pilot of the Train, Ran Through Police Ambush and got Away.

SOUTHWICK, Mass., March 28—(AP)—One man was wounded and five others were arrested when Massachusetts and Connecticut state troopers fired on and captured an automobile rum train near the state line here today.

The wounded man, Samuel Cafara, of Springfield, was taken to a Springfield hospital under police guard. Buckshot from a riot gun struck his left arm. His condition was not considered serious. His five companions, taken from three automobiles, furnished bail of $500 each for appearance in the Westfield district court tomorrow. All were charged with illegal possession and transportation of liquor.

A fourth automobile, the pilot of the train, ran through the police ambush and got away after a chase. The other machines attempted to follow through, but the officers halted them with a barrage from their riot guns. The officers confiscated 150 gallons of liquor and the automobiles.

DIVERGENT OPINIONS ON WORKING OF PROHIBITION

WASHINGTON, March 28.—(AP)—The proposal of Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, for a national referendum on prohibition was described today by Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon league, as a "vain attempt to wring booze from a bone-dry constitution." It is impractical and meaningless, he said, and "it is probably merely intended for propaganda, without any hope that congress will seriously consider it."

One other statement, coming from the joint legislative committee, whose counsel, Julian Codman of Boston, will discuss the legal phases of prohibition before the coming senate committee hearing on modification, comprised the week end discussion on the subject. The statement said Dr. Codmen's witnesses had not been decided upon but that his "associates have prepared a very strong case", adding:

"The people of this country know that the law as it stands has been a complete failure and are now looking for remedy. I am sure that we can propose changes that will be, if adopted, a long step in the right direction."

"If the wets want a referendum," Mr. Wheeler's statement continued, "let them nominate wet senators and congressmen, as they have been doing the past six years with the increasing numbers of defeats at each successive election. What provisions of the constitution authorizes congress to take such a referendum, or to command the governor of a state to certify returns of the vote?"

Mr. Wheeler also attacked the proposal of Senator Bruce, democrat, Maryland, to repeal the 18th amendment and to substitute federal control of liquor in states having no prohibition laws. Such a condition, he declared, "would make Uncle Sam the greatest brewer and bartender in the world. It is legislative monstrosity to give the liquor barons a perpetual lease by which they could drench the nation in alcohol. Not six states in the union would give it serious consideration."

PAINTING MAY PROVE TO BE AN ORIGINAL RUBENS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28—(AP)—A time worn painting, which Michael J. Berdnikoff, a restorer of art objects, believes may be an original reubens of the 15th century, has been found in a club store room here, Berdnikoff, announced today.

The painting, Berdnikoff said, is on ragged burlap 46 to 73 inches, in size, and depicts a sleeping woman covered by a blue drapery upheld by Cupids with a satyr in the foreground raising his fingers to his lips to caution the Cupids to silence.

"Venus and the Satyr," is the name of the painting, which had been disfigured greatly by artists other than the original painter, who had daubed several pictures on the canvas, Berdnikoff said.

Berdnikoff recently announced that he had discovered the original "Madonna and Child" by Raphael, and "Mother of Phillipe II, of Spain" by Antonio Moro.

He submitted these paintings to expert scrutiny and they are being studied by connoisseurs to learn whether they are originals.

TWO MEN WERE KILLED BY SHOOTING AT LAWRENCE, MASS.

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 28—(AP)—Confusing stories and lack of definite clues today hampered the local police in their investigation of a street shooting in which two men were killed here last night. Sam Manzio, whose real name is believed to be Salvatore Alenza of Boston and Harry W. Trumbull of Lawrence were the victims.

Manzio and another man who escaped became involved in an argument which ended in gun play. In an exchange of half a dozen shots which threw the neighborhood into a panic Manzio dropped with bullets in his chest and stomach, while a stray bullet struck Trumbull as he drove by in his automobile. Trumbull died a few hours later and the bullet taken from his body apparently came from Manzio's revolver.

In an effort to identify Manzio as Alenza the police sent his photographs and fingerprints to Boston. Alenza once served time for killing a man.

Varied and confusing descriptions of Manzio's assailant gave the police little help in their efforts to apprehend him.

SENATORS KEEP SECRET THE VOTE ON WOODLOCK

WASHINGTON, March 28—(AP)—Senators who object to letting the country know howd they voted on the nomination of Thomas F. Woodlock of New York, as a member of the interstate commerce commission, are not yet out of the woods.

Although they blocked several moves yesterday in the senate to make the vote public, Senator Pittman, of Nevada, a democratic member of the interstate commerce committee, now gives notice that at the next executive session he will launch all over again his fight to have the ballot on confirmation printed.

This senator and a large number of others who opposed confirmation want to tell their constituents that they voted against Woodlock, but under the senate rules if the divulge what transpires in an executive session they are liable to expulsion.

Few senators take this rule seriously, however, and whenever a matter of any public moment is considered behind closed doors practically everything that transpired is known within a short time after the doors are opened.

THREE RUNAWAY YOUTHS KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

HOUSTON, Tex., March 28—(AP)—What is believed to have been a runaway exploit of three Eureka, Tex., youths ended in death early today when their bodies were found in wreckage of International and Great Northern freight train No. 56, which was derailed at Malone, Tex.

The youths were:

Ernest Freeman, 15, Riley Hunt, 15, and Jesse Glidden, 17.

Twelve box cars were derailed. The cause has not yet been determined.

When the cars left the track they plowed along the right-of-way and then toppled down an incline.

The youths are believed to have been caught underneath a car as it turned over. The train was running between Houston and Fort Worth.

THE COUNTESS OF CATHCART HAS WITHDRAWN HER PLAY

NEW YORK, March 28—(AP)—The countess of Cathcart has withdrawn her play, "Ashes of Love" from Broadway after a week of scanty audiences.

"I'm closing 'Ashes of Love' because it is bad," she said. "I know that because I had very little experience in playwriting. The play, however, wasn't the same that I had written. It was changed so much. I shall have another shot at writing one and hope to do better."

The play had its American premiere in Washington under the banner of Earl Carroll. The countess brought the piece to New York after repurchasing the rights to it from Mr. Carroll with what she said was the last of her jewels, a $20,000 pearl necklace. She did not announce her plans for the immediate future.

LAST HONORS TO LATE QUEEN MOTHER LOUISE

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, March 28.—(AP)—The Danish people today paid last honors to the late Queen Mother Louise, who was laid to rest in Glucksburg chapel of the Roskilde Cathedral, ancient burial place of Danish royalties, in the presence of a great gathering of the Scandinavian royal families and representatives of foreign countries, including the members of the American legation.

The funeral cortege, escorted by military detachments left Amalienborg Castle and proceeded to the railway station for the journey to Roskilde about 31 miles from Copenhagen. Great crowds had gathered and all the houses were draped with black. Brief religious ceremonies were held just before the start, a more elabora e ceremony for the royal family having been conducted at the castle the previous night, with le ing opera singers forming the choir.

The kings and crown princes of Denmark and Norway, with the crown prince of Sweden, Prince Arthur of Connaught and other princes followed the hearse afoot, while the royal ladies, including the queens of Denmark and Norway were in carriages. Beautiful wreaths surrounded the coffin.

On arrival at Roskilde, the body of the late dowager queen was received in a scene of solemn beauty by the whole chapter of the cathedral in official robes, but at the king's special request the cathedral was not draped.

The funeral sermon by the royal chaplain, Dr. Fenger, gave a touching picture of the late dowager queen's solemn joy at having lived to welcome back to Denmark that Danish section of Schlesvig, which by a plebiscite in 1920 elected to come under the Danish flag.

CIGAR WAS TOO STRONG FOR AN ADVENTUROUS YOUTH

NEW YORK, March 28.—(AP)—Two runaway boys of 14 and 16, from Springfield, Mass., today found that a black cigar is a symbol with two meanings.

"Worn with ha certain jaunty air for a few moments, it signified the rover, the cosmopolite. After that it meant the bleak end—in a police station—or high dreams of romance in the South Seas.

"My pal George," Donald Shea, 16, gravely told Policeman Saskek, "is dying."

George Jukes, 14, lying in a hallway on Third avenue, confirmed the diagnosis with a groan. There was a smoldering black cigar — a villainous "two-fer" by George's side. Policeman Sasek drew his own conclusions, and applied fresh air.

Death of Pretender to The Throne of France

Louis Philippe, Duke of Orleans, Succumbed to Pneumonia at Palemo, Sicily.

PALERMO, Sicily, March 28 — (AP)—Louis Philippe, duke of Orleans and pretender to the throne of France, died today at his villa here from pneumonia. He had been ill only a few days. His sister, former Queen Amelie of Portugal, was at the bedside.

Other sisters of the duke, Princess Isabelle and Princess Helen, Duchess of Aoste, will reach here tomorrow, and his uncle, the duke of Guise, on Tuesday.

The duke, of Orleans arrived here March 13 on one of his frequent visits and intended to remain for a time at his villa which he inherited.

The duke of Orleans, who was one of the two pretenders to the French throne, was the great grandson of the last king of France, Louise Philippe, and son of the late Comte de Paris. He was born in Twickenham, England, in 1869. In 1896 he married the Archduchess Marie Dorothea Amelia, a distant relative of Emperor Francis Joseph. In 1892 she sued the duke for maintenance and reimbursement of large sums she had advanced to him. Louis Philippe was driven out of Belgium in 1908, on the charge of having "abused the hospitality of the Belgian nation by using its soil as a base for his attacks on the friendly government of France."

Shortly after that he was active in an attempt to fit out an expedition to the north pole. At the beginning of the great war he appeared in the lifelight in the role of the prince of spendthrifts. He had already spent several fortunes, and, finding himself short of money, offered the forest of Dreux—a part of his estate—for sale to the republic for $2,400,000.

The French government refused the request that he be granted permission to enlist in the foreign legion under an assumed name early in the European war. He then sought to enlist in the British, Belgian and Russian armies, but the military authorities of those countries, out of courtesy to the French government, refused to accept him.

In the later years of his life he was reported to be suffering from various affections, even mental incompetency. Last year the duke in a letter expressed his sorrow at the thought of his 40 years of exile, and protested against the injustice of allowing common malefactors to recross the frontier under possible amnesty while he was inexorably barred by the sheer accident of birth. Of that 40 year exile period the duke spent most of the time in England.

CHAPMAN PETITION IS TO BE HEARD IN NEW HAVEN TODAY

Federal Judge Thomas Will Be Petitioned For a Writ of Habeas Corpus—Earl F. Wetmore, a Chemist of Lynn, Mass., Declares That He Saw a Man Believed to Be Chapman in Grand Central Station, New York, Several Hours Before the Murder of Patrolman Skelly in New Britain—Preparations Are Being Made For the Hanging of Chapman at Wethersfield April 5.

NEW HAVEN, March 28—(AP)—The scene of the endeavors of the lawyers representing Gerald Chapman, three reprieved murderers to be first to escape the gallows, shifts to New Haven tomorrow when Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas will be petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus. The petition proposed a conference of the condemned man's legal staff in the U. M. Wilcox office of Stamford, Mass., and prepared by him will be ready for presentation by the Massachusetts attorney.

Meantime, other legal moves are planned by counsel to keep their client from hanging April 6, are being perfected. Mr Wilcox announced he had a superior court judge on Friday, with a writ of error, which claimed that error occurred in the federal proceedings before Chapman was tried a year ago in the Hartford county superior court. A third court action which counsel said last night would be taken this week is a petition for a new trial on grounds of newly discovered evidence.

The latter proposal has been strengthened by the news of the getting of testimony which counsel claim would support the condemned man's plea. Frederick J. Gerood, of New York, senior counsel for the defense, Joseph M. Freedman of Hartford and Charles W. Murphy, of Durham, assisted the court, all have been working on the appeal.

The latest person to come forward with new evidence is Earl F. Wetmore, 26 year old chemist of Lynn, Mass., who last night declared that he saw a man he believed to be Chapman in the Grand Central station in New York the night of October 11, 1924 several hours before the murder of Patrolman James Skelly in New Britain for which Chapman was convicted.

Early last week Chapman's lawyers announced that they had received a message from a Charles W. Gregory, who declared he had made a train trip with Chapman from Springfield, Mass., to New York on October 11, 1924. Gregory's story as to when he made the acquaintance of the convicted murderer's aide was to the effect that on the Springfield to New York train Chapman told him he had killed a man in New Britain and was on the lam. Gregory's story was denied by Chapman's counsel.

Wetmore has said that he heard someone greet a man whom he believes to be Chapman with "Hello there, Chapman" in the Grand Central station between 6 and 11 o'clock on the night of October 11. Relatives of Wetmore's parents in New Haven say the young man "mixed up in some murder trial" was given as the reason for his not coming forward with his testimony.

The petition for a writ of habeas corpus which will come up tomorrow claims that the federal officials did not have jurisdiction in the charge of murder in the state courts. It will be the second time Chapman's case has been brought before Judge Thomas who on December 11, 1925, refused to grant Chapman a writ of habeas corpus and ordered his return to the Atlantic penitentiary to serve the remainder of his life imprisonment sentence for bank robbery.

Judge Thomas expects to hear the petition in the regular course of business tomorrow. Legal steps to stay the would pass upon the petition are also expected to be raised.

MANY WISH TO WITNESS EXECUTION OF CHAPMAN

WETHERSFIELD, March 28—(AP)—While the morbid curious seek admission to his hangings on April 6 to behold Chapman, mad robber and convicted murderer, quietly passes the time in his cell in the same prison here reading and writing.

An unusual number of requests have been made by individuals to see the execution which, unless Chapman's lawyers are successful in temporarily will take place a few minutes after midnight April 6. Most of these persons have not even a remote connection with the bandit by his offenses to be removed from the shadow of the gallows for Chapman's removal execution have been made. Should Chapman hang, he will be the first to stretch the rope of a new gallow. A canvas dummy weighing several pounds more than the condemned man now dangles at the end of the rope.

Chapman, whose mask of indifference during his trial and at other times during his career as a bandit has caused wide comment, is apparently unperturbed over the nearness of the day set for his death. Today when the prison chaplain, while attending to his Sunday duties at the institution, stopped to chat a moment with Chapman, he found the prisoner asleep. The condemned man passed Sunday as he does any other day of the week, reading or writing as the mood strikes him.

Much of his writings are verses. The books he reads are of a serious nature. The periodicals allowed the prisoners are also read by the bandit.

There is no apparent sign of mental worry according to reports from all who see the man in his cell. He is still hopeful that his case warrants the favorable attention of the courts and that he may yet be proved innocent of the killing of a New Britain policeman for which he was convicted and sentenced to be hanged.

When Chapman entered the state prison at Wethersfield more than a year ago he was known to be an agnostic. Several days each week he is visited by Rev. M. F. Barry, of the Sacred Heart church, who is also Roman Catholic chaplain at the prison. Chapman looks forward to these visits and seemingly enjoys the conversations with the priest, but whether he has changed his attitude toward religion is not known.

Chapman receives many letters all of which are censored before being given to him. His only visitors from the outside are his lawyers, all or two or three of whom visit him several times a week. They converse with him through the bars of his cell with a guard a few feet away.

TO TESTIFY HE SAW CHAPMAN NIGHT BEFORE THE MURDER

LYNN, Mass., March 28—(AP)—Earl F. Wetmore, 26 year old lunch cart worker and student of chemistry, is waiting to go to Hartford, Conn., and testify that he saw Gerald Chapman in the Grand Central station, New York, on the night before the murder of which Chapman was convicted.

He made this additional "hop" on the petition of Chapman's attorneys that may enable him to complete this year the day in order to get back of his earlier action. This fear for his job and the reluctance of his parents to have it become "mixed up in a murder trial" had prevented his coming forward, Attorney Harry C. Mamber said.

Mamber visited Wetmore in a Peabody home last night and secured an affidavit setting forth that between six and 11 o'clock on the night of October 11, 1925 or about 12 hours before the murder in New Britain, Conn. Wetmore was waiting for a friend in the railroad station. There he heard a man greeted with "Hello there, Chapman" and later identified the man addressed with published pictures of Chapman when he was sought for the New Britain shooting.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH DEFRAUDING FLA. BANKS

NEW YORK, March 28—(AP)—With defrauding Florida banks of $3,000 through bad checks and violation of the Mann act, Mrs. Doris Berne, wife of a plastic surgeon, Dr. Louis P. Berne, was arrested today with two men, one of them the man with whom she is said to have eloped to Florida a year ago, leaving her six-year-old son Allison Berne, ill with pneumonia.

Dr. Berne, who said he had forgiven his wife after her return to him, accompanied her to the police station, where she was held with Elliott Jaffe, 21, her brother, and Paul Rosenthal, 32, with whom Dr. Berne said she had eloped.

Dr. Berne declared that his wife was merely "a tool of Rosenthal," whom he described as the son of a "very wealthy shirt manufacturer." She eloped with Rosenthal in February, 1925, Dr. Berne said, taking $45,000 from a safe deposit vault. She was gone two months, the surgeon said, and then he learned that Rosenthal had deserted her. He sent her money in Florida and she returned to him.

"I forgave her because I knew she was a good woman," Dr. Berne said. "I don't know what kind of influence Rosenthal had over her and her brother."

The arrests were made in co-operation with federal agents, who said all three had been identified by bank officials here.

Mrs. Berne and Rosenthal were charged with violation of the Mann act, as a result of Dr. Verne's story of the elopement to Florida.

Dr Berne and Herman Jaffe, who conferred with the surgeon at the police station were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct upon the complaint of a newspaper photographer who alleged that they smashed his camera. Dr. Berne and Mr. Jaffee are said to have engaged in a free-for-all fight with photographers and reporters when a photographer took their picture as they were talking together. Mr. Jaffe, who is 57, gave his address as Hoboken, N. J.

CIVILIAN ATTORNEY WILL REPRESENT COL. WILLIAMS

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 28—(AP)—Col Alexander Williams will be represented by a civilian attorney when he faces charges of intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer at a court martial here. It has been announced that Lewis H. Kirby, former district attorney of San Diego county would represent the accused officer.

It was understood from sources close to Col. Williams that his defense would be that he had been ill and had been at the navy hospital here on the very day that he gave a dinner in honor of Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler of the Marine corps. General Butler who came here to relieve Col. Williams as commander of the marine base preferred the charges against the colonel. It was said that cocktails were served at the dinner and that after the dinner Col. Williams is alleged to have appeared at a hotel in an intoxicated condition. It was said that part of the defense would be that Col. Williams' condition was due to his illness and not to liquor.

Owing to limited space available at the fleet administration building where the trial will be held, it is probable that not more than 25 civilians will be admitted to the trial.

Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, president of the courtmartial board is expected to order the court convened the day the cruiser Seattle arrives from Central American waters April 6. It is stated however, that the case may not actually get under way until April 12.

NEW LONDON TRUCK CRASHES THROUGH A STONE WALL

WILLIMANTIC, March 28—Two New London men miraculously escaped severe injury, shortly after four o'clock, Saturday afternoon, when a Reo express truck of the New London headquarters of the Standard Oil company, in which they were riding, crashed through a stone wall and fell on its side against the home of James D. Simpson, about one-half mile east of Williams' Crossing. The driver of the truck, Pilly Daniels of New London will be in police court here Monday morning on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. It was said that the truck was being driven from this city to New London. As the machine rounded the curve over one hundred feet from the Simpson home it appeared to have taken a diagonal course and headed straight through the stone wall. Ramming through the stones it capsized and in falling on its side the top was smashed against the house, which is about eight feet from the roadway. The Simpson home is a small portable affair, it stands on wheels which have been jacked in for the present. Mrs. Simpson is a retired employe of the postal department, having been R. F. D. carrier in Franklin for many years. For a wonder the shock did not disturb the tiny home. The only damage to the truck was a smashed top and broken glass on the right side of the cab. Daniels was uninjured, but his companion suffered a cut on the lip. Residents of the vicinity said that both men had been drinking heavily, crawling out of the machine the pair started walking toward New London. Shortly after the accident Federal Agent Stanton L. Briggs arrived and was informed of the circumstances. He notified the police department here and Officer A. Hurley was sent to conduct an investigation. Word was sent on to New London to have Daniels apprehended and this was done by the police of that city Saturday night. Daniels furnished a bond.

Engine Company No. 1 answered to two still alarms for chimney fires on Sunday. The first call was at the residence 857 Mountain street owned by Mrs. L. M. Wrden and occupied by George Willis. Six gallons of chemicals were used. The second call was at 133 Union street, in a house occupied by Salim Haddad and owned by Delphis Boucher. Nine gallons of chemicals were used in this case.

The proprietor is being held under bonds pending the outcome of an analysis of the beer to be made by an expert at Connecticut Agricultural college. In the event that the conviction is beyond the "near" stage a charge of keeping with intent to sell will be preferred against the man.

He took his eyes off the road for a moment to glance at a road sign, and in that instant his car got off the road and into the fence. He said: A plea of not guilty was entered for him. BURGLAR JUMPS FROM PORCH TO OFFICER URQUHART'S HEAD

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 28—A burglar who jumped off a front veranda roof at the home of Herbert H. Pepler, Broad street, just before 9 o'clock Saturday onto the head and shoulders of State Officer Ross V. Urquhart was being sought throughout the eastern part of the state by many officers Sunday.

Officer Urquhart went down under the hurtling weight of a desperate man who was facing almost certain capture and a prison sentence and who managed to effect an escape under circumstances as unusual as has been recorded in any case hereabouts in years.

It was about 5:30 when Mrs. Edward Berthiaume, who lives just across the street from the Pepler home, saw a suspicious acting man sizing up the homes in the vicinity. Standing in her darkened parlor, she watched the man until she was practically certain he intended something portending no good to the neighborhood.

Mrs. Berthiaume, being alone, telephoned to Mrs. Frederick A. Dubuc, resident next home to the south on the opposite side of the street from the Pepler house. She inquired and was told that Mr. Dubuc was at home and asked him to watch the man, who was skulking about the Pepler place. From this homes across the street Mrs. Berthiaume and Mr. and Mrs. Dubuc watched the man. He tried the cellar door, and quit there at the barking of the dog kept within. He tried the front door, windows and every possible avenue of entry, crouching down or otherwise hiding himself as a car drove by or any person walked along the street.

Satisfied that the man was bent on burglary, Mr. Dubuc telephoned the state police at the North Main street barracks and told them of what was going on. In due time Officers Urquhart and Carmody responded.

Meanwhile the watchers had seen the burglar open a window on the south side of the house and enter. Their vision was aided by a bright moon in an almost cloudless sky.

Officer Carmody went around to the back of the house while Officer Urquhart was at the front. It seemed impossible that the burglar could get away. The man must have sensed what was going on, for he suddenly appeared through a window leading out on the veranda roof and was met by a command of Officer Urquehart to put up his hands. He did not do this, but hunted the best place to hop off. A shot fired by Officer Urquhart brought immediate action on his part, for he jumped right on top of the officer, and both went to the ground. Adding zest to his amazing attack, the crook took a punch at the armed officer and then, staggering away, started through a lane just to the south of the Pepler house and out over vacant houselots owned by Joseph LaRelle, heading toward Carter street, which he crossed going through the Rado property to back yards between Carter and Franklin street, into which thoroughfare he is believed to have headed and finally disappeared.

Meanwhile, hearing the report of Officer Urquhart's revolver, Officer Carmody hurried around the house and took a shot at the fleeing man, but this, too, was ineffective.

Officer Urquhart had been stunned and practically put out of action for the moment by the unprecedented experience of having a big, husky man leap off a roof right on top if him. Before he could recover sufficiently for effective action, the burglar was making off, and a witness said was staggering. He may have been hurt, too, by his jump and crash with the officer.

Officers Urquhart and Carmody searched the neighborhood for a long time but failed to find any trace of the burglar. A hunt that was county-wide was being conducted Sunday. The impression left with those who saw the man was that he is a negro, but this is not certain.

A watch, two pearl necklaces, several rings set with jewels, a platinum brooch and a check bank with its contents are included in the loot the burglar obtained.

The Pepler house was unoccupied at the time of the break Mrs. Pepler has been staying in Providence and Mr Pepler was visiting with her when their home was being ransacked. Incidentally, while Mr. Pepler was in Providence a spare new balloon tire and rim was stolen from his automobile.

Bullets that Officer Urquhart fired at the burglar lodged in the roof of the house. The officer had a slightly sprained leg Sunday and was otherwise battered from his experience of the night before. This particular burglar got away on what may well be considered a 1,000 to 1 shot it is regarded as unlikely, under similar circumstances that he would be so lucky again in the course of a life-time. His wild leap on top of the officer happened to win out

NO DELAY TELEPHONE SYSTEM INAUGURATED

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 28—By the inauguration here Saturday of "No Delay" telephone toll service, it is going to take toll line users hardly more time to get a call through to New York, Providence and other distant points, with which this exchange has direct telephone connection, than it does to call a neighbor around the corner.

The "No Delay" service is swift and sizzles with modern business efficiency. It eliminates the former practice of having the toll operator call back the calling person after the connection is established.

Under the new practice a subscriber wishing to place a toll call asks the local operator for "Toll Line" in the usual way. If the call is to a point with which this exchange has direct telephone lines, and one is immediately available, the toll operator asks the calling party to hold the line and the call goes through more swiftly then under the former method.

If it is necessary for the toll operator to secure the called number from an outside exchange, or if there is any directory work on her part connected with the toll call, or this exchange has no direct line to the point called, the subscriber will be asked to hang up the receiver and wait to be called back by the operator.

The improved service will be given to Norwich, New York, Providence and various other toll points.

Sunday morning the body of Miss Hannah Grady, 45, was brought here in charge of Undertaker L. E. Kennedy from Norwich, where she had been a patient for more than a year. Miss Grady was born in Brooklyn, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grady. She had lived for years in that town and in Danielson prior to the failure of her health. She leaves a brother, Thomas Grady, of Brooklyn, and a sister, Mrs. James LaPoint of Wauregan.

Mrs. Aglia Bousquet, 69, wife of Toussaint Bousquet, died at 3 o'clock Saturday morning while undergoing a surgical operation at the Day Kimball hospital, Putnam. As an emergency case, Mrs. Bousquet was rushed from her home on the West Side to the hospital, but her condition was so extremely critical that all that could be done for her did not avail to save her life. Mrs. Bousquet, a native of Manchester, N. H., had been a resident here for many years. She leaves her husband, a son Daniel, of Boston, and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph Larcow of Putnam and Miss Josephine Bousquet, of Danielson.

James Doyle of Jewett City was found guilty of operating an automobile while he was intoxicated when presented at a session of the town court, Judge W. Fenner Woodward presiding. Saturday afternoon Doyle was arrested here about ten days ago and his case had been continued until Saturday. Physicians and character witnesses appeared in Saturday afternoon's trial, which consumed considerably more time than any recent session of the town court. It was testified that Mr. Doyle had been ill with the grip and this was regarded as an important contributing cause to his having been found in the condition he was experiencing when arrested. Residents of Jewett City testified as to his good character and to the good standing in that community. So impressive was this testimony that Judge Woodward after imposing the minimum fine possible in such cases $100 remitted $75 of the amount Mr. Doyle was represented by Attorney Henry P. Peck the attorney for the state being Judge A. C. Bill.

If plans of the New Haven road work out as it is expected they will there will be some good news relative to arrangements to give Danielson and surrounding territory a fast and efficient service on certain classes of freight from Boston and Worcester.

Announcements relative to holy week services were included in the various churches in Danielson Palm Sunday, when the congregations were unusually large.

Members of Rose of Lima council, K. of C. received holy communion in a body, at the early mass at St. James' church Palm Sunday morning.

Next Thursday morning will bring the opening of the trout fishing season of 1926. There is little need of this reminder to devotees of the sport.

A further increase in the number of employes of the Face Manufacturing company in their two mills here has brought the total to 550. The company is operating its plant both night and day.

Rev. Augustus Chapignac, M. S., of Hartford, a former assistant of St. James' parish, assisted with the services at the church Sunday.

Lloyd Gallup, son of Mr and Mrs. Frank Gallup, has returned here after having been at Miami since last October.

Sunday morning the temperature in Danielson dropped down to 15 above zero, another evidence that March still has a kick in its old hide.

SEEKING UNIFORMITY

When it comes to uniform traffic regulations for the entire country some problem is faced and yet the significance of recommendations or a desire for such a purpose is not to be overlooked. Thus when the national conference on street and highway safety, which has been in session at Washington brings forth such a plan it should certainly get the serious consideration of the respective states. It may mean more radical changes for some than for others, but what is sought in the interest of safety is worthy of careful attention.

Uniform action by the 48 states is bound to be much the same as getting action in a conference of any kind that has just been held at Washington. It represents various views and until there can be a better appreciation of the views of others and the reasons for them there is disposition to throw out personal ideas.

No doubt the difference of opinion that was disclosed upon such questions as speed regulation, the limit of permissible speed in city and country and the age at which persons are permitted to drive automobiles was the same as might be found in any meeting. There are those who maintain that the greater the speed the less hazardous there will be to traffic, that driving in the country should depend upon the conditions of the road and the traffic and the minimum age of the driver comes in for consideration in accord with the attention given to licensing and other precautions.

The recommendation that 10 be the minimum age is counter to existing [illegible] yet some [illegible] it may drive much more and reducing that persons twice as old would be other hand there [illegible] would delight in [illegible] how many [illegible] rules, get [illegible] with it.

[illegible] of uniformity [illegible] on some [illegible] involved, and [illegible] an arrangement much [illegible] certain to be [illegible] uniform plan exists [illegible] expected of him [illegible] claim that while [illegible] of another [illegible] rose of his own.

UNLIGHTED BICYCLES

[illegible] number of bicycles about Britain is not only seems [illegible] that legislation should be any opposed to the requirements that they [illegible] to carry rear lights, but [illegible] long since seen [illegible] protection.

[illegible] are many motorists who regard [illegible] as a distinct menace, [illegible] there is no telling what [illegible] the cyclist may flop directly in the [illegible] the oncoming auto. For that reason, [illegible] not only drive cautiously [illegible] encountered [illegible] feel [illegible] which he has been [illegible] passed.

But at night there is even greater [illegible] the cyclist rider who pedals [illegible] quietly at the side of a [illegible] with no rear light. He may be [illegible] realize that a machine is coming [illegible] long before the driver [illegible] is able to pick him [illegible] the road ahead, but it is only [illegible] others as well as a protection [illegible] themselves that the bicyclists [illegible] have the same as other highway users. It is required here and the [illegible] must be regarded as [illegible] and having made it a requirement years ago. In a country where there [illegible] so much resort to this means of getting about it bids fair to come [illegible] only with the greater increase in the number of automobiles.

Too many serious and fatal accidents have occurred in this country because of the failure to observe this bit of precaution. Bicyclists are not run down intentionally but when they [illegible] easily in front of a car with [illegible] to escape them collisions and serious consequences are inevitable.

Bicyclists should not think of ducking the requirements in this respect and yet there are those who are constantly doing it and inviting the fate which has befallen others and which may yet be in store for them. Even pedestrians recognize the first laws of self preservation by carrying lanterns when they find it necessary to walk in the highways at night, and particularly on the state roads.

THE TURKISH TREATY

While there is talk about an adjournment of congress by June there is often reference made to the intention of bringing this or that matter before the present session.

There is no reason to expect that there will be a complete cleaning up of [illegible] that have been presented [illegible] Some are bound to [illegible] preference and should get it and yet there are numerous measures that should be acted upon and could be if much of the wasted time were devoted to such an end.

There of course remain the debt settlements to be disposed of and there is also the treaty with Turkey which has not been acted upon. This has failed of ratification before this because it was felt that this pact was not as favorable to this country as the previous one. That will have to be admitted, but at the same time it will also have to be admitted that there is need of a treaty now for the protection of American interests and there is no chance that a more favorable treaty could be negotiated at the present time.

Thus are we going to take the best that can be obtained now and strive for improvement in the future, or are we going to let the relations of the two nations remain treatyless and subject American citizens to handicaps in comparison with the subjects of other countries when in Turkey? Likewise are we going to encourage unfavorable taxation on American goods for the same reason?

It would seem to be the time for commercial reasons to not only bring up this treaty but to ratify it. We are dealing with a different Turkey but that does not necessarily mean that time will not indicate to that country the advisability of modifications in the treaty terms. Thus far we do not seem to have acted upon the frequently made claim that a half loaf is better than none.

If action is to be taken at this sessions, however, there remains little time in which to do it.

FIGHTING THE QUACKS

Just at the present time New York is considerably stirred up over the presence there of too many of what are referred to as quacks. It has gotten so, and shown as the result of a prosecution that patients cannot consult licensed doctors and feel sure that they are getting the doctor's services. In the instance referred to a clerk and interpreter in the doctor's office examined, treated and promised to cure the patient for $180.

Just how deep and thorough New York will go into the matter remains to be seen. Whether it will proceed against the fakers as Connecticut will be awaited with interest.

Such action as has been taken casts no reflection upon the legitimate doctors. They should in fact welcome any move that will bring to light the situation that exists and provide greater protection for the sick.

The idea of setting up business and claiming to be a doctor of some new school no doubt has a certain charm for a great many persons who are suffering from ills of one kind and another. Many are ready in their desperation to take a chance that through such a doctor they can be cured and no doubt place great reliance in the promises.

Becoming sadder and wiser people through such experiences is highly distressing. Whenever steps are taken against such misrepresentations, and what in too many instances amount to plain swindling, the aim is protection for the sick and for the fully qualified doctor regardless of his school. Wherever conditions warrant it there should be a thorough housecleaning. It is another case where the interests of the gullible need to be carefully looked after.

BRIAND'S THREAT

Premier Briand has tried without success up to this time to bring about a settlement of the financial problems of France. He is anxious to succeed for the good of the country but he is facing the opposition of a chamber of deputies that prefers to play politics.

When the premier gives notice that the existing deadlock must end or he will resign it indicates the seriousness of the situation. Briand isn't doing it for a flourish. He has been premier so many times that it is no novelty for him. His desire is to get action and if he cannot do it he wants someone else put onto the job at once. Too much time has been lost already for the good of France.

Just what effect the threat of the premier will have remains to be seen. It is but a short time since he stepped out of office on a vote of the deputies, only to be called back again to form a new cabinet when it was found that no one else could be found to do it. And yet in spite of the fall of his cabinet and the organization of a new one he finds conditions not greatly changed. At least he has gotten to such a point in his desperation that he wants the gabbling stopped and action taken or he is going to give up his efforts.

Briand may not be indispensable but he is probably the strongest man in France today and if he is unable to get results the situation will certainly not be improved. Present conditions and the known effects of the deadlock upon France and the franc are certainly such as to not only justify the insistence but also a realization of its duty by the chamber of deputies.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The side roads in the country are not in their best form at this season of the year.

The claim is made that there are 115,940,000 people in this country. But who can prove it?

The arrival of spring means that it will not be long before the detour signs will commence to appear.

If you see a boy coming out of the store with a hat in his hand only one guess is needed to tell where his mind is.

France to put ban on rubber nipples for babies is the report from Paris. Is this another slap at the rubber producers?

When Wallingford, Vt., a community of 1600 reports no fires for last year that certainly represents 100 per cent prevention work.

French fliers like nothing better than to tackle a record, and they not infrequently succeed in getting new ones. That is why the proposed flight across the Atlantic arouses much interest.

WOMEN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Never dust electric light fixtures with a damp cloth. It is very dangerous.

A cloth dipped in hot vinegar will remove paint from window glass.

To scale fish quickly, dip them in and out of boiling water.

When hashing cold meat, add a little chopped parsley to improve the flavor and appearance.

Do not scrape a frying pan; it is liable to burn afterward. Instead, rub well with a hard crust of bread and wash in hot water.

Never salt fresh meat when frying it. Salt tends to extract the juice and at the same time harden it.

Half an hour should be ample time to bake medium-sized apples.

Fruit stains may be removed from the hands by rubbing them with a ripe tomato or the juice of a lemon.

Stale cake can be made perfectly fresh if dipped in cold milk and rebaked in a cool oven. It will taste as if fresh and will be more digestible.

To peel an orange easily and to get the skin off in one piece put the orange in front of the fire for three or four minutes. The skin will then come off easily.

To remove tar or grease marks from the most delicate fabrics soak a piece of white rag in eucalyptus oil and rub the soiled part thoroughly.

To wash a greasy iron or tin pan, pour a few drops of ammonia into the pan after filling it with warm water. A bottle of ammonia should always be kept near the sink, for this purpose.

When frying anything, place a piece of bread in the frying pan and this will prevent the grease from splashing over the stove.

When making a pie the juice from the fruit very often soaks through the undercrust and spoils the appearance of it. This can be prevented by brushing the crust over with the white of an egg.

PARE THEM FIRST

It is said that potatoes lose much of their food value if pared before boiling but it takes an adept to pare a hot potato without spoiling the appearance of the surface. If you require this small amount of food value bake them.

A LONG HANDLED BRUSH

The pipes of the refrigerator can be cleaned thoroughly and quickly if a long-handled bottle brush is used. It will not be necessary to remove all the shelves and articles of food to do this most essential duty if this measure is employed.

TO SWEEP LINOLEUM

Sweeping linoleum with an ordinary broom is but scattering the dust. Slightly moisten a square of flannel tie it over the broom and then sweep

GREASY DISHES

If your hands can stand it a little soda in the water when washing very greasy dishes takes a lot of unpleasantness from the job.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

As a substitute for the hot water bottle, use a hot brick. You will find it gives a very pleasant heat. Cover it with a soft cloth.

For bad dandruff mix powdered flower of sulphur with lard, about half and half, or if you like a thinner grease, one part sulphur and two lard. Rub this into the scalp by parting the hair and working it well along the different partings.

It is eminently proper that of all the cereals oats should head the list of balanced cereals. They not only lead in protein content, but contain more fat and in the matter of mineral salts are well applied with lime and iron and contain potash, sulphur and salt.

The remedy for thinness is so easy if one is really determined to develop a well-knit figure. Diet is, of course, of great importance; rest and relaxation varied by just enough physical activity are equally so. The thin girl should not be too ambitious in her studies; she should carry a light schedule in school, so that she will not be under mental strain and will have plenty of time for outdoor sports and diversions.

AVOIDING PTOMAINE POISONING

Never eat food having a peculiar odor.

Never eat raw food without first washing it well.

Do not eat canned foods if the sides or ends of the can seem bulgy and when punctured give out a nasty gas.

Buy sea food for one meal only. Do not try to hold it over for a day. You always eat leftover sea food with a doubtful feeling and why take the chance of its being a bit "off?"

PUNISHING THE YOUNGSTER

Mothers all are alike in disliking to punish their babies; but they also know it must be done at times. However, it does not always have to be severe, and possibly by resorting to the time-old remedy of standing the offender in the corner or sitting him on a chair until promises of good behavior are forthcoming. They will get fine results, saving the equally old-fashioned whipping for just very important occasions. Only, if you promise him a whipping, keep that promise just as you would any other.

OLD TIME QUILTS NOW IN VOGUE

The old fashioned quilts are very much in vogue and the shops are making a considerable feature of them. They are shown hand quilted with a patch work design or in some instances a more definite motif.

TO SOFTEN BROWN SUGAR

When brown sugar hardens into one huge lump, place the lump in the top of the double boiler and fill the bottom with water. Put on lid and let the sugar steam for about five minutes. It will come out soft and fine.

DICTATES OF FASHION

The new tailleurs known as the "smoking" type are causing a revival of waistcoats and fancy vests.

Taffeta forms some of the most fascinating trimming of the season made into rosettes, ruffles and bandings.

Stripes are very important this spring, frequently they run up and down in the skirt and horizontally on the blouse.

Skirts of the latest version of the jumper frock turned out by a famous designer are laid in fine pleats in varied groupings.

Fox neckpieces dyed in pastel shades were worn at the southern resorts and are expected to achieve a vogue in the coming summer.

The small hat of felt draped to resemble a beret is a formidable rival of the hat with the high folded crown.

Velveteen coats for spring come in the loveliest colors and in many instances have short tight shoulder capes. The linings are of gay printed silks.

New frocks for spring are of black satin or taffeta, with touches of delicate pink in the gilets or sash ends.

Bathing suits of taffeta or crepe de chine tucked to form patterns are among the new fashions shown for resort wear and point the way to summer modes.

The new silhouette slightly accentuates the normal waist line on similar lines. And it is noticed that the newest girdles and corselets have a slight nipped-in look at the waistline.

The sleeve of this season shows signs of great development. Fullness begins usually about the elbow and is held in closely at the wrist by a narrow band. One still sees many plain close fitting sleeves.

The spring suit of 1926 should have a snug hip. The type of the garment is such that the broad rather loose shoulders should merge into a snug hip line, from beneath which the fairly short skirt begins to flare. Revers are long and the coat fastenings consist of one or two buttons at most.

WAIST LINES ON FROCKS

Every frock now has a waist line. The question is "where?" The waist line for spring rise and fall as suddenly as the thermometer during the changeable season. But they are never entirely misplaced. In the simpler one-piece frocks of crepe or georgette they are usually marked by narrow belts or girdles of self material fastened with a narrow metal ornament although matching ribbon occasionally is used.

OMBRE EFFECTS IN LINGERIE

Ombre or shaded effects which were popular for scarfs, hats and frocks last summer are now produced in glove silk undergarments. These garments came in tangerine, orchid and pink, all of which are shaded from flesh the deeper tone being used as borders. Binding at neckline and armholes are of the deep shades. They are of a heavy silk and are made with set colors for laundering purposes.

COLORED SHOES COMING

We are to see the return of brighter colored shoes in the spring. Bright green and blue will be the colors most generally used for shoes and handbags. The general shape of shoes will remain the same, a single strap being permissable for walking shoes.

LAUNDRY HINTS

When making hot starch add a level teaspoon of dry washing powder to a quart and the irons will not stick.

Moisten with cold water, perspiration stains under the arms of a silk blouse and then cover them with French chalk. Leave the chalk for 24 hours and repeat the process if the stain is not quite gone.

The colors in ribbons and silks will be brightened if a tablespoon of vinegar is put into the rinse water.

To bleach white goods that have become yellow, dip them in strong blue water after washing, let them become very blue, and then hang out to dry. They will be thoroughly bleached.

If colored clothes remain wet too long, no precautions can prevent the colors from running into streaks. This will certainly happen if they are allowed to lie in water. They must always be laundered as quickly as possible.

CLEANING WHITE WOOLEN SHAWL

To clean a white woolen shawl with out washing it, spread over a table a sheet or tablecloth on this place the shawl; powder it all over with finely ground starch, fold it up, powdering it well at each fold, press well together, leave it for several hours wrapped up in the sheet or tablecloth, then squeeze well and rub together with both hands and shake off the starch thoroughly. If carefully done the shawl should be as fresh and white as when new.

FINGER MARKED PIANO

For a finger-marked piano or other highly polished surface of furniture try cold water and chamois skin. Have two skins, both very soft and pliable. Dip one in cold water, wring it very dry and then wipe off the polished surface with the dry skin. Never apply kerosene or any patented polish the ingredients of which you do not know. One woman who used coal oil on the ebony surface of her piano was marked by tiny cracks.

GOOD WAYS TO USE SCRAPS OF SOAP

The tag ends of cakes of toilet soap have many possibilities. They can always be boiled up with water and make into a soap jelly to be used in all sorts of ways for both toilet and household purposes.

This soap jelly is particularly useful for cleaning woodwork, rugs, paintings and tapestries. It also makes a very pleasant shampoo.

Then, too, the bits of left-over soap may be collected and served or tied up in small cheese cloth bags of a size convenient to hold in the hand comfortably. Many people prefer these bags of soap pieces to a cake of soap for bathing.

PROTECTED FROM SPLASH

When frying fish and it begins to splatter, try inverting the colander over the pan. The small holes will prevent splashing and yet allow the steam to escape.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Queen Mary's favorite dance is the waltz.

There are about 30 religious sects that deny women the right to officiate.

Permits for Sunday dancing will be granted by Ohio's only woman judge.

Effie Cherry, former actress, has announced her candidacy for mayor of Cedar Rapids Ia.

Indian girls on the Glacier park reservation bob their hair just like the paleface city misses.

Mrs. Florence C. Casler, classed as a housewife plumber and builder, has been made director of a national bank in Los Angeles.

DISCOLORED WOODWORK

Discolorations on light woodwork may be removed by rubbing first with a slice of lemon and then with whiting. Afterward they should be washed in soap and water.

SOFT ICING

If you want to keep your icing soft, add a pinch of baking powder to the whites of the eggs before you pour the boiling syrup over them.

RECIPES

California Stew—Cut one and one-half pounds of round steak into cubes or bits, cover with one quart of boiling water and cook for a few minutes, then add one half a bay leaf, one chopped onion and a seasoning of salt and paprika. Simmer until the meat is tender. Remove the meat and place it in the center of the serving dish. Thicken the stock with butter and flour blended together, add one-half a cupful of chopped almonds, six chopped ripe olives, one green chili pepper and one half a cupful of tomatoes. Pour over the stock.

Chocolate Custard: Mix one-half a cup of sugar with four ounces of grated chocolate, pour over this three-fourths cup of boiling water and stir until thick and smooth, placing the bowl in hot water. Cool, flavor with vanilla, and stir into two cups of boiled custard. Serve this over canned stewed pears and top with whipped cream. It can also be served over sponge drops or used to freshen up stale cake of any kind.

From Small Beginnings

Count Rumford, the Clerk a Great Scientist

In Salem, Mass., about ten years before the beginning of the American Revolution, a storekeeper was sometimes attracted, and sometimes vexed by the unusual behavior 13-year old clerk. "Bennie" Thompson. The boy was useful and a hard worker. He was remarkably quick at figures and could do at a glance sums over which the shorekeeper had to puzzle for an hour. "He's forever mixing things up," the storekeeper said but he did not mean that the boy confused things. He meant that young Thompson got together a lot of bottles and powders and mixed them together to see what would happen. Sometimes nothing happened an sometimes too much.

"I thought I'd see what it would do," the boy would explain.

At 19 Benjamin Thompson married a woman who was 14 years older than he and mainly more than 14 times as rich. Now he had money enough with which to buy chemicals and to potter about all he pleased. He went on with all sorts of self-devised experiments even though he was interrupted by the American Revolution, in which his sympathies were with the British. Those sympathies led to his going to England, coming to the south of what is now the United States, and cruising about on a British battleship. After the Revolution in which he had served as a British officer in various capacities, he went to Bavaria where he became a high official in the royal court. He was a most energetic official and won a world's record in arresting beggars. In one day he rounded up about 2 000 and set them at hard work for the first time in years. Meanwhile, although he was busy with important affairs of state and made many long journeys to England and other countries he kept up his scientific studies, wrote books in which he set forward new theories and made a great name for himself as a scientist. In his later days he lived for some years in England and there did much to stimulate scientific studies. He aided in founding the Royal Institution, and he showed his interest in Massachusetts by establishing a professorship at Harvard. The remarkable thing about Count Rumford as he called himself after he had been raised to the rank of Count of the Holy Roman Empire was that he was both a great scientist and an intensely practical and able statesman.

ELY'S TRUE TEMPER TOOLS
HOES — RAKES — FORKS — SEEDERS — CULTIVATORS

ELDREDGE HARDWARE CO.
85 Water Street.

Seeing is Believing

Of course, I'll believe when I can see
A Fox has really climbed a tree.
—Mrs. Reddy.

Reddy Fox almost lost his temper because Mrs. Reddy wouldn't believe the story he had told her of a strange Fox high up in a tree. Yes sir, Reddy almost lost his temper. You know, it is very provoking to have people refuse to believe what you tell them when you know positively that it is true. But all Reddy's talking was in vain. Mrs. Reddy never had heard of a Fox climbing a tree, and she simply refused to believe that any Fox had done such a thing.

"I'll believe it when I see it," said she, "and not before."

But though Mrs. Reddy refused to believe her curiosity was very much aroused. She knew by the way Reddy acted that he really had seen something out of the usual. She even suspected that Reddy really believed his own story. So Mrs. Reddy began spending a great deal of time in the Green Forest looking for that stranger she heard of him often. Sammy Jay told her about him. So did Blacky the Crow. She wanted to ask them if they had seen the stranger in a tree, but she couldn't bring herself to do it. No sir, she couldn't bring herself to the point of asking if they had seen that stranger in a tree. You see, she didn't want to be laughed at. She was sure that they would laugh at her for asking such a question. So she contented herself with making sure that there really was a strange Fox and that this Fox wore a gray coat instead of a red coat.

Now Mrs. Reddy is quite as smart as Reddy himself and Reddy is one of the smartest of all the little people in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows. It seemed as if anyone as smart ought to be able to find that stranger, but somehow Mrs. Reddy continually missed him. Time and again she found where he had been, but she was always just too late. Still she persisted. You see, Reddy still insisted that it was all true about the stranger climbing a tree.

At last one day Mrs. Reddy found the stranger's trail and the scent was so strong that she knew he had passed only a few minutes before! Mrs. Reddy followed swiftly. This time she hoped to at least see the stranger. Luck was with her. As she peered around an old stump she saw standing out in a little open space, looking back as if he suspected he was being followed, Gray Fox himself.

He was about the size of Reddy Fox, but his legs were longer and he was a little more slender. His tail was not nearly as handsome as Reddy's or as her own. His coat was gray, trimmed with red across the breast and he was red on the sides of his neck. There was also red on his legs. But as a whole he looked gray and this was why he had the name of Gray Fox, the Woods Fox.

Mrs. Reddy remained perfectly still peeping around the old stump. Gray Fox didn't see her, but it was clear that he was uneasy and suspected that somebody was following him. After a moment or two, he turned and lightly bounced away. Instantly, Mrs. Reddy followed him. She found that Gray Fox was a fast runner. Mrs. Reddy is a fast runner herself. You know, before she was Mrs. Reddy, she was Miss Swiftfoot.

Mrs. Reddy remained perfectly still, peeping around the old stump

Presently she caught a glimpse of Gray Fox ahead of her. He disappeared behind a little hemlock tree. Mrs. Reddy hurried faster than ever, but when she peeked around that little hemlock tree, Gray Fox was nowhere to be seen. Yet she could see nothing behind which he could be hiding. If ever there was a puzzled Fox, it was Mrs. Reddy. She sat down with her head on one side to study things out. A bit of bark dropped from a tree just in front of her. She looked up. There was Gray Fox halfway up that tree. How Mrs. Reddy did stare!

"Reddy told the truth," she muttered to no one in particular. "Yes, sir Reddy told the truth."

Stories That Recall Others

Didn't Care To.

Mary was spending the day with her grandmother, and, seeking a more exciting type of entertainment than was offered, she quietly skipped out of the door and headed for the neighbors. Half way there she was found by her grandmother, who was appalled to see that she was without either hat or coat in the near zero weather. Hastening to the door, she called after her: "Mary come back here, and put on your coat." To this Mary turned a deaf ear. As the command was repeated a little louder Mary called back: "I didn't hear you."

"Didn't hear what?" the grandmother countered. "Didn't hear you say to put on my coat," the little culprit replied.

AUTOMOBILE HIT POLE ON LAUREL HILL AVENUE

A Hupmobile sedan reported to have been driven by James P. McNally of Norwich Town had both wheels on the left side of the car smashed and the door torn off when it hit a pole on Laurel Hill avenue Sunday night about 9.30 o'clock. McNally was injured and was taken to his home and Harry Davis, who was with him, received cuts on the nose and face.

The machine was proceeding toward New London, when at a point south of Walnut street, it struck a pole on the left side of the street, smashing both wheels, ran along the sidewalk and then out into the street again where it came to a stop on the trolley tracks about 125 feet from where it hit the pole according to measurements made by the police. GIVES BROADCAST MESSAGE ON ADVANTAGES OF THAMES VALLEY

Broadcasting from station WCBR, the James Hislop store, New London, Saturday evening at 9 o'clock, Herbert R. Branche of this city, chairman of the United Commercial Travelers civic committee, gave a talk on the many industrial and commercial advantages of eastern Connecticut and the Thames valley district. In his talk Mr. Branche said:

Ladies and gentlemen, of our invisible audience:—First, I desire to pay my respects to the management of the James Hislop store, for their public spirit and enterprise, in causing to be installed, here in New London, the first broadcasting station in eastern Connecticut; station WCBR, I also wish, in behalf of the United Commercial Travelers, Norwich council No. 309, to express my deep appreciation, in being permitted, to put on the air, the effort being made by the U. C. T. to energize interest in eastern Connecticut and the Thames river valley, both industrially and commercially.

Historical Background

For convenience sake, my talk will be sub-divided under three headings. First:—very briefly, I wish to touch upon our background of Indian and Revolutionary history.

Eastern Connecticut and the Thames river valley, in ancient times, was the center of old Mohegan territory. The early Indian wars were wars of conquest. Here the Narragansetts, Pequots and Mohegans, among its forests, valleys and hills, fought for supremacy. Sassicus, Uncas and Miantonomo. In those days, were the giants in the land, and in the last analysis, Uncas, the Mohegan chieftain, wore the crown of the victor.

Passing hurriedly over the outstanding events of that period, we have with us many Indian names that testify to the fact, that this was a territory of unusual Indian prominence. The beautiful Thames river was known to the Indians as the Pequot. It's tributaries, the Shetucket, Quinebaug and Yantic, all are still proudly bearing their Indian titles. The Mohegan Trail, Fort Shantoc, Nipmuc path, Pequot trail and the monuments to Uncas and Miantonomo are lasting memorials, bearing mute testimony that these two great chieftains, battled at East Great Plain for supremacy. Both could not win, yet neither has as yet, been accused of lack of courage.

In the early days of colonial history, here too were fought some of the fiercest battles of the Revolutionary period, Battles, where no quarter was asked—where none was given. Here in the city of New London and in Groton are many memorials to the courage of the giants of that period. Winthrop, Ledyard. Hale. Here too, was enacted the greatest tragedy of the Revolutionary war: That of the taking and burning of New London, by the British, under the guidance of the traitor Benedict Arnold, and the dastardly murder of Col. Ledyard the commanding officer at Fort Griswold.

Beauties of Nature

Passing from the historical to the natural charm of eastern Connecticut, and the Thames river valley, we ask where are there more delightful home surroundings and recreational opportunities? Seaside and hillside, vie one with the other in popularity. On either shore of the picturesque Thames, are unusual conditions for happy living and the environment, north, east and west, with its innumerable sights worth seeing, miles upon miles of hard surfaced federal highways and on the direct route from Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore to Canada and the pine woods of Maine.

The Mohegan trail, leaving the post road at New London and crossing Connecticut from the Sound to the Massachusetts line, offers much in primitive, pastoral beauty and is studded with rare scenic gems. The U. C. T. are heading every energy to have the trail made safe for commercial travelers, tourists and the general public. We are now co-operating with the various officials of towns through which the trail passes, in order that it may be lighted its entire length. We are also striving for the elimination of all grade crossings and dangerous curves along the way. We have the assurance of the state highway department, that these improvements will become effective within a period of five years.

Commercial Development

All that I have thus far said of eastern Connecticut is purely preliminary to the subject I wish to bring to your notice viz:—The industrial and commercial development of the Thames valley. One of the aims and purposes of the commercial travelers, is to give to eastern Connecticut, nation-wide publicity directing attention to the fact that we have unlimited, cheap electric power, rail and water service in all directions—that the Thames valley is in the export center of the Atlantic coast—that New London has one of the best land-locked harbors in the world and that we are looking for big business, and have big inducements to offer.

At a recent meeting of the New London and Norwich members of the courts of common councils held under the auspices of the U. C. T. a greater spirit of community interest developed and a pronounced desire to be of service, was freely expressed by those present. His honor, Mayor Fox, of New London, gave expression to his views as follows:—"We know in a general way, that we are here for the purpose of forming a nucleus of an organization to be known as the Thames River Valley association. We have the flower of the intellect of New England, in Norwich and New London. We have everything to work with."

His honor, Mayor Waters of Norwich, made the following statement: "While the governors of New England states are devising means to promote New England's prosperity, it is wise that the citizens of the two largest cities in eastern Connecticut, located at either end of the Thames, with all it's scenic beauty and with our great industries, should do all in our power to promote and develop this section of the state."

Friends, this is the first time in the history of these twin cities, that such a spirit of splendid co-operation has been voiced by their chief executives in joint meeting assembled. It is the contention of the U. C. T. that whatsoever benefits New London is of benefit to Norwich and whatsoever injures Norwich injures New London.

The very sound reasons, that influenced these world known industries to locate their plants on the Thames river viz:— The New London Ship and Engine Co., the Robert Gair Co., the American Thermos Bottle Co., the Eastern Conn. Power Co., and dozens of other equally as well known manufacturing organizations, are just as applicable to the prospective industry of the future, seeking for economic conditions of the most advanced type.

Two Cities Co-operating

To co-ordinate the big interests of these cities, organize the various industrial, commercial and civic interests behind the U. C. T. program of the Thames river, industrial and commercial development idea, is the task we have undertaken. In other words the U. C. T. have assumed the task of selling to the world, the many industrial advantages laying dormant in the Thames valley.

We repeat, were our industrial advantages generally known, plants would be clamoring for our unexcelled locations. Intensive publicity, we believe is needed to promote the further growth of this territory.

The James Hislop Co., store have gone a long ways in supplying a medium for making the fact known. To millions of people that here are many unsurpassed opportunities, awaiting men of vision and far sightedness.

In closing, I wish to say a word about our commercial growth. Commercialism and industry go hand in hand. As the Thames river valley takes on industrial growth, commercialism will receive an added impulse and here lies the reason the U. C. T. of eastern Connecticut are trying to do their bit towards advancing the industrial supremacy of the Thames valley section of eastern Connecticut.

Any one desiring information about the industrial sites, tax rates, depth of water, etc., communicate with Wm. A. Holt, city manager, New London or Charles W. Pearson, secretary, Norwich.

In behalf of Norwich council No. 309, I thank you for your courtesy and attention.

ISRAEL STAMM RECEIVES HARVARD SCHOLARSHIP HONORS

Israel Stamm, a student at Harvard college, and son of Rabbi Max Stamm of No. 53 Fairmont street, this city, has through his excellent academic record for the year 1924-25 been placed in the first group of scholarship holders. Mr. Stamm recently received from Dean C. N. Greenough, the following letter notifying him that in recognition of his splendid record he has been presented a memento in the form of a book called a Detur:

Dear Mr. Stamm: Probably you are already aware that your excellent academic record for the year 1924-25 placed you in the first group of scholarship holders. It is quite possible, however, that you do not know that when an undergraduate achieves this distinction for the first time no is given a memento of the occasion in the form of a book. Such books are called Deturs and are selected from what might be termed the first group of the world's literature. For at least 100 years they have been awarded to Harvard undergraduates whose proficiency in their studies has set them apart from their fellows and you will find that possession of a Detur gives one a certain bond with many eminent men of the nineteenth and the twentieth centuries.

In times past the Deturs were distributed by the president on commencement day, but as the college grew and the commencement exercises became more formal this practice was abandoned and today the method of presentation is quite uncermonious. If you will call at my office, No. 4 University hall, I shall take pleasure in giving you your Detur. Congratulating you upon your distinction, I am,

Yours very truly,
C. N. GREENOUGH.

HORSES TRAMPLE OVER MESSENGER BOYS' BICYCLE

For a short time Saturday evening about 7 o'clock a section of Main street resembled a horse fair when a shipment of about 20 was unloaded from a freight car at Rose place and driven towards the west Side. In strings of five or six each in charge of a handler, they went clattering through the street, stalking all other traffic for the time being. One string got away from its driver in front of the Trachtenberg clothing store, mounted the sidewalk and made for the store entrance threatening to crush the biz plate glass windows. An automobile parked at the curb left them nothing to do but squeeze along between the machine and the store front until they took to the street again, trampling over a Postal Telegraph messenger boy's bicycle on the way and leaving it in a twisted heap.

FINDS NO NEGLIGENCE IN COLCHESTER FATALITY

There was no negligence, criminal act or omission by any person or persons in causing the death of Robert W. Lamphere, aged 10 years, late of Colchester, whose death occurred Oct. 27, 1925, from injuries sustained when the lad was struck by an automobile owned and operated by Chris S. Christensen of Marlborough, Conn., according to a finding made public by Coroner J. J. Desmond.

The coroner finds that the little boy was one of a group of children whom Christiansen observed following along behind a wagon which was ahead of him. Christiansen sounded his horn as he approached the wagon and turned to the left to pass it. Just as he did so the boy suddenly darted out into the middle of the road and was struck by the automobile.

The coroner concludes that Christiansen had a right to assume the children who were following the wagon would continue to do so and there would have been no accident if the boy had done this, as the other children did.

WILLIAMS MEMORIAL TEAM WINS GIRLS BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, March 28—Williams Memorial Institute of New London won the girls' championship in basketball for eastern Connecticut high schools here Saturday morning by defeating the Stonington high school sextet in the final game of the tournament, which was conducted by the department of physical education at Connecticut Agricultural college.

The score was 27-10, and the New London girls clearly outclassed their opponents from Stonington. A much closer contest was expected, for Friday night Stonington flashed what appeared like an unstoppable attack in trimming Stafford Springs by a 46-11 count. Williams Memorial kept that attack smothered this morning, however, and at no time did the Stonington girls look dangerous. Without question, Stonington was off form.

The New London girls got away to an early lead, their fast and accurate passing giving Ieybovitch and Roe in the forward positions many opportunities to score. They connected for five baskets in the first quarter, and as the whistle blew they were leading Stonington 10-2.

Stonington rallied as the second quarter got under way, cutting the net twice before Williams Memorial could stop the scoring activities of Pendleton and Allan in the forecourt. The New London offense soon swung into action, however, and then the New London score began to mount upward. At half time, Williams Memorial was leading by a 16-6 score.

During the second half, Williams maintained its advantage, keeping the Stonington girls well in check. Play was hard fought and spirited, and fumbles were frequent. It was in this stage of the game that Babcock, who had been playing a strong game at side center for Stonington, was hurt in a scrimmage and she had to leave the game.

The superior pass work of the New London girls, coupled with the star guarding of Stick and Park, enabled the Williams team to win the championship of eastern Connecticut. Time and again Stonington would work the ball into the scoring zone, only to have it intercepted by Stick or Park, breaking up the Stonington threat. Stonington showed a weakness under the basket today that cost them many points, several easy shots being missed.

Leybovitch, Williams Memorial forward, was the high scorer, connecting for six field goals and two foul goals for a total of 14 points. Her accuracy in shooting was a big factor in the Williams victory. Roe, her running mate, also connected for four field baskets and 1 foul goal, for a total of 9 points.

By winning today, Williams Memorial receives the silver cup awarded by the department of physical education of Connecticut Agricultural college for the championship girls' basketball team of eastern Connecticut.

DEMPSEY GIVEN CLEAR TITLE TO HOUND BY BERLIN COURT

BERLIN, March 28—(AP)—Jack Dempsey's right to the ownership of a pedigreed blue boar hound which he purchased while on his honeymoon sparring tour of Europe last summer has been established by a Berlin court.

The world's heavyweight champion bought the animal from Joe Edwards, former lightweight champion of England, after deciding that it made an ideal sparring partner. But the police seized the hound on order of a Miss Hartung while Dempsey was leading it around Luna Park, where he gave several exhibition matches.

Miss Hartung alleged that she had merely loaned the animal to Edwards who had no right to sell it to the champion. Dempsey, Edwards, a lawyer and court bailiff much to the amusement of the country recaptured the hound. They smuggled it out of the would be nabbed again. Later Dempsey and his bride took it with them to the United States.

Miss Hartung sued Edwards but he proved to the satisfaction of the court that he had paid her $150 for the dog and had a right to sell it.

COACH DOLE PLEASED WITH SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., March 28.—Following two weeks of indoor drill for his 1926 Connecticut Aggie football squad, Coach Sumner A. Dole expressed himself as being much pleased with the progress made in the limited amount of time available.

This is the first year that spring football practice at Connecticut State has been successfully carried out, as heretofore the lack of time and the small size of the squad worked against the plan. Dole has had over 50 candidates at work this spring however, a larger number than he has ever had to work with before. Plays and formations for next fall have been drilled into the squad, and when the team reports in September, rapid progress should be made in preparation for the first game of the season with Wesleyan at Middletown.

Raid On Cock Fight

HAVERHILL, Mass., March 28.—(AP)—Twelve game cocks valued at $1,500 were seized and 33 men were arrested today in a raid on a main in a barn on the Birch Brow farm. The prisoners will be charged with being present while a cock fight was in progress.

PUTNAM AFTER CHECKER TITLE OF E. CONNECTICUT

With only a few days remaining before the date of the checker championship tourney which is to be held at the Duwell rooms on Good Friday of this week, there is considerable interest being shown by many throughout eastern Connecticut who hold aspirations of being crowned as the checker champ following the games which will be played on Friday.

Entries are being received every day but is expected that during the last two days the real rush will come of those expecting to compete for the title.

To date Putnam is ahead in entries as the checker club of that city is sending down seven men to try and bring back the honors to that city, and in looking over their list of entrants it wouldn't be a bit surprising if they succeeded as amongst the men to represent Putnam are a few who have placed in several of the Boston tourneys. Norwich also will be well represented as there are five all ready giving Norwich as their home. Entrants representing Taftville, New London, Willimantic and Lebanon, have also registered and it is expected that many more of the cities and villages east of the Connecticut river will be represented when the tourney opens. There are many no doubt who are waiting to see who and how many are entered before making any move and for their benefit it might be said that there is quite a list of well known players who will be on hand when the first elimination is held.

Considerable interest is also being shown by people throughout the city who have stated their intentions of being on hand to watch the tournament and although they probably won't get the thrill that they would if at a ball game and their hero got a home run with the bases full or at a football game when the hero dashes 90 yards for a touch-down they no doubt will be well entertained as there will be some real interesting games in the course of the tournament. The rules governing the tournament and also the entries will be published later in the week.

PNEUMONIA CAUSES DEATH OF "HONEST JOHN" KELLY

NEW YORK, March 28.—(AP)—The death of "Honest John" Kelly has taken one of the last survivors from the fraternity which operated luxurious gambling houses in the days those places were openly accepted features of New York life.

"Honest John" died last night, never recovering from an attack of pneumonia last fall. The place he ran, in West 41st street, was torn down several months ago to make way for an office building and theatre.

In his day, the house was so well known, that Police Commissioner Enright for four years kept a policeman on guard before its door night and day, and stationed a detective nearby to watch the policeman. "Honest John," of rugged physique and dandified dress, was one of the best known of those who inherited the mantel of Richard Canfield, and his reputation gave a glamor to the old house even after it had been rented to a political club. "Honest John" then tried to duplicate the place in Bermuda, but with less success.

He was known and respected by many who censored his profession. When the first attempts were made to close the "wide open" places, and "Honest John" was raided, it was reported that a number of prominent men left town rather than testify against him.

It was his own assertion that "the cops kept me busy buying new front doors because I wouldn't work to fill their pockets."

Though his complimentary name was given him before he became a gambler, it was his boast that no man ever got anything but a square deal in his house.

In youthful days he was a baseball player, and later ran an umpire. The "Honest" became his prefix after he spurned a $10,000 offer to shade decisions in a championship baseball game.

He also was called on to referee an occasional prize fight, and, in that capacity, it was "Honest John" who declared all bets off in the Corbett-Sharkey fiasco.

At the opening of the century, "Honest John" was classed in the company of sporting men which included Canfield, Sam Emery, Davy Johnson, Jack Daly and their contemporaries. Thirteen years later his place and Canfield's were the first locked in a series of nine big "door-smashing" raids which rang the death knell of the open gambling houses.

GUARDSMEN BEAT AUCTION STARS FROM R. I. STATE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, March 28. — Auction bridge, which has been one of the main indoor sports of Westerly during the past winter and early spring, has had its call for old and young. A most recent example was the contest staged on Friday evening at the Westerly Masonic club when Capt. Walter H. Davis of the coast guard service matched his team against a Rhode Island state college aggregation. The meet resulted in the vanquishing of the collegiates under "Capt. Court" Chapman by the score of 7940 to 6234, and the recommendation by Capt. Davis that the Aggies overhaul their ground gear and if necessary take post graduate work in bridge.

NATIONAL INTERSCHOLASTIC BASKETBALL TITLE AT STAKE

CHICAGO, March 28.—(AP)—Bronzed young athletes from the south and cold seasoned New Englanders detrained together in a mid-west snow storm here tonight as units in a far flung invasion of state high school basketball champions who will vie this week for the national title.

The eighth annual interscholastic classic gets under way at the University of Chicago Tuesday morning and by tonight a fair share of the forty odd entries had checked in.

With more than 30 state champions already on their way, together with nearly a dozen runners-up and sectional title holders, last minute bids were formally wired last night to winners of the New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota state championships, decided yesterday. Tournament officials worked today to complete the pairings for the first round games, which will result in the elimination of half the teams from the title race.

The fastest of the annual carnivals is anticipated in view of the impressive records of the entered quintets.

Interest in the tourney among sports critics, centers in the entries from Kansas and that section of the mid-west and the south. Wichita high school defeated an Oklahoma team for the championship last year, Kansas City won in 1923. This year the sunflower state is sending Newton high, which has a better pre-tourney record than had either of the previous winners.

The south, and especially the far south has its strongest representation in the history of the games, and it is believed that the trophy may be carried back to Dixie by some team. Wheeler, Miss., for two successive years winner of the state tourney and which last year reached the semi-finals in the national games, is rated as the strongest contender among the teams from Georgia, Louisiana, Alabama, Arkansas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky and Tennessee.

The first round will open at noon Tuesday with the Torrington, Conn. team meeting the Brackenridge team of San Antonio, Texas. The winner of this game and of others will meet Thursday in the second round tilts.

ADDED PITCHING POWER HELPS BOOST CARDS' STOCK

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 28—(AP)—Additional strength in the pitching box has made the St. Louis Cardinals more formidable National league pennant contenders than a year ago, when they finished fourth, in the opinion of their famous player-manager, Rogers Hornsby.

Elaborating on his theme for the Associated Press, Hornsby said:

"Three new right handers are with us this spring—Victor Keen, formerly with the Chicago Cubs, Walter Huntzinger, whom we purchased from the Giants, and Sylvester Johnson, once with the Detroit Tigers, whom we drafted from the Vernon club of the Pacific Coast league. Bill Sherdel, who led the National league pitchers last season is in good shape as is Hesse Haines, the big right hander. Allan Southorn, a veteran southpaw, has worked hard and I look for him to win his quota of games. Walter Mails is in far better condition than he was at this time last season.

"The success of our club I am sure depends on the pitching and I believe our pitching will be vastly superior to what it has been.

"I believe our infield with Bottomley at first, Thevenow at short and Lester Bell at third, with myself at second, compares favorably with any in baseball. It is my intention to start the outfield with three right handed hitters, Douthit, Blades and Hafey, with Mueller, Smith and Holm in reserve.

"Bob O'Farrell, the best catcher in the National league, will have capable assistance from Ernie Vick and Bill Warwick. I have two great utility infielders in George Toporcer and Pake Flowers, the latter having graduated from the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast league."

DECIDING GAME OF C. A. C. CLASS BASKETBALL TONIGHT

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, March 28.—The class basketball championship at Connecticut Agricultural college will be decided tomorrow night when the rival fives of the senior and sophomore classes meet on the Hawley armory court.

This game is an extra one that became necessary when the seniors and sophs were deadlocked at the end of the regular playing schedule. Each team had won six games and lost two.

Interest in the interclass league has been running high this year, and it is expected that a large crowd will be on hand to see the championship game tomorrow. The present seniors, the class of 1926, have won the class championship for three consecutive years, and they hope to make it four straight by winning again tomorrow.

The class standing:

FAST BOXING BOUT AT WESTERLY TUESDAY NIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, March 28.—More action is promised at the Lorraine Community house on next Tuesday night. Matchmaker Phil Fortin assisted by Joe Finister has signed up some local and out-of-town boys that are well known to the fans. The main attraction will be a six round exhibition between Ted Weall and Kid DeBartelo. Both Ted and the Kid are rounding into fine shape and judging from their past clippings, a lively go is expected.

In the semi-final Young Grillo of Westerly, who carries a reputation of being both fast and classy with the mitts will meet Kid Sears from the Base. The sailor has won a place in the hearts of the fans for the gameness shown in his last bout at the club. In spite of all odds against him he weathered the storm and was still fighting at the final bell. Without a doubt, some real science and action will be seen in the main and semi-final bouts.

The other four bouts will bring together Walter Main, our local all-round athlete and Young Police, another tough and dangerous chap with the mitts. In their past encounter, both these boys have met and gone the limit with some of the best amateur boys in their class. Another four rounded that will put the fans on edge will be staged between Young Bruno and Young DeBartelo. Both boys are old timers and are so well matched they are sure to make it interesting for the fans. The other two bouts include a return match between Hookie Jackson and Young Sposato, two youngsters that set a terrible pace and the curtain raises of four rounds will bring on Skid Forteen and Kid Terp.

Complimentary tickets can be secured for the asking at the usual places.

YALE BASEBALL TEAM LEAVES FOR SOUTH THIS WEEK

NEW HAVEN, March 28.—(AP)—The Yale baseball team will leave New Haven Wednesday evening for the annual southern trip. On April 1, the Yale nine will play Georgetown in Washington and Maryland at College park, the following day. They will journey to Annapolis on the third for a game with the Naval academy and will return to Washington that night. After the Catholic university game on the fifth, the team will return to New York to meet Columbia on the sixth. The final game will be at West Point on the seventh.

CARLARIS WINS COFFORTH STAKE IN RECORD TIME AT TIJUANA TRACK

SAN DIEGO, Cal., March 28.—(AP)—Carlaris, wonder colt owned by the Chula Vista stable, returned his owners $70,700 here today. In the running of the seventh renewal of the Coffroth handicap, western racing classic, over a mile and a quarter course, when he beat out a field of nine stellar runners by eight lengths.

Royerofter finished second; Cherry Tree four lengths back, for third, and Kentucky Cardinal finished another length behind for fourth. Time 2:02 3-5.

Princess Doree, piloted by Jockey Earl Sande, for the Audley stock farm, was fourth off at the lifting of the barrier, but was never able to get up with the leaders and finished in seventh place. Osprey, Leslie stable star, was last to get away and never overcame the lead of any of his rivals, finishing last.

Carlaris was away well at the lifting of the barrier, and Jockey Munden brought him to the fore with little delay, rounding the first turn with a length and a half margin and had increased the advantage to four lengths at the quarter pole.

Munden urged the colt to greater efforts and had drawn out to ten lengths over Roycrofter upon entering the stretch. He was then eased up and finished eight lengths to the good. Dr. Clark was the first to break at the start, but was outsprinted by the colt, and dropped well back after being passed in the first quarter by Serenader and Kentucky Cardinal. The latter two raced in those positions until the stretch head, but were never able to cut down Carlaris' margin.

Roycrofter, G. F. Croissant's teller colt, took second money, amounting to $5,500. Third money amounting to $3,000, went to Sharon Long, owner of Cherry Tree, and Kentucky Cardinal, also owned by Croissant, returned his owner $1,500, for fourth place.

The time breaks the track record of 2:04 4-5 set by Dr. Clark, by two and one-fifths seconds.

A crowd estimated at well over 25,000, saw the race.

Carlaris was given a great ovation upon returning to the winner's circle, it being of the few times that the favorite has won in the running of the great western turf classic.

THREE NEW CHAMPIONS CROWNED IN INDOOR BOXING SEASON JUST CLOSED

NEW YORK, March 28—(AP)—Three new world's champions were crowned in the seven title fights of the indoor season which has just close dits ledgen. Only the flyweight and heavyweight classes failed to develop championship activity, with the diadem changing ownership in the middleweight, lightweight and junior lightweight classes.

The new Madison Square Garden, opened for boxing on December 11, had a stimulating influence on the game and new indoor records in attendance and receipts were established in the 16 shows held under its roof. Almost a million dollars passed through the ticket windows, a new record, while the closing fight of the season between Young Stribling and Jimmy Slattery attracted a paid attendance of 17,877, the largest crowd ever to witness an indoor bout in ftistic history.

The most startling title change change came on February 26, when Harry Greb, Pittsburgh, Pa., veteran, relinquished the middleweight crown to Tiger Flowers, Atlanta, Ga., negro, after defending it against all comers for nearly three years.

Rocky Kansas, rugged Buffalo, N. Y., lightweight, relegated to the "has-been" list by many critics, emerged from tistic oblivion to knock the 133 pound diadem from the head of a fellow townsman, Jimmy Goodrich, in a title clash at Buffalo, December 7.

The third new face in pugilism's gallery of champions is that of Tod Morgan of California, who interrupted the western division of Mike Ballerino, of Bayonne, N. J., December 2, at Los Angeles, Calif., to win the world's junior lightweight championship.

Berlenbach met the challenge of Jack Delaney and emerged with the decision in the opening match at Madison Square Garden. The second largest "gate" in the history of indoor boxing was recorded, the cash attracting 16,913 spectators, who paid $148,155. This figure has been eclipsed only by the Jess Willard-Frank Moran fight of 1916 which drew $151,000.

Walker defended his title in a no-decision fight against Sailor Friedman of Newark, N. J., November 25, in which he won the newspaper decision. Kaplan answered a challenge of Babe Herman by scoring a decisive triumph over his foe in the second fight in the new garden December 18.

Rosenberg, barred from the New York ring by the suspension of his manager, travelled to St. Louis and won a verdict over Charley Buttz.

The indoor season saw the rise of two figures who proved profitable promotion investments. Jack Delaney, Bridgeport, Conn., light-heavyweight, and Johnny Risko, youthful Cleveland, O., heavyweight, stood out as the sensations of the season.

In the brief period of four months, Delaney fought six matches with no five of them and amassing a fortune estimated at well over $100,000. Delaney stands out as second only to Jack Dempsey as a drawing card in the opinion of Richard.

ness shown in his last bout at the club. In spite of all odds against him he weathered the storm and was still fighting at the final bell. Without a doubt, some real science and action will be seen in the main and semi-final bouts.

The other four bouts will bring together Walter Main, our local all-round athlete and Young Police, another tough and dangerous chap with the mitts. HORSESHOE CRAB MISSING LINK IN THIS EVOLUTION

HANOVER, N. H., March 28. (AP)—In the biology laboratory and museum at Dartmouth college are slabs of rock petrified creatures that look rather like the horseshoe crab, which so often has been the innocent cause of fright among sea bathers.

To the layman they are remarkable for the fine preservation of every detail when he is told that they swam about some 50,000,000 years ago. Dr. William Patten, professor of biology and director of the compulsory course in evolution for freshmen, they have a far higher significance.

"They are the real 'missing link,' he declared. "They are of far more value than the object of search for connection between man and ape. These fossils give the last chapter of an unbroken history of evolution from the protozoa to modern man."

Before he launched into an explanation of what he meant by this, Dr. Patten went back to explain his whole philosophy of evolution and the search he had conducted for 40 years for proof of his theories.

"Man," he said, "is nature's masterpiece. As an individual he is incapable of being improved. His further evolution must be social. The worm with its many segments, each provided with legs and scattered sense organs, was nature's subject for elimination and concentration. In man all of these necessary parts have been consolidated. One can conclude that many sentiments are nature's methods."

Professor Patten in his search for the missing link, found the gap came in the class called "ostracoderm." The common horseshoe crab is an off shoot of this class, he said, but as a class it is extinct and is the only major class which has not left modern successors. Ranking just below the fishes in the biological scale, its importance to him lies in the fact that it is the connecting link between vertebra and invertebra animals. Twenty-five years ago only fragments of this class had been found.

Dr. Patten located his convincing specimens in the region of Red Bay, in the north of Norway.

"The fossils I found are the finest ever discovered in that softer tissues have been almost miraculously preserved. The brain, muscles and nerves can all be traced clearly in these fossils. In these specimens, the middle ele is finely preserved and that can be traced down through all the succeeding classes, until it is found as the form of the pineal gland in the middle of the brain of man."

WORLD FAIR REPRESENTATIVE OF WOMEN IN FORTY NATIONS

CHICAGO, March 28 (AP)—Forty foreign countries, including women of all races, will have representation in the second annual Women's World's Fair here April 17-24. Strolling entertainers of many lands will help sparkle up the aisles with native dances and folk songs and the operator of the tea garden concession will have foreign entertainers.

The active participation of large national women's organizations brings to the fair added opportunity for demonstration of women's achievements and occupations. Mrs. Medill McCormick, widow of the late Illinois senator, is general executive of the fair and the proceeds will go to the Juvenile Protective association. A month and sale of space to exhibitors had assured financial success.

SPRING OUTFIT REPRESENTS LABOR OF 19,000 SILK WORMS

TOKYO, March 28 (AP)—It requires 19,000 silk worms to make the spring outfit of the Japanese woman, says Dr. Iwajiro Honma, principal of the Tokio Sericultural school. As a rule the higher class Japanese woman spends more money for a single costume than does her foreign sister although she usually does not have as many outfits.

GOVERNOR'S MANSION IS NOT LIKE "HOME" TO NELLIE ROSS

CHEYENNE, March 28 (AP)—The gubernatorial mansion of Wyoming is not like "home" to Gov. Nellie Ross.

Mrs. Ross has lived three years in the mansion provided by Wyoming for its state executives, two of them while her husband was governor and for the last year as his elected successor.

Despite the mansion's magnificence, Mrs. Ross says "it is not like my modest home, where I lived from the early days of marriage and where my children grew up." The fireplace of her own home is the chief thing she misses in her occupancy of the gubernatorial dwelling.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES

Young Andrew G.

Young Andrew G. now owns a gun.
He feels grown up, and he has fun;
If he can catch a mother bird
Just off her nest, no sound is heard,
Except a very tiny Pfiff!.
The mother bird falls life a whiff.
And if a bird builds near his house,
He's quieter than any mouse,
He's seen the Scouts, and he knows how
To creep unseen through leafy bough.
O, I have seen the poor bird fall,
Flutter, and give a little call,
Then lie so still that A. could hoot,
Or shove it with his woodsman's boot.
And still it would not life its wing:
The bird is dead that used to sing.
Now this is not in Kalamazoo.
But here in Norwich. Is A. you?

The Robin

There came to my window one morning in Spring,
A sweet little robin, she came there to sing,
And the song that she sang, it was prettier far,
Than any I've heard on the flute or guitar.

Her wing she was spreading to soar far away,
Then resting a moment, seemed sweetly to say,
Oh happy, how happy the world seems to be,
Awake, little girl, and be happy with me!"

But just as she finished her beautiful song,
A thoughtless young man with his gun came along;
He killed and he carried my robin away,
She'll never sing more at the break of the day."

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Making note of things is an excellent habit to acquire. It enables you to broaden your education by impressing on your memory a number of important things you would probably otherwise forget. It also enables one to converse more freely, as, in a way it teaches people to be observant, on the watch for something worthy of being placed in the note book.

It is a good habit to write down things of interest one sees while on walks, on visits to fields and woods, and on vacation trips. Good eyes, if used properly, should see something new and something interesting every day. Many of our most prominent men used to keep diaries when they were boys. Whenever anything unusual happened or whenever anything interesting came to their attention they used to jot it down in their diaries. In doing this they acquired the habit of being on watch for interesting happenings or observations so that they could write them in their diaries, and thus they were continually broadening their education. They saw a great many things that other people passed by with hardly a glance.

To jot down things of interest will help your memory, improve your composition and your standing as a pupil. It will also help you to write interesting letters to the Wide Awakes. The prize books are awarded to the most interesting letters and of course the penmanship, neatness of the letters, compliance with the Wide Awake rules printed at the top of this column, are considered in making the awards.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY THE WIDE AWAKES

A True Story

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write my first story to the Wide Awake Circle. I always like to write true stories, for I think those are the best. Before we moved back to Hanover we lived on a farm about two miles from Hanover school. Sometimes my mother would drive over for my two brothers and I.

Most of the way was through the woods, and in one particular place, every time we drove by, we would see a pretty little mother patridge, all alone. She would follow us along by running through the brush, until she had gone just so far. And then we would wait and watch her, and she would turn back and go into the place where her home was.

Some nights when my brothers or I would have some of our lunch left in our lunch boxes, we would throw some little. After awhile she got so tame, that she would follow the wagon right in the middle of the road. If we could have caught her, she would have made a lovely pet. We saw he as we went by for two years. Mother said, she hoped no one would shoot her for she was tame as well as pretty. We always called her Our Little Patridge.

The Teeth

Dear Uncle Jed: I have not written to you for a long time. I am going to tell you about the teeth. The food is broken into pieces in the mouth by the teeth valuable little jewels of which the jaws are the jewel cases. During our life time we have two sets of teeth. The first set, 20 in number, begin to appear when a child is about six months old. When we are about six years old the first set, commonly called the milk teeth begin to decay; and the second, a permanent set in a socket in the jaw bone, like a peg in a hole then appear. The teeth are coated with a thin layer of very hard substance called enamel. Inside of each tooth is a space filled with delicate nerves and blood vessels. When a tooth is decayed, and the nerve is exposed to the air, it soon begins to ache.

Thrift Poster Contest

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write to you and the Wide Awakes and tell about the thrift poster contest which was conducted by the Chelsea Saving club.

The Chelsea bank offered a prize for the three best thrift posters made by the children belonging to the Chelsea school club.

These posters were made by the children in each school and sent to the bank where they were judged by three judges.

The first prize poster was a picture of a great oak tree bearing the motto, "Big Trees from Little Acorns Grow." This poster was made by a pupil in the Lisbon school.

The second prize poster was from Canterbury. It was a picture of a tree with squirrels storing away their nuts.

The third prize was from my school in Lebanon. It was a bungalow with date 1946 and slogan. "The Chelsea School Club Paved the Way." The winner of this prize received her reward of three dollars which was added to her bank account.

The Chelsea bank was opened one Saturday afternoon so that the children and teacher could visit and see the posters.

My teacher and several of the pupils visited the bank where they saw all the posters from the different schools displayed on the walls of the bank.

The Indian Boy

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about the Indian boy. The Indian boy sees many things which a white boy passes by without seeing. The Indian boy is taught to look at things closely, and to think about everything he sees. He learns to observe.

Once there lived, in a village, among the white men an Indian. The Indian lived in a hut, and the white man lived in a cottage.

One day the white man went out to work in the fields. In the cottage was some corn hanging on the wall. When the white man returned home he found that the corn was gone. He was very angry. The angry man saw the Indian coming. As he approached, the angry man said, "You lazy Indian you stole my corn."

The Indian said, "I did not steal your corn."

"Do you know who did then?" asked the white man.

"I do not know his name but I can tell you something about him," answered the Indian.

"Your corn was stolen by a white man. He is an old man and he is a short man.

The angry man said, "How do you know who was there?"

I knew that the thief was an old man from the heavy mark of his feet in the earth. A young man's step is much lighter. I knew he was a white man because he turned his toes out when he walked. An Indian does not walk in that way. He was short because he stood on a stool to reach the corn.

My Shetland Pony

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a Shetland pony. He is very smart and when I talk to him he nods his head and looks at me as if he were answering my question.

I will tell you how he looks. He is white, with some black spots on his back. His mane is a foot long and his tail touches the ground. He is about four feet high. So I think you have a picture in your mind as to how my pony looks.

My pony is very gentle and he pulls me around in a little wagon. I feed him six quarts of oats a day, two quarts in the morning, two for his dinner, and two for his supper and lots of hay.

My pony has a nice stall. I clean it every day. I put grass for a bedding so he is very comfortable.

I wish all the Wide Awakes could see my pony for he is one of the nicest pets a boy can have.

At the Sawmill

Dear Uncle Jed: For my language lesson today I am to write a letter so I wrote to you. I am going to tell you about my visit to a saw mill. Monday afternoon there was no school, so two of my girl friends and my sister and I went up to the mill. We went into the shantry where they eat their dinner and hang their coats. For a stove they have a gasoline drum and they took the top off and put a piece of tin over it. They have a shelf to put their dinner boxes on.

On this shelf they have a box of coffee and a can of sugar. We watched them start up the mill and saw them making boards from logs. Then we went home and told our mother what we saw. I hope I will win one of your prize books.

Our School Piano

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write and tell you what we are planning to do in our school this year.

We are planning to raise money for a piano. The first entertainment we had was at Christmas. We spoke pieces and passed out presents. Santa Claus came that night. Next thing we did was to sell candy mints. For these things we had $22. After a while we sold chocolates and got $6. Then we had a Lincoln and Washington program. We got $6 and then we sold jello and we got $4. Altogether we got $50. So our teacher telephoned to Norwich and asked them if they had a piano that cost about 50 or 60 dollars. They said they had one for $60. Now we have $60 and we are expecting to get our piano sometime this week. I am 12 years old and am in the sixth grade.

What I Saw

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about what I saw. One day last week as my sister and I were going to school, I saw two bluebirds in our meadow. One flew away to its nest and the other one stayed until he saw my sister and I. Then he flew away to his nest. That was the last we saw of them that day.

VIDA BURGESS, Age 11.

The Amazon Valley

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you about the Amazon valley. The Amazon river is the largest in the world. It is four thousand miles long and more than 50 miles wide where it flows into the sea. This river is in Brazil. Brazil is far south of us. There are great forests along the banks of this river. They run back from the river for hundreds of miles.

They are the largest forests in the world. A great many kinds of trees grow in these forests. Some of the trees are very high, often the trees are covered with vines on which beautiful flowers grow. Palm trees, bread fruit trees and rubber trees are found in these forests. Wax is taken from the leaves of the wax palm. We make made in the side of the tree. A cut is made in the side o the tree with a knife. From the cut a white juice flows. This juice is like milk. It is caught in a cup. After a while the juice gets hard. Then it is rubber. A great many strange animals and birds are found in these forests. There is the sloth which lives in the trees. It has hooked claws for holding on to the branches. It hangs onto a branch with its back downward. When it goes to sleep it rolls itself up like a rubber ball. It moves very slowly and that is why it is called the sloth. These forests are full of monkeys and parrots.

In these forests there are flocks of parrots. They fly from tree to tree and are very wild. There are many kinds of them. Some are red, green, blue, and many other colors. Monkeys chatter and parrots screech. What a noise they must sometimes make. But besides the parrots and the monkeys there are humming birds and butterflies. You know that a humming bird is a very small bird. But the humming birds found in these forests are no larger than a bee. The butterflies are the most beautiful in the world. I should like to see these interesting countries, wouldn't you, Uncle Jed?

AILI LUOTO, Age 12.

The Indians

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write you about the American Indians. The American Indians are tall, slender and straight with long black hair and skin the color of copper. They have high cheek bones, and most of them have black eyes. Some of them paint their faces black, yellow and red to look fierce while others paint their bodies and leave the face clear. They killed deer or buffalo for meat and used the skins for clothing. The horns they used for the tips of their arrows. They wore deerskin moccasins, loincloths, and a few feathers stuck in their hair. For weapons they had bows and arrows, and stone tomahawks. They lived in wigwams. The wigwams were made of birch bark or skins.

They frequently fought among themselves, scalping those they killed. They cruelly treated their prisoners, torturing them by fire or trying to see how near to him they could shoot an arrow without hitting him.

Some tribes were constantly moving from one place to another, taking down their wigwams, and taking them along. After they had hunted in one place for a while, they wanted a new place. They hated the white settlers who cut down their forests and changed them to fields. The white settlers gradually pushed them west, fighting them, and killing many until now there are only a few thousand who live on reservations provided by the government.

The Helping Hand

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the Helping Hand. As the country of Holland is nearly all surrounded by water the Dutch people travel in boats. Even the small children go fishing. One day a little girl went fishing with her grandfather.

The boat was very large and heavy. She thought she could help him row too. The girl looks very tidy because she wears an apron over her clean dress. She also has on wooden shoes and black stockings.

In the boat there is a net and plenty of rope. The grandfather seems to be poor as his clothes are all mended but are clean. His wife has died but he still wears her wedding ring on his finger.

Even if the little girl does not help him much he says nothing to her because it would make the Helping Hand sad.

About Hens

Dear Uncle Jed: When hens walk they fold their wings close by their sides. Fowls live upon grain, bugs and worms. With their long nails and strong toes they scratch in the earth, and with their sharp bills they pick up anything which they find good to eat. A hen usually lays one egg a day. When a hen has a full nest of eggs she sits upon them keeping them warm for three weeks. At the end of that time the eggs hatch out into little chicks. When the hatching time comes the chick inside the eggs picks a little hole in its shell so that it can get its bill out and then breaks the shell so it can step out. When first hatched chickens look about for something to eat. If the mother hen should see a strange cat or hawk about she gives a shriek or alarm, which all the little ones understand and they run and hide as quickly as possible. When danger is past she gives a cluck, which brings them all out of their hiding places.

My Dog Shep

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my third letter to the Wide Awakes. I am going to tell you about my dog. His name is Shep. He is a shepherd dog, has brown color, and his hair is short. He is a good dog and his tail is bushy. He can do many tricks. He can sit up and roll over the ground. When I go anywhere he runs ahead. When he has a bone he runs and hides it. He is very brave. He likes meat and bones very much. My dog is trustworthy.

Helping Others

Dear Uncle Jed: I would like to tell you about our club. It is called the Wee Brownies. We meet at the Community house every Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. We stay till five o'clock. We cut out pictures and paste them in books, then they are sent to the hospitals, to help and cheer the little sick children. I hope you can visit us some day and see how busy we can be.

A Close Call

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to you, and I am going to tell you about a close call that General Grant had.

The following incident happened at Chattanooga. From the river to the foot of Missionary Ridge, two miles and a half are level farms and swamps. Thomas' picket lines were so near Bragg's, that the opposing soldiers talked familiarly, and at one point were only separated by the narrow bed of the Chattanooga creek. One morning, as Grant sat upon his horse on the bank, a party of rebels in blue came down on the other side to draw water. Supposing them to be his own men, the general asked: "What corps do you belong to?"

"Longstreet's."

"What are you doing in these coats, then?"

"Oh, all our corps wear blue."

The fact had escaped his memory; but having the good fortune not to be recognized he rode away.

At Mohegan Park

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my trip to the Mohegan park in this letter. One Sunday afternoon my mother, my two sisters, Paul and myself started out on our trip. After our pleasant trip to the park I bought some ice cream, candy and a balloon. I then walked around the large field or forest where the deer lived. I saw seven.

After my pleasant walk I went swinging in one of the swings. At last I was very dizzy so I went to the rabbit pens. There were many very small rabbits. I was very interested in these. I then went to look at the birds. I saw an owl, peacock and many different kinds of pheasants.

The monkeys were very interesting and funny. I had a very nice time that day and I expect to go again some day.

Going Skating

Dear Uncle Jed: The village clock was just striking six o'clock. The children wished it was seven because they were going skating. It was a crisp January night. Skating would be fun. The trees swayed back and forth in the moonlight. As the town clock slowly struck seven, the merry children started.

They reached the pond about half past seven. Their voices rang with laughter. The ice was soon tracked up. The children in deep sorrow as a mere thought passed over their minds. It was that of going home. The clock struck nine very soon. Still they skated and began to sing. About ten o'clock the children were persuaded to go home. They did not want to, for it was the evening that was most enjoyed of all winter evenings.

Jim

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awakes. I am going to tell you what happened to our horse Jim. He was cut with a knife in the night by some one. My father went to give him hay and found him out. Then he told me to go to Jewett City and buy a bottle of peroxide. It didn't help him so my father had to send for a veterinary.

The next day we sent for the state police to come to my house and see the horse. They said they would try to find the man who did it. It was four weeks before the horse was better so we could use him. We are glad he lived for he was our best horse.

A Boat Ride

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the third time I have written to you. I hope you and the Wide Awakes will enjoy my story. One sunny afternoon my friend and her brother, my brother and I went for a boat ride. We came and talked and told stories. When we reached the middle my brother made the boat tip, and we all fell in. When we came back my mother asked us if we had a good time. I told her we would have had a good time if we had not fallen.

Fifteen Baby Chicks

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to you. I am going to tell the story of the chickens. Every night when I come from school I always go out to pick up the eggs. I went to the last nest. I heard a little noise. This is the way it went. "Peep, peep." I looked in the corner. There were fifteen little chicks. I was surprised. I ran to tell my mother. I fell down twice on the way to the house. My mother went with me. My father said that I could have the baby chicks.

Killed Three Foxes

Dear Uncle Jed: One day as I was walking along in the wood, I heard my dog following a fox. He followed through swamps, over ledges and stumps till at last he put it up in a little cave. When I got there the mother had gone, but there were three baby foxes. Just as I got there the dog went in and killed them so I took the little ones and when home. When I got home I told my father and he took the foxes to the town clerk and got three dollars a piece for them.

A Good Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: I had a dog named Ted. He was a good dog. He would pull us on the sled in winter. We had lots of fun with him. He will not bite. You can even hit him. I loved him very much.

My Visit With Bunny

Dear Uncle Jed: On a cold, bleak and crisp morning, I started out walking in the woods. The snow had spread a pure white blanket over the landscape. It was a windy and cold day and the pond was covered with inches of snow and was not very stron. It might have sundered if anyone skated on it.

Upon entering the woods I went to seek rabbits. First I went to the old briar patch which I estimated to be the home of a rabbit. Bunny was in dreamland but I soon had him awake. He was real lively and a bit timid. I soon made friends with him and was watching him with keen interest. Bunny soon thought he had had enough of my company and hopped off in search of his usual breakfast.

How to Be Healthy

Uncle Jed: The way to be healthy is to take a bath every night in warm water because if you don't more germs will keep coming and you may become sick.

Health means more than money to all of us and we can keep healthy by keeping clean.

Many of the girls and boys in our school had the measles this winter but not one in our grade had them. I think it is because we use so much soap and water.

It's easy to wash and be clean as we'd ought to.

Nest Fell Down

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about some birds that live on our porch. One day it was rainy and the nest fell down and there were some baby birds in the nest. They fell out and my father put the nest up with the baby birds in it. The mother birds was very glad to find her nest and her babies safe from harm.

My Pony

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pony. He is brown. I like him very much. My mother gives him oats and hay and while he is eating he bites me when I go near him. He is nine months old. When my mother takes the other horses out we look him in. I think he is a very good little pony. We call our pony Fannie.

My Dog Paddy

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write to you to tell you about my little dog. His name is Paddy and his birthday is the second of January. He is very pretty. He tears up every paper he finds and it gives me lots of work, but I love him just the same.

A Big Cat

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my cat. When my brother brought him home in a basket he was a big cat. When we eat he sits in his hind legs and begs for something to eat. He is yellow and white and is very pretty. I had a cat before but he went away.

Last week I had a vacation. Down our road there is a sawmill. My sister and I stopped and watched the man saw boards.

If I Were a Pussywillow

Dear Uncle Jed: It snowed last night and in the morning it was quite cold. I have some pussy willows near my home. So I go there every day to see if they have blossomed. Pussy willows make me very happy when I see them. They show that spring has come.

Now they have blossomed. I haven't taken any yet but I will take some and leave some to turn yellow. When they are yellow the neighbors' children come to play.

I would like to be a pussy willow. If I were a pussy willow I would grow by your house.

When pussy willows have white blossoms, I pick them and put them in a glass without water. They keep until spring.

ANNIE GOLICK.

The First Step

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first story I ever wrote about a picture. In the picture there is a woman on one side trying to make her baby walk for the first time to its father who is on the other side kneeling down trying to make the baby come to him.

They are all out in the corner of the field under a pear tree. It is a beautiful pear tree with many pears on it. It is summer and the bright sun makes the beautiful scenery shine.

Perhaps you are wondering who painted this picture. It was painted by Miller.

The Look Out

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about The Lookout. An old weather beaten man is stationed on the lookout. He is high up and he must warn the vessel in case of danger. At the end of every half hour the shine bell is rung and if every thing seems safe, the lookout cries out in a loud voice "All's well." He must be a strong man and have much experience. He is usually an old man. There is a famous painting of The Lookout—All's Well" by Winslow Homer. It is not an ordinary painting. Winslow Homer was born in Boston in 1836, and was a great painter.

Income Tax

Dear Uncle Jed: One day a teacher asked the pupils of her class to make a short composition on Income Tax. Here is what little Billie Jones wrote: Once I had a dog. One day it was very cold outdoors and I put my dog out. His name was Tax. About 15 minutes later I heard Tax crying to come in, so I opened the door and in come Tax.

My Two Ponies

Dear Uncle Jed: I have two ponies. One's name is Dan and the other's name is Dick. Dan likes to step on the cat. Dick likes to run and play. Dan and Dick play tag. Dick runs and bites Dan's tail and that is the way the ponies play tag.

A Pigeon Family

Dear Uncle Jed: Four years ago a beautiful white pigeon came to our farm. He made his home in the barn. My brother took good care of it, and built a nice place for it in the barn. For two weeks it lived in the barn, but one day it flew away. Three days later it came back with another pigeon that was its mate. After awhile they layed eggs and raised many little ones. Many of the pigeons were shot be hunters and were caught by boys. On my birthday when I was three years old my brother gave all his pigeons to me for a birthday present. I have still about 20 pigeons. The two pigeons that first came are still living.

A Kind Deed

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a little bird that I found out on the lawn under the tree while I was playing with my sister. It seemed the poor little thing had fallen from its nest and was just learning to fly. My sister and I watched it for a while and then I went and picked it up and carried it up into my house and gave it some bread crumbs. Then I climbed up into the tree and put it back into the nest. The mother bird was flying around and around the tree looking for her lost birdie and seemed much pleased when I put it back in the nest.

A Young Man

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about a young man I once saw. This young man was oddly dressed. He had a stove pipe hat on top of his head, a very high starchy collar that came up to his ears a big old-fashioned bow tie that nearly covered the front of his collar; also a dress shirt with big pearl buttons up and down the front. His swallow tailed shabby coat was hanging to his ankles. He had a pair of queer colored pants that were about five inches too small for him, a pair of blue socks with rings of white around them. He was also dressed in old-fashioned bow-tie shoes making him on the whole a very oddly dressed man.

My Pet Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write a story to you so I am going to write about my dog. I got her in the month of July 1925. When I had had her about six months she got very sick and had to go away January 15, 1926. Two weeks afterwards I was told that she had died of distemper. When I heard this I nearly cried.

A Visit to the Woods

Dear Uncle Jed: One morning I went to the woods and I saw a rabbit. I was astonished to see his home. It was down in the ground. He was brown and white and he had pink eyes. His tail was round and he was eating snow.

In the afternoon he showed me some tricks. I brought him home and tamed him. I built a house for him was very happy ever after.

TEXAS MOTHER SENDS BACK RING NOT PAID FOR BY NEW LONDON MAN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 28.—Mrs. W. H. Lea, Sanderson, Texas, communicated with the New London police Saturday, requesting them to deliver a letter which she enclosed in her communication to Cayrus Peterson, Nathan Hale street. Mrs. Lea stated that Peterson recently presented her daughter a ring and that it was revealed later that Peterson had not paid for the ring. Mrs. Lea also stated that she had written several letters to Peterson regarding the matter, but that he had failed to answer them. Inquiry by the police failed to reveal anyone by the name Mrs. Lea referred to as residing on the street.

WILLIMANTIC POLICE WANT DRIVER ARRESTED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 28.—At the request of the police of Willimantic, Tillotson Daniels, 19, of Cape Ann court, employed as driver of one of the big tank trucks of the Standard Oil company, was taken into custody Saturday evening, by Patrolmen Augustus Ray and Thomas Lyden, charged with reckless driving and operating the truck while under the influence of liquor. He was released from custody upon the assurance of his mother that she would cause her son to present himself in the Willimantic city court Monday morning and answer the charges preferred against him. It is alleged that Daniels was driving the truck through the streets of Willimantic during Saturday afternoon and in such a maner as to endanger the life and limb of autoists and pedestrians. He succeeded in getting away from Willimantic before the police could apprehend him and then the request was made to the local police to arrest Daniels.

OAKDALE DRIVER CAUGHT LACKING MOTOR LICENSE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 28.—Abraham Savin, Oakdale, will be in the police court Monday morning charged with violation of the city and state automobile laws. Savin was operating his automobile at the corner of State and Main streets late Saturday afternoon and failed to heed a signal given him by Traffic Officer Frank Linehan with the result that Savin caused a congestion of traffic. When Officer Linehan questioned Savin it was revealed that the latter did not possess an operator's license.

The fire department was called out at 9.30 o'clock this morning in response to an alarm sent in from Box 15, corner of Main street and Crystal avenue. The blaze was on the roof of a dwelling on Main street owned by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad and is believed to have originated from a spark of a passing locomotive. The firemen had little difficulty subduing the fire for it was extinguished by applying a small quantity of chemicals and before damage of consequence resulted.

Mrs. Josephine Bailey, 5 Konomoc street, has complained to the police because of the alleged evasion of responsibility by an unidentified autoist. Mr. Bailey stated that while the automobile she was operating was being driven from Tilley to Washington street, a machine operated by the party complained of and proceeding through Washington street, collided with Mrs. Bailey's car. The driver of the colliding machine refused to reveal his identity to Mrs. Bailey and the latter failed to note the registration of his machine.

Three stragglers appeared in the police court Saturday and when accused of intoxication the night before, each pleaded guilty. Tom Carroll of Montville, a worker in a mill there said he worked all day and at night came here. He didn't say what he came for, but that was apparent. He represented that he fell in with a "friend" who had a bottle and that he and the friend had a couple. Tom was frank to say that he had no money to pay a fine and begged to be allowed to settle during the next fortnight. He was turned over to the probation officer to make an arrangement for a settlement of the fine and costs.

James Farrell, claiming residence in Fall River, wandered into the police station seeking a lodging. He was drunk, so he was given what he sought, but he was detained in the morning to tell the court about his experience. James, who is 60, said he followed the business of mending umbrellas. He insisted that he met a fellow who had a bottle and that he and his friends had some drinks. Then James recited that he became sick and feared he would die, so he wanted to get into the police station and sleep. James said he was never arrested before and that he never would be arrested again. Judgment was suspended on condition that he get out of town before night overtook him. He said he would appreciate that opportunity.

Moss Allard, a sort of carpenter, told the court he was measuring a window when he was arrested. He had worked all day and it was proposed in the place where he was employed to put a window frame, the size of the one he was measuring. He could not remember the dimensions he had taken, but he was certain about his facts. He said he formerly boarded at the place and had the permission of the people there to make the measurements. Allard admitted that he had taken three drinks of wine, and that he was measuring at 11:30 at night. That story brought a fine of $10 to Mose.

Jacob M. Linicus was to have been presented for recklessly operating an automobile, but a girl he ran down some month ago on Montauk avenue is still in Lawrence hospital, so is unable to appear to tell her version of what happened. The case was continued till the 24th of April and Mr. Linicus was held in a bond of $1000 to appear then.

James S. Manning, about 76, died Saturday afternoon at his residence 37 Colman street, after a brief illness with pneumonia. He is survived by four sons, Edward, James, John and Thomas Manning and a daughter, Mrs James Quinn, the last named of Norwich. Mr. Manning was for many years a teamster in the employ of the F. H. & A. H. Chappell company, and retired from active employment about 15 years ago. Mr. Manning's health had been on the decline for about two years and a week ago he took a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia.

Mrs. Orvid Johnson, of Groton and Miss Ruth Dahl, 29 Eighth street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed today.

City Manager William A. Holt is engaged in examing the papers of the batch of applicants for appointment as supernumerary members of the New London police force, who took examinations at the Jennings school last Friday night. All of the applicants have passed the physical examinations and it is believed that the city manager will recommend the appointment of about a dozen of the successful candidates at the meeting of the city council to be held either Monday night or a week from that date, as supernumary officers will be needed because of the regular officers starting on their vacations the first of the month, together with the fact that two patrolmen will be taken from street patrol and assigned to motorcycle duty. The candidates who took the examination are Patrick J. Ahearn, Elwood W. Bailey, Norman C. Beckwith, George K. Cockell, George H. Crandall, Jr., Charles H. Daly, James F. Day, William F. Donegan, Frank Draminski, Lawrence W. Fardy, Arthur H. Fesley, James Guardacosta, Edward Higgins, Albert H. Iverson, Anthony Joyce, Harry W. June, James R. Kenure, John Kram, P. Frank Martin, William J. Nealson, Walter M. O'Neill, son of Michael B. O'Neill, former patrolman and who tendered his resignation a few days ago; William Ratzenberger, Stanley Sewczyk, Edward Skoczylas, Robert Stevens, Joseph Sylvia, Louis H. Wheeler, Clarence W. White and Samuel S. Wilson. The candidate who failed to appear were Thomas J. Cahey, Richard L. Dean, Patrick J. Flannery, William G. Lyman, Edward J. McClue, William H. Tooker and Martin G. Turner.

An automobile, owned and driven by Angelo Drago, 56 Crystal avenue, in passing through Main street, corner of Hamilton street, Saturday morning knocked down G. F. Isaacs, 28 Tilley street, as he was attempting to cross the highway. Isaacs was taken by Drago to the office of a physician where his bruises and lacerations were treated, after which Isaacs was taken to his home.

PATROLMAN EDWARD DANIELS RESIGNS UNEXPECTEDLY

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 28.—Patrolman Edward Daniels sprang a surprise in the New London police department Saturday night when he left his post of patrol and went to the police station and informed Acting Lieutenant James O. Gaffney that he had decided to quit the force and at once. Daniels at the same time removed his shield and with it deposited his revolver and club on the station house desk. Daniels gave no reason for his sudden act which came as a surprise to Acting Lieutenant Gaffney and Desk Sergeant Frank Howard, as Daniels turned in his police equipment within three hours after he had reported for duty. Daniels appeared at the police station at 7 o'clock and went to his post with the night detail; at 10.10 o'clock he reappeared at the station house and made it known that he was through as a police officer. Daniels had been a member of the department about eight years.

FERRYBOAT IS LAUNCHED AT SHIP AND ENGINE PLANT

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 28. — The ferryboat Elmer W. Jones, constructed for the Brookville and Morristown Transportation Co., Brockville, Canada, was launched at the Groton plant of the New London Ship & Engine company Saturday morning. The craft was launched at 11 o'clock and was christened by Mrs. Margaret Spottswood, chief clerk in the cost department. Following the launching the craft was towed back to the plant where the upper structure will be constructed after which the boat will be delivered to her owners. The boat, which completed, will be operated on the St. Lawrence river, between Brockville and Morristown. She is 120 feet in length, with a 42-foot beam and is propelled by a 600 horse-power Diesel engine, of the type installed in all boats constructed by the Ship & Engine company.

The constructors of the ferryboat have a contract for the construction of a craft the exact duplicate of the Jones for the Pudy Boat Co., Port Washington, L. I. The company also has the contract for the construction of a steel hull tugboat for the Hainesport Mining and Transportation company, Philadelphia, which craft will be equipped with a 600 horse power Diesel engine.

Patrolman Michael Dorsey, who has been ill at his home, Montauk avenue, returned to his beat tonight.

Patrolman George Laboue was unable to do patrol duty tonight being ill at his home on Jefferson avenue, and Patrolman George Perkins was indisposed today, being ill at his home on West street.

News has been received in New London and Niantic of the death in New York Friday night of Edwin H. Bronson, formerly of Old Lyme, a brother of Mrs. Marian R. Davis of Niantic.

Abel H. Stanton, 57, formerly of New London, died suddenly at a hospital in Wakefield, R. I., where he had been under treatment but two days. Mr. Stanton had been in apparently good health until last Tuesday when he suffered a paralytic shock and was removed to the hospital. He is survived by two brothers, Charles and Walter F. Stanton of this city. Mr. Stanton was born in Charleston R. I., but when a young man moved to New London, where he conducted a blacksmith establishment many years, at one time being engaged in business on Bank street. He disposed of his business about ten years ago and removed to Rhode Island, and during the latter years of his life he was employed as a traveling salesman by Guest & Co., this city.

The condition of Dr. George E. Bradford who has been critically ill at his home, 191 Hempstead street for a week with pneumonia, is reported today as being considerably improved, although the physician's condition still remains critical because of his advanced years.

It is now believed that Simon Hess, a resident at the Hotel Mohican apartments, who recently underwent an operation at Home Memorial hospital, and whose condition has been critical a fortnight, will recover.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Gardner, Niles Hill road, Waterford, have with them their daughter, Miss Jane L. Gardner, a teacher at Washington seminary, Washington, Pa.

Miss Constance Meadnis, a student at Mount Holyoke college, is spending the Easter period with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Meadnis.

Edward Cody, who has been ill for a fortnight at his apartment, Harris building two weeks with grip, is now able to pursue his duties at the Groton post office.

Peter Boras, home from Dartmouth, is spending the Easter vacation with his mother, Mrs. Despina Boras, of 34 Brewer street.

Miss Martha Harris, a student at Middlebury college, is with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Harris, of Ocean avenue, during the spring holidays.

It's too much to expect an all-round politician to be exactly square.

NO MORE PILES

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt discovered the cause of piles to be blood congestion in the lower bowel. That's why cutting and greasy ointments fail. His prescription, HEM-ROID, absolutely removes the cause, and brings quick relief, or costs nothing at Lee & Osgood Co. and good druggists everywhere.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

A. H. Woods is well known to all the theatergoers throughout the country as the producer of the most famous and successful comedies. including Up in Mabe's Room, Getting Gertie's Garter, The Demi Virgin, Parlor, Bedroom and Bath, and others. To say nothing of a host of other celebrated stage successes like Common Law, Within the Law, Kick In, and as far back as the famous The Littlest Rebel.

Well, A. H. Woods was the producer and John Emerson and Anita Loos the authors of the engrossingly ingenious comedy which the Myrkle-Harder company will present here tonight, at 8:15 at the Broadway during their engagement here all this week, entitled The Whole Town's Talking. It tells a most unusual story in a most unusual manner and the many fine points it so cleverly brings out in human nature are so quickly noted and grasped by an audience that screams, yells and howls of delight constantly interrupt the progress of its action.

Seats can be secured now and as The Whole Town's Talking means a sell out, it would be best not to wait too long before securing reservations. The telephone number is 1020 just a word or two with the phone in your hand, and you are dated for an evening's enjoyment such as you have not experienced in a long, long time. The comedy will be repeated tomorrow at the matinee at 2:30 and tomorrow night there will be seen William A. Brady's New York cast, Klaw theater sensation Simon Called Peter.

Breed Theater

Over the Hill, the wonder picture of the age, that has easily outdistanced every other screen presentation in the matter of a continuous run in New York, will be seen at the Breed theater today and Tuesday.

Over the Hill is an unusual picture. It does not depend upon the eternal triangle for its sustained interest. Nor require mob scenes to bolster up shortcomings in plot. There is something so sweet and wholesome and interesting in the story that the blase New Yorker so particular and discriminating in his choice of theatrical entertainment, has seen fit to give it his patronage and unqualified enthusiasm ever since it was first shown there in September, 1920.

Paul H. Sloane adapted the story from Will Carleton's Farm Ballads and Harry Millarde directed it. William Fox its producer, has supplied a corps of singularly competent players.

The Pathe news and a comedy titled Somewhere in Somewhere complete the bill. Two shows daily at 2:15 and 7:30 p. m.

POETRY

"God Meant It Unto Good"

—Genesis L: 20.

God meant it unto good." Oh, burdened one,
Lift up thine head, and face the coming sun,
Thy burdens and thy many cares, He knows,
And, from His heart to thine, His love outflows—
"God meant it unto good."

He "meant it unto good" when sorrow bore,
With heavy hand, came knocking at thy door;
He loved thee, felt thy sorrow, heard thy cry
And tenderly He watched with sleepless eye.
"God meant it unto good."

"God meant it unto good" when Grief held sway,
And bitterness was thine no hand could stay
He felt the wound and sting of all thy grief,
And wisely, in His time, He gave relief.
He "meant it unto good."

"God meant it unto good" when pain was thine,
He stood beside thee with the "oil and wine"
Of His divine compassion; soother thy pain,
And raised thee up to life and health again,
And "meant it unto good."

O thou beloved of God thy faith renew
In Him Whose mercies fall as falls the dew
Firm as a rock does this assurance stand
Oh, claim it now, and take it from His hand—
"God meant it unto good."

What God permits and what He sends, is best;
So place thy trust in Him, O Soul, and rest;
And though through Egypt's darkness thou shouldst go,
Like Joseph, in thy heart thou, too, shalt know
"God meant it unto good."

Thy God will turn thy mourning into joy,
He'll give thee peace of heart without alloy;
He'll comfort thee and make thy soul rejoice,
And he'll thy sorrow with His gentle voice;
And prove his ways are "good."

—By Jennie Wilson-Howell.

An officer was showing an old lady over the battleship. Pointing to an inscribed plate, he said, And this is where our gallant captain fell.

"What we need," said the loud-dressed woman, "is to get closer to nature. We have too much artificiality. For my part I adore nature. That's why I got my husband to buy a country place."

"But you didn't go there last summer."

Oh dear no; certainly not. We won't be able to go there for three or four years yet. It will require that time for the landscape gardener to get it in shape for us.—Twice Told Tales.

An English sparrow that has learned more than its fellows makes its appearance each afternoon, between 4 and 4:30 o'clock at the baggage room of the Westfield station, says the Boston Globe. If the door is closed when it comes, it flies to one of the side windows and pecks on the glass to call the attention of the railroad men that it has come for the ride. The request is honored immediately. It flies to its perch and remains there for the night. In the morning when the room is opened it prepares for another day. If the door is closed again before the sparrow can fly out, it chirps calling attention to its presence and its desire to get into the open again, flying out when the door is opened.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW.

NEW York, March 28.—(By The A. P.)—Spirit of pessimism swept over the financial district this week when renewed liquidation of stocks sent the average of 20 leading industrial issues down to a new low level for the year, the bulk of commodity prices continued to decline. French francs collapsed to the record low established in March, 1924, and Belgian francs sank to the lowest price ever recorded.

Although there is still considerable difference of opinion as to just what extent the break in stock prices is forecasting the future of business, there is no doubt that most of the earlier hopes have been revised, and that spring trade, while comparing favorably with a year ago, has not come up to general expectations. It has been noticeable that the sharpest declines this week have taken place in issues known to be selling out of line with their present earning power and future prospects.

Bankers generally agree that the depression in stock prices has had a temporarily bad psychological effect on business. The fact that it has not been accompanied by any unusual increase in failures or other signs of financial distress is accepted as evidence that business conditions are fundamentally sound. Most of the leading companies are in a strong financial condition, well supplied with cash and with relatively low inventories.

Although there was no strain on the credit situation, even when stock speculation was at its height, it undoubtedly has been materially improved by the reduction of about $235,000,000 in brokers' loans since the first of the year. New bond offerings are being brought out at the rate of about $100,000,000 weekly but stock financing has been practically suspended for the time being.

RACK AND ALARM BOXES ARRIVE FOR NEW SYSTEM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I. March 28—The rack for the new fire alarm switchboard and some of the new alarm boxes are at the fire station in readiness for installation. Workmen are expected after the first of next month to begin putting them in place. The boxes are of a larger size than those in present use and have a small compartment on the front with cross bar which is pulled down to open it for the purpose of pulling down the small lever by which the alarm is sounded. In this type of box it is unnecessary for the large front door to be opened, except for the purpose of giving attention to the mechanism or sounding a recall.

B. A. PEABODY, JR., DISCOVERS BROKEN RAIL ON EMBANKMENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 28—Ability on the part of Benjamin A. Peabody, Jr., 38, a chauffeur, residing at 8 Lincoln avenue, Pawcatuck, to distinguish between normal and unusual sounds in train noperation, undoubtedly, prevented a serious train wreck on the New Haven railroad Saturday night Mr. Peabody was on West Broad street when the Gilt Edge express, which left the Westerly station at 7:13 Saturday evening crossed the overhead railroad bridge bound for New London and a few second later he heard a bumping sound, which prompted investication. Going to a nearby store he found a flash light and hustled up the forty foot railroad embankment, to find eleven inches of the end of a rail broken off. This was on the inside rail of the No. 2 or westbound track and about two thousand yards from the Westerly station or a hundred yards west of the Boston Post road underpass. He described the sound as

SIX ARRESTS FOLLOW SHOOTING OF TAXI DRIVER AT PRESTON HOUSE

Louis Plotsky, 33, and five persons found in his house on the Norwich-Westerly road in the town of Preston about a mile beyond the Norwich city line were arrested Sunday morning about 1:45, following the shooting of Armand Fornand, 31, a taxi cab driver, who received a bullet in the left hand from a revolver fired by an unknown person.

Fornand is a patient in the Backus hospital to which he was taken after being treated by Dr. A. C. Freeman, who was called to the taxi office to see the man. Plotsky was arrested on the charge of keeping a disorderly house and five people who were arrested as frequenters gave their names as follows: Joseph Fronsick, 35, Preston; Jeremiah Murphy, 45, Franklin, Mass.; Joseph Lasinski, Norwich; Merton Hill, 35, Preston; Mrs. Emma Laviano, 39, colored, Norwich. All are out on bail and are to be presented at a justice's court at the Norwich state hospital at 5 o'clock this (Monday) afternoon.

The arrests were made by constable Michael Nolan of Preston, Sergeant John Casey and Officers Calkins and P. Murphy of the Norwich police force.

According to the information secured by the authorities, the taxi driver had been hired to drive to the Plotsky house by three passengers, Edward Carey, a former Norwich fireman, John Sullivan, a theater employe, and Harold Duggan of New London, whose avowed purpose was to get something to drink. They were refused admittance and an argument ensued. While Sullivan was at the door trying to get in, the taxi driver was talking to Hill who was looking out of a window. The curtain was pulled down, the lights were extinguished and four shots rang out. Fornand claimed he was hit by the first shot.

The taxi party then drove back to this city, where news of the shooting was conveyed to Captain Thomas Murphy at police headquarters who secured the arrest of six people at the house. The officers found a gallon jug of cider in the cellar.

The gymnasium at the Y. M. C. A. was again filled with an appreciative audience Sunday afternoon at the 4 o'clock service.

The opening hymn was "All hail the power of Jesus' name," the scripture was read and prayer offered. Hugh Kinder sang by request, "In the Garden."

The feature historic moving picture "The heart of a hero" was shown in six reels and it proved very impressive. The leading character was Nathan Hale and this part was taken by Robert Warwick, who certainly represented the real character to perfection. The story was most impressive, showing as it did Nathan Hale in all of his noble heroism clear thru to the end when he expressed himself a being sorry that he had but one life to give to his country.

Between the reels Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk, and among other things said: "If one is to have the heart of a hero he must have the hero in his heart; that is he must be possessed of the spirit of Jesus. If we all agree that George Washington was thus possessed, for no man could spend himself for his country unless he was at part a real hero Abraham Lincoln showed remarkable heroism when he decided that slavery in our country must cease, and through the weary years he continued his demonstration of heroism; the hero of hero's was the great Son of God, who lived a life of constant sacrifice and died upon the cross, that we might be redeemed. We all should love and serve a Christ who has done so much for us. We all have the privilege of displaying the spirit of heroism, and the more closely we follow in his footsteps, the more heroic we will live. Let us imitate him, and do the heroic things among those we come in contact with. Let us be brave for the Christ who was so sacrificing for every one of us."

WATERMAN F. BROWN HAS RECOVERED FROM INJURIES

A man known to all Norwich flower lovers, Waterman F. Brown, who was badly injured when struck by an automobile last fall, remaining in bed for five weeks, has recovered and is working this winter with the United Metal company, Thamesville. However he is only waiting for favorable weather to start planting his gardens at his home in Uncasville, where last season he raised thousands of dahlias, asters, sweet peas and gladioli.

Mr. Brown, who is a native of Scotland, Conn., came to Norwich about fourteen years ago. For the past two years he has owned and occupied in an attractive home on the trolley line in Uncasville. He is known especially as a dahlia sharp and already this season has sent to California, Chicago and other points tubers, especially of the famous Clemenceau, a showy hybrid cactus, yellow, tipped with white and Julian d'Or, a rich red hybrid cactus.

Mr. Brown has crocuses in bloom in his grounds this early in the season.

Two Chimney Fire Calls

The fire department was called out twice Sunday, both calls being chimney fires. The first call came in at 10 o'clock in the morning and was for a chimney fire in the house on Talman street, occupied by Leon Bruckner and owned by Alivian D. Briggs. At 6.39 in the evening the department responded to a call for a chimney fire in the house on Sylvia street, off Perry avenue, occupied by Butsoff Utic. The damage was slight in both cases.

COMMERCE CHAMBER LETTER DISCUSSES LOCAL INTERESTS

Bus transportation, fire prevention, Thames valley development, community chest and tree planting are among the subjects of local interest which are discussed in the March membership letter of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce as follows:

Bus Transportation

It was brought to the attention of the Chamber that the bus service rendered by the New England Transportation Co., from Norwich was not dependable, and far from satisfactory. Investigation proved that the existing conditions were not justifiable.

Upon request of the Chamber, officials of the transportation company came to Norwich and investigated the complaints and services. This resulted in placing an extra bus and operator in Norwich for emergency cases, making arrangements for the repair of busses at the local car barns of the Connecticut company, and studying the possibility of giving additional bus service. A resident representative of the company has been assigned to Norwich until such time as the local bus service operated by the New England transportation company is satisfactory to the people of Norwich and to the company.

One of the disagreeable existing conditions to Worcester going north from Norwich by bus is the lack of the privilege of interchangeable tickets, good for bus or steam car travel. This is caused because of the fact that the New England Transportation company does not operate busses from Norwich to Worcester, a condition over which the company has no control. Every city and town in Massachusetts has the sole right to grant licenses for bus operations through their territories. Effective March 15th, this year, this right has been transferred to the Public Utilities commission of Massachusetts. This action corresponds to the Connecticut law.

An opportunity is now presented to the officials of the New England Transportation company to petition the Public Utilities commissioners of Connecticut and Massachusetts for the right to operate from Norwich to Worcester. At present one may board a bus at Norwich going north as far as North Grosvenordale and if one wishes to travel to Worcester it is necessary to make connections with a privately owned bus line—the schedule of which 50 per cent of the time, does not permit prompt connection.

Fire Prevention

The United States Chamber of Commerce has maintained a general insurance service department for a number of years past. The fire insurance division has taken an active interest in national fire preventation methods. Each year questionnaires are sent to every city and town to ascertain what each community has done to prevent fires, and to learn what the fire losses were, to life and property, during the year. The Chamber answered the questionnaire and received a complimentary reply from James L. Madden, the division manager. An excerpt from the letter states: "Norwich is to be complimented upon the fact that you have maintained such a low fireloss record during recent years. This speaks well for the fire prevention activities which have been carried on." The per capita fire loss for Norwich for 1925 was $1.15 which is a remarkably good record. "Praise to those to whom praise is due." Chief Howard L. Stanton and the efficient department which he has created and maintained, has accomplished this splendid record for Norwich.

One of the big factors in fire prevention methods is the "Cleanup Week" which is universally carried out in this country. These campaigns, in a great measure, encourage community spirit, clean streets, clean premises and vacant lots. They inspire civic pride, elevate the morale of the community, and promote health. The dangerous fire hazards of rubbish piles are removed by municipal authority. Much has been accomplished in preventing fires. Much remains to be done, as the fire losses are still tremendous. It is evident that Norwich is alert to the danger.

Thames Valley Development

The United Commercial Travelers of Norwich recently sponsored a fine conference, attended by the municipal officials of Norwich and New London, to consider the development of the Thames river valley. It was a progressive thing to do and merits approval. It is in line with the conferences held, and the activities performed, by the Chambers of Commerce of both cities, at different times, during the past years for promoting the development considered at the meeting. The building of the military highway on the east bank of the river, as well as the highway on its western bank; the retention of the submarine base as an operating unit for the United States government; the acquisition of Fort Shantok state park in Montville; the deepening of the river channel from Allyn's Point to Norwich in order that an adequate depth could be maintained from Norwich to the Sound; the annual meeting of the State Chamber of Commerce to be held next June at the Griswold for the first time in the history of the state chamber; placing road signs; favoring grants for bus operation licenses in the valley; conferences held by the directors of both organizations to discuss plans for a state beach reservation for eastern Connecticut, similar to Hammonassett, are some of the more important activities which have engaged the attention of the New London and Norwich Chambers of Commerce.

These civic organizations of the twin cities of the Thames river valley are keen to the development possibilities. They welcome the assistance, and the support to their efforts from the Commercial Travelers, and from any other organization whose civic interest is as good as that manifested by the Norwich council.

New Industry

Norwich welcomes the advent of the Maurice Metal Art company, Inc., makers of metal bridge and floor lamps. Morris Sussman who has for years successfully made mattresses and pillows in his Chestnut street factory, has added a new line to his products. At present he is giving employment to eight men in the manufacture of lamps. It means one more diversified product to the list of goods made in Norwich. Every additional industry, large or small, promotes the general prosperity of the community.

Repairs are being made to the machinery in the former Uncas Paperboard company in Thamesville. This plant will be known henceforth as the Tidewater Paperboard company. It is expected that manufacturing operations will be resumed during May.

Community Chest

What is the community chest? It is the combination or grouping together of various local philantropies which depended on voluntary contributions for support, for the purpose of improving standards of work, and raising the necessary funds on a cooperative basis. It applies purely business methods to promote and assist those organizations that exist in every community for charitable purposes. Control is vested in a managing body, under whose supervision all financial business is transacted. Each member agency is required to conform to certain standards of efficiency. Each participating agency submits a budget which will provide for all its operating expenses for a year. The need for the budget must be proven to the satisfaction of the budget committee. The total sum of all the budgets is the amount that is raised to carry on the work for a year.

The funds raised by the co-operative campaign are turned over monthly or quarterly, from the chest, to the member agencies, who are required to spend it according to the budget, as program of work, laid down at the beginning of the fiscal year. Emergencies or unforeseen conditions are taken into consideration and provided for. The internal management of an organization is not interfered with it retains its own identity. Contributors who have a special interest in a specific organization can designate that their contributions go to such organization. Special contributions to a specific agency is included in the quota from the chest, for that particular agency.

The chamber is promoting the appointment of a Federal citizens committee to consider the question of the establishment of a community chest for Norwich. It is a community proposition and its establishment should be decided by a representative community committee.

Tree Planting

A committee of the chamber is studying the question of the protection and planting of trees for Norwich. The beauty of any city is greatly increased by the number of tree-shaded streets, in all classes of residential sections, in a community. Street trees are not only pleasing to the eye but they also contribute to the health of the community. Carl Bannwart states "Every leaf is daily doing its part to improve the healthfulness of its surroundings by feeding on carbon dioxide and building this on element, poisonous to man, into itself, and by manufacturing the life-giving oxygen, so necessary for man and beast."

"The leaves of a fine tree in its prime, if placed individually like blades of grass upon a plot of ground, would cover five acres; thus a tree, though occupying but a small space of ground, does potentially for the atmosphere what a great expanse of lawn does in decreasing the temperature, and vitalizing the air." U. S. Chamber of Commerce report.

HAMPTON ASSOCIATION ACTS UNDER NEW CEMETERY LAW

(Special to the Bulletin)

HAMPTON, March 28—The Hampton Cemetery association has been organized to care for local cemeteries, under the legislative act sponsored by Representative Chester B. Jewett and passed by the general assembly of 1925. The town of Hampton has voted to turn over to this association the care of cemeteries owned by the town. Former residents of Hampton, or descendants of old families, are taking an active interest and will subscribe funds for the care of cemeteries or family lots or individual graves. There is much satisfaction that such a way has now been provided by general statute for the care of old cemeteries or graves otherwise likely to be neglected because of the passing of those especially interested.

The act under which this form of organization may be effected is chapter No. 168 of the public acts of the state of Connecticut, general assembly of 1925. It was modeled after a similar law in Massachusetts. It provides that funds to an amount not less than $100 may be deposited "with the treasurer of the county in which such cemetery shall be located" and said treasurer shall invest the funds in manner provided by section 3043 of the general statutes of Connecticut; and the county treasurer shall pay the income of such fund semi-annually to the treasurer of the town in which the particular cemetery is located, informing said town treasurer of the purpose to which the income is to be applied.

Procedure similar to that in Hampton may be taken under the Jewett act by any town in Connecticut, or promoted by persons interested. It provides an effective plan for the perpetual care of cemeteries or graves which might otherwise be neglected.

THROWN OUT OF AUTO, SUES DRIVER FOR $10,000

On the claim that she was thrown out of an automobile and severely injured by the sudden stopping of the machine, Mary Kalamian of New London has brought suit for $10,000 damages against David Kalamian of that city. The plaintiff also alleges that she has been obliged to give up her usual occupation of a silk mill operator at which she earned $30 per week.

In the suit which was filed Saturday with Clerk George E. Parsons of the superior court it is alleged that on April 12, 1925, the plaintiff was riding in a Chevrolet touring car owned and operated by the defendant, near Cresterfield on the Hartford turnpike, when the defendant carelessly and negligently applied his brakes so suddenly that the car swerved and tipped, throwing the plaintiff out of the car upon the cement road. As a result she received a compound fracture of the collar bone, torn ligaments of the right arm, several broken ribs and many bruises, cuts and abrasions in and around the face, body and limbs.

Ford

When You Trade Your Car—

Ford owners are continually being approached by automobile salesmen who wish to "accept" Fords as part payment on more expensive cars.

It is perfectly logical that automobile dealers everywhere should be eager to trade with Ford owners. The Ford is the most popular automobile in the world. No other used car is so easy to sell as a used Ford — because everyone has confidence in Ford quality. And it is not expensive to re-condition, since Ford replacement parts are lowest in price.

Most automobiles carry greater discounts to dealers than the Ford — another reason why other dealers may offer the Ford owner a larger trade-in allowance.

But when you come to buy a new car, bear these facts in mind:

The amount of the trade-in allowance you can get is not the most important thing for you to consider. The big thing is the difference you have to pay. And remember, that the higher priced car will not be so easy to dispose of when you come to trade it in.

If you wish to trade your Ford for a new automobile, stick to the car that you know to be dependable, useful and economical. Go to your Ford dealer!

He will give you a fair and liberal allowance for your present Ford and will gladly arrange payment of the balance to suit your convenience.

When the deal is over, and you have your new and improved Ford, you will have the satisfaction of knowing positively that you took advantage of the greatest automobile value the world has ever seen — and saved a lot of money, too.

"22 YEARS OF LEADERSHIP AND STILL LEADING IN PRICE—DESIGN—QUALITY"

GIVES $5 VERDICT FOR PLAINTIFF IN SUIT

Judge Charles B. Waller of the court of common pleas in his memorandum of decision handed down Saturday in the case of Henry J. Howard against Michael J. Murphy, both of this city, gives a verdict of $5 to the plaintiff. The suit arose over a boundary dispute in which the plaintiff alleged that the defendant had trespassed upon his property in Walden avenue.

In the decision Judge Waller said in part:

The question in this case arises from a dispute between the properties as to the true line of division between their respective properties.

"I find that the plaintiff was the owner and was in peaceable possession of the property west of this boundary line on the 12th day of December, 1924, and that on said day the defendant wrongfully entered upon the plaintiff's land.

"I find the defendant has failed to establish title either by deed or by adverse use to any land west of the divisional line herein described. I further find that the defendant had committed prior trespassing upon land of the plaintiff but since the plaintiff's committ contains no allegation of title and in view of the circumstances surrounding the acts of trespass, it does not seem to me necessary that an injunction issue."

The decision under the law entitles the plaintiff also to costs.

SETTLEMENT MADE IN TWO CASES BEFORE TRIAL

Settlement in two cases assigned for trial in the common pleas court at New London Saturday was made out of court about noon, and Judge C. B. Waller directed Deputy Sheriff M. J. Martin to adjourn court.

The first case was that of Gioacchino Scarpa and Mrs. Scarpa against Minnie Queen Oddo, and others, all of New London.

The suit arose over a boundary dispute between the properties of the plaintiff and defendant in Shaw street and the complaint alleged that the defendant did some excavating upon the plaintiff's land and claimed damages of $1,000.

The second case was one brought by Michael Robillo against Nicholajs Samatro, both of New London. The plaintiff claimed damages of $250, alleging that he sold to the defendant 23,000 bricks valued at $230 and that he had not received payment. The defendant denied the allegations as set forth in the complaint.

GERALD CHAPMAN DENIED WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

Judge Thomas in Federal Court in New Haven, in Denying the Petition, Said He Saw in It "Nothing New"—Granting of Writ Would Have Automatically Stayed Execution Until U. S. Suppreme Court Again Had Passed on the Case—Whether an Appeal to a Higher Court Would Be Made Counsel For Chapman Would Not Say After the Hearing.

NEW HAVEN, March 29—(AP)—One of three last-minute efforts proposed by counsel to prevent the hanging of Gerald Chapman on April 6 failed today when Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas denied an application for a writ of habeas corpus, raising the constitutional question whether Chapman had a fair trial a year ago in the state superior court. Had the writ been granted Chapman's execution would have been automatically stayed until the supreme court of the United States again had passed on the case.

Ray M. Wiley of Springfield, Mass., who presented the petition in behalf of the condemned man, was criticised by State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn for statements appearing in the petition which Mr. Alcorn declared "didn't come from a healthy mind." He called the court's attention to one paragraph which he said contained allegations which were "impertinent and offensive to the president to the attorney general, the courts which have passed on this case and to me."

The state's attorney who prosecuted Chapman in the superior court and has successfully blocked Chapman's moves in higher courts to escape the gallows, declared that the counsel for the convicted murderer should be judged in contempt of court and that his disbarment would be moved by the state's attorney were Mr. Wiley a Connecticut lawyer.

In denying the petition, Judge Thomas who called a special session of the United States district court to hear the application, said he saw in it "nothing new," since virtually all of the points raised had been passed upon by other procedures.

In reply to Mr. Wiley's contentions that Chapman had not had a fair trial Judge Thomas said that all elements pointed out that the trial had been fair and that the chief justice of the state supreme court had disposed of any unfair aspects in the trial in a decision written by him.

Whether an appeal will be taken immediately to a higher court, Mr. Wiley would not say after the hearing. He called the attention of the court to a recent act which in effect limits a review by a higher court of the action of a federal judge concerning writs of habeas corpus proceedings. Judge Thomas, however, did not comment on this order. After the session was closed he said a writ of mandamus from a higher court would be necessary to require him to sign a petition for an appeal.

Next Move Tomorrow

The next move in the program of legal maneuvers of the condemned man's counsel to remove him from the shadow of the gallows is expected to be taken tomorrow in Hartford, where an application is to be made in a federal court with either a motion for a writ or with an application for executive clemency.

Quite different was the hearing today from the one held on December 4 by the board of pardons room in the state house where Judge Thomas held a special session of the district court to hear arguments on Chapman's application for a writ of habeas corpus which would have returned him to the Atlanta penitentiary.

At that time both Chapman and Mr. Alcorn were called to the witness stand to testify in behalf of the contentions of Chapman, pale and dressed in prison clothes, made an unusual courtroom witness as he eloquently answered questions put by Frederick J. Grocshi his chief counsel. Mr. Groschi was not present today, Mr. Wiley being the only one of Chapman's legal staff of five present. Today there were no witnesses summoned to screened windows or prison guards.

Almost from the outset Mr. Wiley who arrived after court had adjourned for the day necessitating the special session was questioned from the bench and rebuked or corrected by the state's attorney.

Stating that he would refer cases only to the various grounds on which the petition was based, the Springfield attorney was launching into a discussion to the effect that Chapman had been hastily and hurriedly brought to this state to be tried for murder when the court interrupted.

"Why didn't you bring habeas corpus proceedings then?" asked Judge Thomas.

"That in itself was not sufficient to bring complaint," Mr. Wiley answered, continuing that there had been two reasons why that had not been done, one of which he said was lack of counsel for Chapman.

"Absolutely untrue," Mr. Alcorn cut in.

Judge Thomas, mentioning the fact that Mr. Groehl had represented Chapman in an early proceeding involving the $4,500 which had been taken from the bandit at the time of his arrest, was of the opinion that there had been plenty of time for Chapman to see counsel.

Mr. Alcorn declared that he resented the appearance of Mr. Wiley as "an eleventh hour adjunct of the coterie of lawyers for Chapman" and not knowing what had passed before.

Replying that it didn't matter whether he arrived since he was there, Mr. Wiley said, "my mind is limited the same as the state's attorney. I don't remember everything and I don't know everything. I'm willing to be prompted if the occasion arises."

Judge Thomas and the attorney for the defense then entered into a discussion on the "new points raised in this petition". To the lawyer's statement that "later disclosures" had been included, the court replied that the trial had been completed almost a year ago.

Dwelling on the commutation which was granted by the president on November 23, giving the state the custody of Chapman so that he might be tried, Mr. Wiley said that that was "phase of the case of which counsel were unaware at the time they appeared" before Judge Thomas for the previous writ of habeas corpus. When he continued that another new angle was that New Britain police officers testimony was prejudiced to Chapman, Mr. Alcorn said, "they knew that and it served its purpose in the summer."

The judge wanted to know of Mr Wiley if counsel could come into court with an application for a new writ of habeas corpus as long as some one could run a typewriter, or everytime a new development arose. Pressed for a direct answer, he said, "no".

Claiming that the state court imposed the sentence of death illegally because the federal court still had jurisdiction over Chapman, Mr. Wiley said that he trembled to think of putting a man to death without legal process against him.

"That was the way Skelly was put to death by your client," interposed the state's attorney.

"I am not of the same opinion," replied Mr. Wiley.

"Every one is, but you, then. Even your client," Mr. Alcorn said.

When Mr. Alcorn began his argument, he asked Mr. Wiley if the latter had drafted the petition.

"In my opinion it is a good petition," was Mr. Wiley's retort.

Evading a direct answer on whether he stood for the petition, the Springfield lawyer said he had drawn the greater part of it and that Chapman had signed it.

Mr. Alcorn called attention of the court to the fact that it was significant that the senior counsel was not present and that Mr. Wiley was the only one representing the bandit.

"This petition didn't come from a healthy mind," Mr. Alcorn told the court, continuing that Chapman had a staff of six lawyers, "or rather five now, one having retired and gone to California." The state's attorney decried the fact that apparently Chapman would have lawyers to defend him until the proceeds of the bandit's robberies had been exhausted. Meanwhile the state would wait for Chapman to pay the penalty for murder which must come ultimately.

The state's attorney then called the court's attention to the paragraph in the petition which he characterized as "impertinent and offensive." It follows:

"Your petitioner would lastly complain and humbly address this honorable court that up to the filing of this petition that your petitioner had failed to obtain redress from the supreme court of errors of the state of Connecticut, that there was an unfair trial and that the petitioner was held under a process void in the eyes of the law; and that unless there is prompt intervention on the part of this court, that is a stranger to these proceedings, that your petitioner will be executed on the date of April 6, 1926, at Wethersfield prison, Wethersfield, Conn., and on that fateful day, if such a monstrosity should take place, an innocent man will have been hung by the neck, and thus for the first time in the history of our courts, constitutional rights shall have been deliberately ignored and disregarded; and thus shall have occurred the first instance of judicial murder."

Mr. Alcorn recited a phrase of the opinion of the circuit court of appeal to the effect that it was not important how the man came under the jurisdiction of the state court, "he is here and justly convicted." He scorned the use of the words "judicial murder."

"At one time Mr. Wiley attempted to defend his petition. He got no further than "you don't get—" when Mr. Alcorn turned on him with "I get you, that's enough."

Averring that Chapman had a fair trial and that the case was so strong that it couldn't have been decided otherwise, Mr. Alcorn termed Mr. Wiley "the Springfield alibi expert, who had published an advertisement in a radio magazine 'alibi experts wanted.'"

"Where do you get that?" demanded the Springfield attorney.

"I know more about you and your footprints than you think I know," the state's attorney replied with emphasis.

"Well, we can learn about each other," was the response.

Remarking "that softens you," Mr. Alcorn continued his objections to granting the petition. He traced the progress of the case through the various courts, and observed that it was starting all over again.

"They want to disrobe your honor and place a bust of Chapman and of Anderson in your place," he said. "Your honor hit the nail on the head when you said there is nothing new in the petition. They are asking you to review the judgment of the highest court in the land. They want your honor's name on a petition. When they get it, they will start conflict between the two sovereignties. We have been decent to them. Now when other things fail they bring in this petition which is nothing but chaff."

"Gerald Chapman should hang on the sixth of April, if the judgment of the courts are of any effect. There is no doubt about his being a guilty man. Everyone knows that. No authorities are needed," he concluded.

When he had finished Assistant U. S. District Attorney Cohen who had not arrived from Hartford until after the proceedings had been in progress for an hour attempted to address the court.

"There is no need for further talk," he was told by Judge Thomas who briefly went over the points raised, commenting on them and concluded that he could see "no justification of granting the petition, therefore petition denied."

Accompanying Mr. Alcorn to New Haven was County Detective Hickey, whose work led to the arrest of Chapman in Muncie, Ind.

Prince of Wales Had Abscess

LONDON, March 29— (AP) —The Prince of Wales tonight was making "satisfactory progress" toward recovery from the aural operation which he underwent early today for relief from an abscess in his ear.

PROFESSIONAL FASTER WENT 44 DAYS WITHOUT FOOD

BERLIN, March 29.—(AP)—Herr Jolly, professional faster, tonight established a new record of 44 days for abstention from food, but he was helped out of his glass cage, which was carpeter with cigarette butts and strewn with mineral water bottles, as complete a physical wreck as could be imagined. He had beaten the world's record held by Signor Mulatti, of Italy by one day.

Herr Jolly, with a profuse growth of beard and wearing eyeglasses was eagerly received by the crowds and numerous physicians who have been keenly interested in his case. Though unable to walk and speaking in a feeble voice, Jolly's mind seemed very alert. He remarked that during the last three days he had been obliged to reduce his smoking to ten cigarettes daily, as they affected his stomach.

The doctors on superficial examination found the faster's digestive organs entirely dormant and decided to take him to the hospital, where he will be fed a liquid diet exclusively several teaspoons at a time, under the closest medical observations.

Jolly, who is 25 years of age, learned the art of fasting during the French occupation of his Rhenish homeland. When imprisoned he decided on a hunger strike and succeeded in holding out for 18 ays. On this occasion when he entered his cage he weighed 130 pounds, and his weight tonight was around 103.

The gross receipts of this exhibition amounted to $45,000, of which $10,000 was deducted for the municipal entertainment tax. His manager received $15,000, leaving receipts for the faster approximating $20,000.

Jolly's success has inspired a number of emulators, among them a Hungarian woman under the professional name of "Daisy." Exhibitions of this nature, however, henceforth must take in the provinces, as the Berlin police will not issue further licenses, designating such performances as public nuisances.

SPEET BOAT BABY GAR VII WAS SUNK OFF HAVANA

HAVANA, March 29.—(AP) — The speed boat Baby Gar VII, driven by George Wood of Detroit, sank in 100 fathoms of water off Havana this afternoon after she had rammed the motorboat Miss Palm each in the open speed boat contest. Wood and his mechanic, Joe Kenny, were rescued.

Miss Palm Beach, badly damaged, was towed into Havana harbor.

The accident occurred when the two boats, running nearly forty miles an hour closely following Miss Okeechobee, driven by Mrs. W. J. Connors of Buffalo, reached the buoy at the turn of the second lap, and attempted to round it.

Miss Palm Beach hit the wake of Miss Okeechobee and leaped clear of the water, dropping into the hollow. Baby Gar crashed head on into the side of Miss Palm Beach, tearing a large hole in the upper structure.

Mr. Wood and Kenny were thrown clear of their boat when she struck. Kenny unbuttoned his life preserver and swam to the Baby Gar, a rope from which had been caught by the judges' boat.

With the Baby Gar's engine still going full sped and the boat plunging over the waves in a circle Kenny managed to board her and cut off the engines. Baby Gar sank beneath him and Kenny swam to the judges' boat again and was pulled aboard.

Mrs. Connors, seeing the accident, turned her speed boat around and came rushing back to pick up George Wood, who also was trying to reach the Baby Gar.

FLU EPIDEMIC REACHED PEAK IN STATE LAST WEEK

HARTFORD, March 29.—(AP)—Influenza reached its highest prevalence in the state during the present epidemic last week, 531 cases being reported to the state department of health in the seven day period ended at noon today. This total is an increase of 360 over the previous week and indicates a steady spread of the disease as reports in other weeks were 99, 20 and even fewer cases.

The spread is fairly general about the state, a few cases being reported from almost every community. New Haven and Bridgeport, however, have been the locations of the worst epidemics. The disease still maintains a mild form, reports show, very few deaths being reported and these mostly because of pneumonia complications.

Pneumonia is also still highly prevalent, there being 28 new cases reported last week. Measles decreased considerably during the period, 211 cases being reported, or 360 less than a week ago. There were slight increases in the number of cases of scarlet fever and whooping cough, while there was a decrease in diphtheria cases.

The department reports that well child conferences next week will be held as follows: Tuesday, Wauregan and Colchester; Wednesday, Broad Brook; Thursday, Moosup and Columbia. Friday, Kensington.

"BEAUTY SURGEON" BEING SUED FOR $100,000 DAMAGES

NEW YORK, March 29—(AP)—A suit for $100,000 damages was filed today by Mrs. Rhea Houston Stevens, magazine writer and former wife of Walter Houston, the actor, against Dr. J. Eastman Sheehan, "beauty surgeon."

Mrs. Stevens charges that her face was permanently scarred and her health impaired by a "face lifting" operation performed by Dr. Sheehan. She further avows that, during an operation, lasting four hours and 30 minutes, he made an unauthorized incision on the thigh which resulted in further complications. She says she had to stay in a hospital 31 days as a result of the operations.

$50,000,000 MORE INCOME TAXES WITH LOWER RATES

WASHINGTON, March 29.—(AP)—Approximately $50,000,000 more in income taxes will be colected in the March quarterly payments this year than in 1925 despite the lower rates, it was intimated today at the treasury.

Collections have reached $480,000,000 on the returns filed March 15 and Acting-Secretary Winston predicted an additional $10,000,000 would be received.

The increase was attributed by Mr. Winston to the "remarkably prosperous conditions of last year and to the fact that corporations received no reduction in taxes under the new law while their incomes last year increased considerably.

French Credits For $1 Bill Voted 420-131

Chamber of Deputies Clears the Way For Discussion of Financial Measures Today.

PARIS, March 29—(AP)—The chamber of deputies tonight voted the provisional credits for the month of April. The vote was 420 to 131.

This cleared the way for a discussion of M. Peret's financial measures tomorrow afternoon.

The credits were approved virtually as submitted, with the exception of a reduction in the Syrian appropriation of one million francs.

BRIAND GOVERNMENT IS SHOWING WEAKNESS

PARIS, March 29.—(AP)—Untoward events today again cast their shadow over the Briand government on the eve of the crisis in the discussion of financial restoration for France, the seventh such crisis since Etienne Clementel abandoned the finance ministry one year ago.

The government was defeated in the chamber today on the question of credits for military operations in Syria, and the franc again sagged to a new low level, because of the impression created by the communists' success in yesterday's special election.

The cabinet did not pose a question of confidence on the request for the Syrian credits, so the defeat did not involve the fate of the Briand government. It was regarded, however, as a significant revelation of the government's weakness on the eve of another struggle to obtain parliamentary sanction for new taxes.

Finance Minister Peret this morning wrung from the finance committee of the chamber reluctant approval of a modified business turnover tax. The increase proposed by the minister, from one and one half to two per cent., will apply to wholesale and jobbing transactions.

WEATHER HAD UNFAVORABLE EFFECT ON RETAIL TRADE

BOSTON, March 29.—(AP)—Heavy snows in February and bad weather in March had an unfavorable effect on retail trade in New England, the monthly review of the Federal Reserve bank of Boston said today.

Merchants kept their orders for goods at a minimum because of the conditions, the review said. Representative department stores reported that their February sales were less than a year ago and sales during the first three weeks of March were nearly larger than in the corresponding period of 1925.

"Retail sales of automobiles to New England consumers also have been sharply curtailed by the severe winter weather," the review said. "Distribution in February of both low priced and high prices cars was but slightly more than half the sales of February, 1925, and about two-thirds of the sales in January, 1926.

"The key industries of New England continue to report a relatively small volume of business, considering the prevailing season. March is usually the month of largest production of shoes in the spring, and, although there has been a sharp rise in output since December, production has been considerably less than in the early quarter of any of the three preceding years. In fact, shoe production the country over is relatively low.

"The cotton textile industry is another major industry with current orders and output at a new low level. The consumption of raw material by New England mills during both January and February was less than a year ago.

"The woolen industry reports relatively the lowest rate of production of any of the three leading industries. The recession in activity is not confined in this case to this district, but is wide-spread. One favorable factor in the woolen industry is that daily average consumption of raw material by the mills increased in February, as compared with January, whereas usually there is a decline.

"Prospective activity in the building industry in New England is not as favorable as it was a few months ago, due to a sharp decline in the volume of contracts awarded for new construction. In February perhaps, due to the severe weather, fewer contracts were awarded than a year ago or in the preceding month of January. A decline from January to February is contrary to the usual seasonal experience. Furthermore, in each of the first three weeks of March fewer contracts were awarded than a year ago.

"Wholesale commodity prices were decidedly weak during February and the early part of March, following a period of approximate stabilization of movements of funds in connection with the palyment of income taxes and treasury operations. Money rates were usually at the highest point of the spring season during March, while April, May and June are typical months of easing rates."

Unable To Dampen "Dry" Controversy

Action Taken to Re-Constitute the Much Re-Constituted Enforcement Machinery.

WASHINGTON, March 29—(AP)—Out of the continued din and clatter of the prohibition controversy there emerged today some definite action by both congress and the administration to further re-constitute the much-re-constituted enforcement machinery of the federal government.

The house passed without a record vote the bill fathered by the treasury and favored by both wets and drys to place all except the highest officers of the prohibition forces under civil service. Coincidently, Assistant Secretary Andrews created and filled two new posts in his enforcement staff. One of the new officials will have supervision over brewery permits and the other over permits for withdrawal of wine.

Even though the leaders were in agreement in support of the civil service bill, its passage was opposed by Representative Blanton, democrat, of Texas, who supplemented his remarks by reading a letter from a minister, accusing another minister of going on a drunken spree.

In the senate both wets and drys held their peace while they prepared for next week's committee hearings on pending modification bills. The wets summoned Assistant Secretary Andrews and District Attorney Buckner at New York as the first witnesses to appear next Monday, and promised that other distinguished personages would be asked by them to appear later.

Just as he was receiving the senate summons General Andrews disclosed that he proposed to do some investigating of his own, and to that end would begin on July 1 an inspection trip taking him along the southern boundary, to the Pacific coast and back through the chain of enforcement outposts on the edge of Canada.

Another batch of petitions and legislative proposals, including the memorial of the Rhode Island house for a nationwide prohibition referendum, were loosed during the day on both senate and house. Senator Borah, a dry, introduced an amendment to make more specific a pending referendum proposal. Chairman Fraham of the house judiciary committee, which has been urged both by the administration and the anti-saloon league to provide more judicial machinery to handle prohibition cases, presented a bill to create ten new federal judges scattered over most of the country.

The summons issued to Assistant Secretary Andrews by the state prohibition investigation committee authorized at the request of Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey. His New Jersey colleague, Senator Edwards, a democrat, said he expected to call in Hudson Maxim, the inventor, still another wet, and Senator Jones, democrat, Maryland, asked that steps be taken to have a higher official of the Canadian government advise the committee of the prohibition situation in Canada.

Representative Blanton's colorful contribution to the house debate was made, he said, to illustrate the inclinations of some of those who want modification of the present prohibition regime. He referred particularly to the Rev. A. T. Abernethy, of Rutherford college, North Carolina, who he said had advocated amendment of the Volstead act. As testimony on the subject of that minister's standing he presented a letter he said had been written by the Rev. W. E. Poovey, a Methodist minister at Marion, N. C., saying that Abernethy in 1903 was on a drunken spree for several weeks," and had come into chapel "with his breath heavy with alcoholic fumes." The letter also said that in 1907, while holding a license to preach in a church in Philadelphia, Abernethy "had at least three living wives from whom he had not been divorced."

Despite its endorsement by the anti-saloon league, the civil service bill was opposed by Representative Blanton as "a trap laid by the wet members of congress to discredit present prohibition employes."

The bill was defended by its author, Representative Cramton, republican, Michigan, a dry, as a means of redemption from the present system, "under which many positions in the prohibition unit are under political control," and by Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, a wet, on the theory that "something should be done to remedy the present situation." The measure still lacks the approval of the senate.

HOT DEBATE IN SENATE ON ITALIAN DEBT SETTLEMENT

Premier Mussolini of Italy Was Berated by Senator Robinson as Menacing the Peace of Europe—The American Debt Commission Was Accused of Having Used a "New System of Mathematics" in Figuring the Italian Settlement.

WASHINGTON, March 29—(AP)—The Italian debt settlement kicked up a real rumpus today in the senate, with rules going by the board as senators engaged in a running cross fire of attack and defense. Premier Mussolini came in for a few broadsides and the conflict even extended to who was responsible for writing the republican party platform of 1924.

While the debate of three hours was reaching its climax the American debt commission was accused of having used a "new system of mathematics" in figuring the Italian settlement.

The accusation came after Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, a member of the commission, and generally regarded as a financial wizard, had made an error of $23,000,000 in calculating yearly interest on a hypothetical settlement.

Before the discussion ended Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, offered a resolution directing the senate foreign relations committee to investigate Italy's ability to pay her war debt; and the amount or money spent for propaganda in this country.

Both Senator Reed and Robinson of Arkansas, the democratic leader, who opened the debate, suggested delay in action on the debt settlement until after the projected disarmament conference to ascertain Italy's attitude on the question of world peace.

Senator Robinson asserted that Mussolini is forming combinations that threaten the peace of Europe and both he and Senator Reed averted to the premier's speech of yesterday, at the seventh anniversary of the birth of fascism in which he urged Italians to be ready when the "wheel of destiny" turned.

Senator Reed declared that if the United States would cut off commerce with Italy and refuse to lend it any more money the Italians would understand "that not even an Italian dictator can be a dictator over America."

Adverting to the appeal last week of Senator Smoot not to make the debt settlement "a football of partisan politics," Senator Robinson said the republican party's war debt platform plank was an invitation to political support in 1924 on the basis of the British debt settlement. Then the republicans supporting the Italian settlement were charged with violating the platform pledge in granting to Italy much better terms than those given Great Britain.

Senators Bingham, Connecticut and Edge, New Jersey, republicans, disputed this contention, and the democrats were supported then by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho.

"Capacity to pay," the formula set up by the American debt commission as the basis for the Italian, Belgian and other settlements came in for vigorous attack. It was charged that this formula was arrived at after the British settlement and as a means of justifying the commission in giving better terms to the other debtors.

"Italy owes her very life to us and France," Senator Reed declared. "Our obligation to Italy was washed out by the blood of American soldiers, who were put into the line and helped turn back the Germans after the Italian soldiers had turned their backs and fled.

"I do not say that Great Britain and France owe their lives to us but they owe us a debt of gratitude that should not be forgotten for a thousand years."

While Senator Reed was speaking, Sir Esme Howard, the British ambassador sat in the diplomatic gallery.

ASK RESIGNATION OF JUDGE CHARGED WITH MANSLAUGHTER

CONCORD, N. H., March 29—(AP)—The resignation of Judge Fred Jones of the municipal court had been asked by Governor John G. Winant, but if the Judge refuses the request the state has no way to oust him without calling a special session of the legislature. Judge Jones is free under $2,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of a woman in an automobile accident.

Under New Hampshire law, a municipal court judge can be removed only through impeachment proceedings or by being addressed out of office. In both cases action by the legislature is necessary. In the first the house draws the charges and the senate tries the case. In the second case, a bill calling for removal is presented and if legally passed the office is automatically vacated and a successor appointed.

This year's session of the legislature had adjourned and will not reconvene until the winter of 1927. Should the Judge refuse to resign removal proceedings cannot be brought until then without a special session. Governor Winant today indicated he would not call a special session in any case. Judge Jones has not revealed his intentions concerning the governor's request.

WHITTEMORE TELLS OF ROBBERIES BY HIS BAND

NEW YORK, March 29—(AP)—With a hangman's noose awaiting him in Maryland, and the New York electric chair opening for him as the result of a hold-up murders in Buffalo, Richard Reese Whittemore clutched at life and the refuge of prison today by continuing his confession to the district attorney of jewel-robberies committed by his band.

What he revealed and what is contained in statements made by other members of the gang, whose depositions have cost jewellers close to $1,000,000 will not be made public "in the interests of public justice," District Attorney Banton said tonight. Neither will any further disclosure concerning robberies committeed by the band be given out, he said.

The principal development in the case today was the plea of guilty entered to three indictments, each carrying a maximum penalty of 20 years, by Anthony Paladino, member of the gang who made a complete confession last week and who revealed the gang's method of operation. He pleaded guilty to robberies totalling $295,000.

STOCK PRICES TUMBLE IN WAVE OF SELLING

NEW YORK, March 29.—(By The A. P.)—Stocks of all trades and prescriptions were thrown for sale on the New York stock exchange today in a seemingly never-ending stream with the result that prices were carried down 1 to 20 points. The selling movement was one of the most extensive that has taken place since the current downswing began a month ago as shown by the fact that of the 626 individual issues traded in, 230 were hammered to new low levels for the year, and 60 others duplicated their previous minimum quotations.

Except for the calling of about $25,000,000 additional in bank loans, which sent the call money rate from 4 3-4 to 5 1-2 per cent, and is not unusual around the end of the months, there was nothing in the day's news to account for the selling.

TWO DRINKS OF CIDER COSTLY FOR NEW LONDON BOY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 29—Tilliston Daniels, 19 of New London where he has won recognition as a star pitcher on Bulkeley high school baseball team during the past few years was found guilty of driving while under the influence of liquor when presented in the local police court Monday morning. He was fined $100 and costs. Daniels paid an assessment of $111.45 and as a receipt the court gave him some good advice relative to the dangers of using liquor, especially when operating an automobile. Daniels was the driver of a Reo express truck of the Standard Oil company headquarters, New London, which plowed through a fence and fell on its side against the portable home of James D. Sheppard, near Williams Crossing, on the Norwich-Willimantic road, about four o'clock Saturday afternoon. The location of the accident is over four miles from this city and about one-half mile within the confines of the town of Windham. Upon learning the identity of the driver and hearing that he was intoxicated the local police notified New London headquarters and Officers Augustus Roy and Thomas Lyden arrested Daniels. The young man pleaded guilty to the charge through his guardian ad litem, Probation Officer Arnold Peckham. A charge of intoxication was dropped on recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Gardner, who took into consideration the fact that the young man appeared penitent. Probation Officer Peckham said that Daniels had told him that he had had but two drinks of cider which created havoc with his sobriety.

THE GOVERNOR IS TOLD GRIEVANCE OF SALESMAN

WILLIMANTIC, March 29—Robert F. Sweet, of 77 Norwood avenue, Edgewood, R. I., a traveling salesman well known in this city, registered a complaint Monday with Governor John H. Trumbull of Connecticut. He protested the action of Constable Louis M. Hodis of this city who halted his car here Friday night while attired in plainclothes. Mr. Sweet accompanied by a male friend was followed through the city as he drove down Main street in his Hudson coach on his way to Rhode Island. At Natchaug Bridge, on the North Windham road, near the city line, the sedan which had followed him turned in sharply in front of his car. He halted his own machine and swinging quickly about, roared back to police headquarters and complained of what appeared to him to be an attempt at holdup. It was learned that the man who had tried to stop him was Constable Hodis, who suspected Sweet of running a bootleg car. The matter was believed settled but when Sweet returned to the bridge the constable held him up and told him he was under arrest for speeding and going to the left of a silent policeman. This got Sweet stirred up and his convictions were strengthened when he was released by Captain of Police Grady. Sweet's complaint other than the particulars set forth is general in its scope, inasmuch as he protests against the practice of constables in plain clothes who stop automobiles along the highway. For one thing, he feels that for their own protection they should wear a uniform or a badge lest they be shot down or run over when taken for bandits. Constable Hodis feels that he was justified in taking Sweet's car for a possible bootlegging machine. Hudson coaches are frequently used for the illegal transportation of liquor and the back of this particular car was filled up with various signs and other material used by the traveling salesman which showed through the windows and gave it the appearance of being loaded.

YANTIC

The state highway department has repaired the bridge known as the Ghost bridge in Lebanon, which collapsed when H. Glaubinger was crossing last Wednesday, causing his death. Friday night they withdrew the signal men who had been placed at the Yantic intersecting highway between the Colchester and Willimantic roads, men engaged to direct the Hartford traffic via the Willimantic road. Light passenger cars were allowed over the Colchester road using the detour over the Polly bridge, in the paper mill district.

The bridge that collapsed was built by a Yantic man, the late C. J. Pendleton, civil engineer for the Berlin Bridge Construction company, nearly 50 years ago. It was one of the first of his construction and has had little or no repair to the iron work in all these years.

Mr. Glaubinger was favorably known to all the farmers of this section, having purchased cattle from nearly all, and his death is greatly regretted.

DANIELSON

SPECIAL FREIGHT SERVICE PROVIDED FOR BOROUGH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 29.—New and special freight service for Danielson, that has been arranged through Agent C. F. Mitchell by the N. Y., N. H. and H. railroad, is certain to be appreciated by businessmen, manufacturing concerns and others here and in this vicinity.

This new and fast service provides a daily car from Boston to Danielson, a daily car from Worcester to Danielson and a daily car from Philadelphia to Danielson.

Loadings for the Danielson cars out of Boston and Worcester can be made in those cities up to 4 p. m. week days and the cars will be on the sidings here ready to unload at from 9 to 9:30 o'clock the following morning. This is practically an express service, is daily and certain to be valuable to Danielson interests.

The daily car from Philadelphia will reach here about 1:30 p. m. This car will be routed through the Cedar Hill yards direct to Danielson, instead of following a former plan of routing such freight to Providence and thence to Danielson. The new arrangement will effect a saving of about four days in time of getting freight to Danielson and points farther west, for this car will bring in shipments originating as far west as Ohio.

This new service is the best the New Haven road has ever provided for this community. It approximates express service, matches fast deliveries made by motor trucks and puts the railroad into the very front rank of transportation concerns competing for freight business into this territory. On meat shipments out of Boston, for instance, or as regards other perishable shipments during the hot weather season, it will be noted that late afternoon loadings can be made in Boston or Worcester, the cars moving during the cool of the night and the cars set here ready for unloading early in the forenoon. The arrangement is one over which Danielson is certain to show its appreciation.

NOTHING HEARD MONDAY OF PEPLER BURGLAR

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 29.—Lines put out in many directions had failed up to Monday afternoon to bring any clue that might lead to the arrest of the man who burglarized the Herbert H. Pepler home on Broad street Saturday night and made a sensational getaway with the loot. By a daring leap from the front veranda roof just after he had been dodging bullets fired at him by the owner of State Officer Miles V. Urquhart. Many report came to state officers make the effort to trace the unknown relative to the possibility of his being in the place of another spot but of these reports developed anything of interest upon investigation. Officer Urquhart may have slightly wounded the man, but there is no way of determining this the officer said today, but wanting to shoot before seeking only to capture him. The fellow managed to make off at good speed in the count but this boy would be possible even should he be located shortly.

BAY STATE MAN IN HASTE— BUT HAD TO WAIT A BIT

DANIELSON, March 29.— Bleuelen-ser Cay, sailing from Blueburg, Mass., was driving south in his touring car on Monday. He made an unexpected stop-over in Danielson and spent a bit of time before the town court. A state officer said the man had been speeding and the court imposed a fine of $25 and costs, a total of $37.29. The chase after Call began down near Bishop's crossing in the town of Brooklyn, but he was not apprehended until he had come the several miles bound to cross over the Killingly line.

Nearing the eve of April 1, the thoughts and conversations of trout fishermen in Danielson turn to Thursday and the coming of the open season. Their enthusiasm was not seething Monday, because of the unusually cold weather and the possibility of its continuing through to Friday. Their vision was of rod and flies and reels and the other paraphernalia that go with early April trouting when, the weather isn't all that it should be. Take the matter of angle worms, for instance. They would freeze on a hooking such as Monday produced and be as stiff as a poker after a few casts through the icy air. But that can be remedied. Motorists put denatured alcohol in the radiators of their cars to prevent freezing. Why not fill the worms with the same liquid and keep them pliable in all temperatures?

PUTNAM

BETTER WOODSTOCK ROAD OF LOCAL ADVANTAGE

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 29—Selectman Albert H. Williams of the town of Woodstock writes to President deCoudres of the Putnam chamber of commerce that he has been advised by State Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald that the state will co-operate to improve the road from Taylor's corner to West Woodstock Four Corners.

Mr. Williams in his letter thanks the directors of the chamber of commerce for their interest in the project and for the moral support given the town of Woodstock in bringing about such a successful conclusion to their efforts to have this road improved.

The Putnam chamber of commerce was interested in the improvement, because of the belief that with the improved road, trade will be diverted to Putnam that is now going to Southbridge and in the event that the road will eventually be improved to Eastford, which will greatly shorten the road from Putnam to that little town.

ILLITERACY CRUSADE IS PLANNED BEFORE CENSUS

WASHINGTON, March 29 (AP)—The federal census takers of 1930 would be unable to discover any illiterates in the United States, if the National literacy crusade just organized here had its way. Captained by William Allen White, the Kansas editor, the crusade plans to coordinate the activities of several organizations that have been seeking to stamp out illiteracy.

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, national director of the group, who is in charge of the newly-opened headquarters here, and who has been active in educational work in the south, disclosed these findings:

There are 10,000 who cannot read or write in the city of Washington.

Philadelphia has nearly 80,000 illiterates.

New York city has enough to make a city the size of Denver.

Pennsylvania has enough to populate two states the size of Wyoming.

Ohio has more native born white illiterates than has the state of Mississippi.

There are many counties in the United States where 25 to 30 per cent of the people are unable to read and write and some counties where 45 to 50 per cent are illiterate.

Five million men and women in this country have completely missed school.

The lead pencil business would be increased $3,000,000 annually, by the wiping out of illiteracy.

"More can be done during the next five years in eliminating illiteracy than has been done in any 50 years before," said Mr. Stewart. "Many states and communities are now waging war against illiteracy, and they are determined that the federal census takers of 1930 shall not find one in their neighborhood who cannot read or write. They feel that illiteracy is a disgrace.

"The slow processes of the public and private schools cannot cope unaided with illiteracy. These schools have done their best but 5,000,000 men and women in the United States have missed them, and must now be campaigned into school. Our program is to put the fight into every section of the United States. We will help where existing organizations or the school authorities are attacking adult illiteracy and where the campaign has not penetrated, we shall aid the local and state forces to organize. We shall also organize work in the prisons and in addition make a vigorous campaign among the Indians."

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

Even with the advent of milder weather there has been no marked increase in building activities throughout the eastern part of the state. There have been no new building permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton during the past week although several applications for new buildings were filed at the office. Contractors in Norwich and elsewhere are becoming doubtful as to the outlook for the coming year although they expected a record year earlier in the season.

During the past week some little progress has been made on building projects now in hand. At the Shetland Arms work is well along on the interior and completion is not many weeks distant. The work at the Norwich State hospital is completed and the contractors will leave and shi within the next few days.

The work of remodeling the old P. A. Wells store on Main street owned by Schwartz Bros. is nearing completion and one of the stores is already occupied. Contractor Sweeney who is doing the work has pushed hustles along with all possible speed. Contractor Sweeney also has made good progress on the remodeling of the building at the corner of Franklin and Willow streets.

Other work in the city is being brought along as rapidly as the weather permits.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

There were nine sales of real estate in Norwich during the past week as compared to 16 sales for the corresponding week in 1925. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $150,850 and $67,850.

The sales of real estate in New London during the past week numbered 14 an increase of nine sales over the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $56,970 and $22,000.

Building Outlook Uncertain

Commenting on the building outlook for the current year The Commercial Record says:

"Some uncertainty is still expressed as to what the trend of building activity will be during the current year. Admittedly there was a lull during February, both in Connecticut and in the country as a whole. But whether this was a temporary condition influenced by the weather and natural seasonal tendencies, or whether it may be taken as an activity as we are to witness it during the entire year seems as yet to be an undetermined question. As far as this state is concerned we have previously expressed the view that building operations have undergone only a temporary decline; that the volume of work planned is sufficient to insure construction work of substantial, if not record proportions.

"We must admit that, so far as the issuance of building permits in this state is concerned, nothing in the way of a material improvement has developed to substantiate this belief. And although we do not feel justified in changing our opinion, we must, in estimating the prospects for future building in this state, agree with S. W. Strauss & Co., who, in commenting on the country's probable building totals for this year, say that the activity that will develop in building circles remains to be seen."

National Building Survey

In their national monthly building survey published March 1, the S. W. Strauss and company find that an element of uncertainty prevails in building circles throughout the country, saying in part: "February building in 448 cities showed a slight decline from January and a loss from February, 1925, of about seven per cent. This was the first month since March, 1925, in which the country as a whole showed a loss from the corresponding month of the previous year. Whether this means that the general building industry is getting down to a more conservative basis than has been the case during the last three or four years or whether, as was the case for the first three months of 1925, there is merely a temporary easing up, remains to be seen. Unfavorable weather conditions have blocked traffic throughout a large section of the populous Northeastern states combined with slowing up processes due to the coal strike, and undoubtedly affected building conditions adversely. Nothing, however, developed to indicate any change in fundamental conditions.

Building permits were issued in the 448 centers amounting to $271,523,498 compared with $293,096,127 in February, 1925. Since the beginning of the year these cities have shown a small gain, however, as there was an increase of 9 per cent in their January reports. February losses were shown in such leading cities as Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, Washington, Boston, Cleveland, Portland, Ore., Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Oakland, Calif., and St. Louis. Among the principal northern and western cities reporting increased activities were Newark, and Jersey City, N. J., San Francisco, Seattle and Indianapolis. The 25 leading cities showed a gain of two per cent, 18 of them having increases and 12 having losses.

The proposed work will begin at extensive portable changes.

The sketches for the erection of the proposed business building on Main street on a site extending through to Bluman street was submitted by Thomas Greenhill, 4 Channing street, for the New London Bluman Supply Co. The plans call for a two-story building of brick and steel construction.

Tire Easily?

That dragged-out feeling is frequently due to poisons absorbed by the blood from constipated bowels. Headaches, sleeplessness and skin trouble can all be traced to the same source.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody, Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit, and can be discontinued at any time.

BOHEMIANISM IN GOLDEN GATE CITY IS PASSING

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29 (AP)—Bohemianism, of the Murger variety has all but passed in San Francisco where once it claimed stark with Greenwich Village. Prohibition and the war have been blamed for the end with this as they have with many other things.

There are still art colonies here, and as one of their denizens recently stated "They have become national food."

On Telegraph hill, overlooking San Francisco bay, clusters one remnant of "artistic." Some of them are very eccentric, some perspicacious, some are runs a circulating library and several others work for a living at trades or as clerks.

Over on Russian Hill is another group but one of the artists living there says there is not an easel on the hill. A few designers and commercial artists do some work at home and one portrait man does odd jobs of painting. That is limited locally for artists done the interior of a once famous cafe. He put a few well-placed nudes on the walls and took it out of food and drink. The place went down before prohibition raiders and more moderate night clubs.

Across the bay in Sausalito . . . their colony of "intelligentsia." Down at Carmel is a more formidable gathering of writers, painters, poets and a sculptor or two. The art colony here often refer to the Carmelites as Babbitt-bred because they write novels, articles for popular magazines and go about in cars.

The old life, however, is going and more do the inhabitants of the art colony sit around in shabby cafes, smoking cigarettes and shun the workaday world as they did ever so many five or six years ago. Most of those who are left of the old colony are well, play golf and do things for exercise.

Perhaps it is because the younger public no longer takes "Bohemianism" seriously. It was not long ago that a colony "down the Peninsula" announced that they would never permit the progressive spirit to invade their district. They would not have paving, concrete walks, curbs, lights or anything else believed to be essential to "a real estate boom." In fact they would not have a boom, but a boom came the town "subdivisionists" invaded them. Then the newspapers said that the "anti-progress" of the Bohemians was simply "press agentry." . . . MUSIC CLUBS ORGANIZE FOR SESQUI-CENTENNIAL CONTEST

COLUMBUS, O., March 29 (AP)—Every state in the union will be organized and each one of the 2,000 music clubs is expected to have at least one entrant in the musical competition of the Sesqui-Centennial celebration at Philadelphia, according to Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs.

Musical competition at the celebration will be under the direction of the federation.

There will be contests in piano, violin, organ, voice, and the four voices —soprano, alto, tenor, and bass.

State and group state elimination contests will be held prior to the finals, beginning Nov. 17, 1926, in Philadelphia.

The National federation has been holding contests for ten years and will use the same organization for the celebration.

McCoy's Rinolin Greatest Help When Constipation Is Chronic

Why Purge Yourself Daily When This Modern Emulsion Will Establish Regular and Natural Bowel Movements In 10 Days or Money Back?

Seems too good to be true, but after you thoroughly remove the waste deposits and expel every particle of poisonous waste from the intestines, the active peristalsis that results will make you forget pills and salts and calomel and all purgatives and cathartics for weeks to come.

And when your bowels move regularly as nature intended they should move, what a difference it will make in you—and all for the better.

Your skin will be clearer and cleaner for one thing and your eyes will sparkle with healthy brightness. For constipation surely does cause dull eyes and sallow skin.

Yes; and your mind will be keener, too, and vigorous physical activity will take the place of lassitude, tiredness and lack of ambition.

For habitual constipation is a condition that is so unnatural that often the blood becomes poisoned with the toxins that seep into every fibre of the system—often causing auto-intoxication.

But now McCoy's Rinolin, the new, pleasant to take emulsion, tells millions of unfortunate victims of constipation that if they will follow directions for ten days—perhaps less—that bowels will become regular and natural and stay that way for many days to come.

McCoy's Rinolin is the new Emulsion that Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere are selling so much of. It is guaranteed to rid you of habitual constipation in 10 days or money back—just follow the directions. Rinolin tonight—Pep tomorrow.

A PERSISTENT CHALLENGER

[illegible] years have gone by since there [illegible] international yacht race in [illegible] the participating yachts representing the New York Yacht club and Sir Thomas Lipton. Hopes have been expressed that there would be another challenge and this has even been indicated by Sir Thomas within the past few years. His latest statement to the effect that he will build another challenger with which he will try to lift America's cup will serve to whet the [illegible] even though the contest cannot [illegible] another year at [illegible] Thomas Lipton began [illegible] the cup he has been [illegible] let me pass by [illegible] no means discouraged. Hope bounds to the front persistently and in the contemplation of another challenge the cheerful loser entertains the happy belief that he is going to win next time. Thus far that hope has been crushed as regularly as it has appeared, but the good sportsmanship of Sir Thomas is as much in evidence as ever.

In the dozen years it is not improbable that there would have been other challenges from Sir Thomas but for the interruption caused by the war, and since then there have been other things which have called for attention on both sides of the water. But it is time for a resumption of the contest and there will be interest in noting what the terms are which the challenger will set forth.

The size of the yachts, the size of the sails and the course to be followed have always come in for serious consideration, quite the same as the style of the yachts. During the last test there was much said concerning the sailing off of the race because there was too much wind. That is a matter which must be governed by rules although the idea of racing only with fair weather boats doesn't always get a unanimous endorsement.

The question has often been raised as to whether there would be the same persistency displayed on this side of the water were it a fact that the situation concerning the cup was reversed, but whether or not there is no overlooking the real Lipton sportsmanship.

CURBING HANDSHAKING

According to one report which comes from Washington President Coolidge plans to drop the custom of handshaking, and if that is shown to be the fact there will not be much surprise disclosed.

There may be some disappointment felt on the part of those who have anticipated visiting the white house and shaking hands with the president but when one stops to think of the thousands who encroach upon the time of a busy man and who come by the thousands to shake his hand it is easy to appreciate that his arm quickly gets to the state bordering on paralysis through the observance of this custom.

Handshaking with the president is more than should be expected from a busy man, but aside from the time which a removal there is the physical strain. While there might be the willingness to find the time to carry out the custom, there comes the time when it is necessary to give consideration to the physical well being.

It is well known that President Wilson did away with it during his term in office because it subjected a person in that position to unjustified demands. The idea of following such a course will not appeal to President Coolidge and he has given it a test which has even long and severe. Shaking hands with one person or a group may call for no exertion but a steady performance for a hour or more or where thousands and thousands are involved is a severe tax upon the individual which calls for a halt sooner or later. It must be remembered of course that despite his desires the president [illegible] and humanity has its [illegible]

It is [illegible] to extend whatever help is necessary in order to bring it about, but [illegible] something which must be contributed on the part of the countries directly involved. Under a policy of give and take, with the choice of clearing up an undesirable situation, the best possibilities apparently lie in the [illegible] to get the countries to agree upon the disposition of the disputed territory. If they can be gotten to abandon all claims for a consideration it will probably be the best solution. In that case both would win, but if only one should be the winner there would continue to be an everlasting bone of contention.

A minority report of a committee standing 10 to 1 cannot make a very great impression even on congress, as the Brookhart case will probably show.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29—Congressman John Q. Tilson, republican floor leader of the house, this week gave out a statement on the condition of legislative business now pending or passed. Mr. Tilson feels that the house has done extraordinary quick work this congress, largely owing to the splendid team work that developed.

"All the great appropriation bills have been considered except one, and in addition many of the most important measures upon which action has been recommended by the administration have been also taken up. The house has acted in a thoroughly businesslike manner, and in strict accord with the economy policy of the administration.

The most important bill passed was the reduction of federal taxes, and that is already a law."

Col Tilson mentioned other bills that have passed the house, and which he believes beneficial to the country, said he.

"Other important bills which have been passed by the house, most of which are still pending in the senate, include the McFadden banking bill revising the laws governing national banks; the several bills for the funding of foreign debts with Rumania, Italy, Belgium, Esthonia, Latvia and Czechoslovakia; the public buildings bill, establishing a new and businesslike policy for the construction of the necessary government buildings, and finally abandoning the old 'pork barrel' system; the cooperative marketing bill, the purpose of which is to encourage better methods of marketing, and to aid in solving agricultural problems; the bill abolishing the railway labor board and establishing a new method for settling railway labor disputes; the passage of a concurrent resolution and the appointment of a commission looking toward final disposition of Muscle Shoals; and the White radio bill enacting for the first time a basic law for control of radio communications."

When we read of amendments to the Constitution, for the purpose of changing the date of the inauguration of the president of the United States, but few people realize that the Constitution mentions no specific date for such an event. Certain authorities state it was the intention of the founders of the nation to have its president inaugurated on the first Monday of December, a date on which the annual term of congress begins.

Quoting from men who have carefully looked into the records of those early days we find that the Constitutional convention, left that to the old continental congress, the time and place for that event. Such authorities believe that the delay in ratifying the Constitution is what fixed the exact date of future inaugurations, instead of a "first choice" selection of the month of March. With the slow and crude methods of travel in those days, when legislators and office holders must travel many miles by stagecoach or on horse back several months were needed to prepare and make the journey from distant states to the capital of the United States. Hence a long period was permitted to intervene between election and taking the oath of office.

Back in 1788 the convention fixed the date of the term of office of the president to begin on "the first Wednesday of March next" and as that ceased to fall on the 4th of March, that date became a fixture for inauguration and the beginning of a new session of congress every two years. Nor a session of congress goes by with the introduction of one or more bills to change the date—but a congress ends but it is swamped with bills proposing such change. But in the 137 years of the existing date, no attempt has been even reasonable near success.

Until the inauguration military parades were done away with by President Harding, the weather played a big part in arguments for change of date. Many years the weather has been balmy enough to make the out door ceremonies comfortable, but on several occasions notable was that of President Taft's. There was unseasonal. Wide open spaces were piled knee deep with snow, a blizzard was raging and cold descended among the ranks having from various states to the Capitol.

One serious difficulty in changing dates is that the election of presidents, senators and members of congress can reasonably be fixed, as it has years to a certain date on which to take office and that date is the first of March. To extend the time or to shorten the time, would require so much red tape and change of existing laws and customs, that all efforts to bring about a new date have fallen by the wayside. But the clamor for a change never fails to crop up towards the end of a congressional session.

The payment of estate taxes during the past nine years, running from 1917 to 1925 inclusive shows that New England has paid a heavy amount of federal taxes during that period.

Massachusetts ranks first with $55,696,257; Connecticut second, with $20,208,365; Rhode Island, third $23,307,394; Maine, fourth $4,293,273; New Hampshire fifth $2,150,353; Vermont, sixth $874,390.

The military training camp at Camp Devens will get $600,000 for improvement of barracks under an appropriation bill before congress.

Congresswoman Edith N. Rogers of Massachusetts will at once introduce a bill for the special issuance of a 50 cent piece to be issued as a memorial of the sacrifice service and patriotism of the American women of all wars in which the United States has participated. The coin will bear suitable inscriptions and the movement has the endorsement of the War Mothers Memorial association.

Col. Lewis L. Field and Gen. James H. Haggarty of Connecticut were in Washington this week in conference with the militia bureau regarding matters concerning Connecticut military affairs. They did not make known the details of the visit to the war department saving merely that they called "to pay respects."

Competitive examination for appointment of cadet and engineer for the coast guard will be held June 22nd.

Until a librarian recently found a live and lusty worm in one of the old volumes of the collection, the term "book worm" was thought to be merely a phrase. But the agricultural department at once took up a study of the worm sent them for examination and pronounced it a beetle that was "the real thing"; that it eats books and is technically known as the Sitodrepa Panicea.

The bill of greatest interest to New England before congress this week was the Gooding long and short haul bill, which went down to defeat under the intense work done by New England senators against the bill. Two weeks ago it looked as if the bill would pass, but the continued debate with stiff and sound arguments against it, resulted in winning over to the opposition, a great number of senators from both parties, who were originally in favor of the measure.

A BAD CITIZEN

"Everything else in the world has changed, but not the tramp," the flutter-budget lady asserted. "He dates He wears the same clothes he wore when I was a child, he hasn't shaved since, he tells the same tales, and, worst of all, he has the same outlandish habit of dropping in precisely at meal time.

"All the rest of the civilized world has learned to telephone when he's coming to dine—but not Mr. Tramp He simply waits till you have a huge slice of angel-food cake before you and a sterling-silver spoonful of peach preserve on its way to your mouth, then up he pops—gaunt, forlorn, homeless—and informs you that he's hungry."

"But why fuss?" asked the serious person. "Every good citizen knows what to do with a tramp nowadays. Get his name and address—if he has one—report him to the charities and direct him to their nearest branch. Live up to hese rules!"

"I do, except when he takes me unawares. That's why I wish he'd learn to telephone ahead. Last Sunday, after my four dinner guests had arrived and I was in the kitchen dishing up the best cooking banquet I could possibly concoct, what happened? A big knock at the back door. I had ordered tutti frutti ice cream, so I snatched up my new dollar bill, threw open the door and thrust the money under the nose of the saddest-looking tramp I ever saw!

"I think I jumped clear off the floor Then I heard myself saying, while I shut the door in his face, 'Heavens I—I thought it was the ice cream!' At the same time like an accompaniment, he was mumbling, 'Madam, can you spare me a bite to eat? I'm hungry.'

"Through the open space over the window box I said to him, 'Uh-um-ah. I'm busy getting dinner.'

"But that time his Paradise-cut face had appeared above the window box and his hollow eyes had fixed themselves on the shiny, juicy beef tenderloins I was flaming over and over in the hot pan. 'If you'll wait till I'm through with this,' I said, never thinking of the Charities or that there was any other power on earth to give him a crumb, 'I will butter you a piece of bread. It's all I can possibly do just now.'

"'Thank you!' he said, his eyes on the meat. I never knew before how much 'devouring eyes' could mean.

"I opened the oven and took out seasoned potatoes—tempting golden brown over the top. I turned off the fire under good-looking wax beans and spinach. He watched me. On the table six plates of tomato salad—as pretty as I could make them, in nests of head lettuce. Toasted cheese-crackers, jelly, pickles, celery, olives, ready to carry to the table!

"Suddenly I was cross clear through. What business had he there, looking at my dinner? I whirled around, cut two slices of bread, slapped some butter on them and pushed them at him over the window box. As I still he stood, munching what I piled the tenderloins on the plates and put the buttery juice over them. There were twice as many as would be eaten—

"'Don't tell me you fed him on the dainties—the sacred morsels destined for your kind of company are now, anyway! Do you want to be thought henpecked? Don't tell know—'

"Yes I do know, but what I did was to take a hot plate and cover it with scalloped potatoes beans, spinach and a perfectly luscious tenderloin. I poured a cup of coffee and put cream in it—my guests waiting. I know it wasn't civic or anything, but I tell you if you had heard what he said—"

"What did he say?" disgustedly.

"Oh, it wasn't to me. When he realized that plate was for him he just took it and stared at it—and I heard him say, 'My God!'"—Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Sir William Phipps, the Shepherd, a Great Governor

What a fascination there is about buried treasure! How one would like to know exactly where treasures lies buried! How much more one would like to go to the exact place and dig it up! Young William Phipps, a Maine boy, born on the rocky coast of New England, and accustomed from his childhood to managing a boat in all weathers, had heard of a wrecked Spanish ship filled with gold and silver and jewels. Not only that, but he had a shrewd idea that he could go and get the treasure. On one of his adventurous sailing trips with other "Yankees" he had met a man who had told him all about the treasure, quite in the way of Stevenson's old sea captain in Treasure Island.

William Phipps knew the name of every rope on a vessel, but he could scarcely read and write. As a small boy he had taken care of sheep and done farm work, but he had not gone to school. He had worked building ships and had become a good shipcarpenter. He had been quite contented building ships in Maine, but the Indians had pestered him so much that he had given up the land and taken to the sea. He was just the man to command a boat, for he was rough and quick, ready to knock men down, also determined to have his own way. He sailed down to the West Indies and hunted for two years without finding his treasure. He was then 33. He kept at it, and when he was 36 he found the sunken wreck—and over $1,500,000 worth of treasure! That was the end of man William Phipps was—a character of the sort Stevenson would have loved.

Back in New England, William Phipps having both reputation and money, was more listened to. He was made a political officer, was put in command of a fleet to fight the French and finally became Governor of Massachusetts Colony when he was a little over 40. He ruled with a high hand, just as though he were standing on the deck of one of his boats. He held his own manfully, and was usually in the right, was a staunch patriot and a hard opponent, but his putting the colony in order cost money and made taxpayers his enemies. He cared no more for opposition than he had minded it when sailing a ship. When he was called to England on the complaint of the colonists he went boldly, but he was taken sick and died in London, when he was only 44—a stalwart, self-made man.

Stories That Recall Others

Remembering the Sabbath

Preaching concerning the Sabbath the clergyman told the following story to illustrate his point:

"Two Puritans met on the road on Sunday. The first said to the second: 'Brother William, if this were not the holy Sabbath day I would ask thee if thou hast any hay to sell.' And the second answered, 'Brother John, if this were not the holy Sabbath day I would tell thee I have, at $2 a load.' 'Well, Brother William, if this were not the holy Sabbath day I would tell thee to deliver a load on the morrow.'"

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Palmer Street, Danielson

Mr. Editor: In answer to the little paragraph which appeared in the Danielson news of March 26, I want to tell the writer, who mentions Palmer street as passable, that I defy man and his great friends to get to 63 Upsdale with their expensive cars without getting stuck in ruts of two feet deep. Take to for eight months of the year. Also inquire to the line department which is going to straighten the wheel of their truck, had to get out and walk one-half mile with ladders and hose on their backs.

Interesting scene that we do not see anywhere else.

About the complaint to the state highway department which the writer mentions it is not interested. But if the different ways very interested to find out what the town or Killingly is doing with their taxpayers' money, instead of using it for the upkeep of their streets which are a disgrace to their residents and visitors.

Yours truly,
RESIDENT

Killingly, March 29, 1926.

A Whale's Tooth in the Quinebaug

Mr. Editor: I am going to appeal to your generosity and wisdom for advice regarding a discovery I made some time ago. While rambling about on the outskirts of the town my wandering brought me to the shore of the Quinebaug river. Now, although not seeking for anything in particular, an eagle eye (excuse the self flattery), observed a smooth white object. It was firmly frozen in the sand. It had an unnatural look about it which aroused my curiosity. So, after a great deal of digging and hacking at it with a stone, I managed to pry the article loose. Now, what do you think I had found? Give it up? You could never guess. It was not a genuine diamond as large as a watermelon, neither was it a ruby nor a pearl. But, there in the palm of my hand was a sperm whale's tooth. Of all the unsuspected things! Can you beat that? I was filled with astonishment and surprise. My gaze wandered out toward the middle of the river, and if the whale himself was spouting out there. I would hardly have been more surprised. Nor a full rigged whaling ship with her stalwart, bearded crew pelting me with whale teeth would have aroused my excited imagination more. So I took this interesting specimen home with me and set to work to try and find out how it got there. My efforts so far have proven in vain. Several of my acquaintances have given their opinions but they were worthless.

One man, and he is old enough to know better scoffed at my relic. "There hain't no such thing. A whale hain't got any teeth." That was his view of it. Another old gentlemen took the tooth in his hand. Then, with a knowing air he gave it back to me. And after surveying me intently with a pitying look he endeavored to explain: "That thar is a bar's tuth. These woods wug full o' bar's yars and yars ago." Then he walked off and left me. How I envied him, with so vivid an imagination as to conjure up a bear big enough to possess a tooth four inches long. That must have been some "bar" I thought.

However, these observations went over my head. So, once more I appeal to you or some of the readers of your splendid paper. How in the world did that molar which was once fixed solidly in the jaw of some gigantic whale, threshing about in the mighty ocean, ever get lost on the shore of the truculent Quinebaug river?

I remain, Yours truly,
CHARLES J. LEHNER.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent bottles, any druggists.

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

"Hinapo" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

A few drops of "Hinapo" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns straight outward almost over night.

PRESTON COURT GIVES FINES IN DISORDERLY HOUSE CASE

After a hearing that lasted about two hours late Monday afternoon before Justice of the Peace William Mitchell at a court held at the Norwich state hospital, Louis Plotsky paid a fine of $50 and costs, amounting to over $60 on a charge of keeping a disorderly house at the so-called Flint place at Hallville on the Norwich-Westerly road in the town of Preston. Two of the five persons arrested at his place Sunday morning about 3 o'clock on the charge of frequenting a disorderly house had their cases nolled, and three of them had nolles entered upon payment of actual costs. Nolle was entered against Plotsky on the charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell.

Grand Juror Appleton Main prosecuted the cases and Attorney V. P. A. Quinn appeared for the accused, who had been arrested after a taxi driver, Armand Fornand, had been shot in the hand when admittance to the place was refused to a party of three men. Edward Carey, John Sullivan and Harold Duggan, whom he had driven to the place.

Sergeant John H. Casey and Officer Calkins of the Norwich police force were the first two witnesses called. They told of going to the house and finding in it the people who were arrested. There was a bullet hole through a pane of glass and also one pane of glass in the window broken out. A keg of cider was found in the cellar and there were glasses in the kitchen. Sergeant Casey testified that Plotsky said the woman in the house was his wife, but when she was questioned she denied this.

Fornand, the taxi driver, testified that he had once before driven a party of men to this house to get liquor, and left them there. He didn't know whether they got any or not. He claimed that Merton Hill was at the window as they were arguing about getting in and he saw the barrel of a weapon sticking through the window pane. He claimed that other taxi drivers had told him the Flint place was a place where liquor could be secured and where there were women.

Constable Michael Nolan of Preston corroborated the other officers as to conditions at the place when they went in to the house and said the place had a reputation of being a "coon joint" and that a bookkeeper at Hall Bros. mill had told him weavers at the mill got "stewed" there on Friday nights as that they could not work on Saturdays.

Thomas J. Shahan, employer of the taxi driver, testified that for some time his office and drivers had been getting calls to take men to Hallville and to "Louis' place." These were mostly on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights. They became so many, Mr. Shahan said, that he decided to investigate and find out what was going on. He saw parties of men who had hired a taxi to go to Hallville or Louis' place get into the taxi sober and come back in half an hour or so so drunk that they could hardly get out or pay the taxi fare.

Mrs. Emma Laviano, who was the woman arrested at the place, was put on the stand. She testified that she was working there as housekeeper and had come there saturday morning. She saw no drinking and there had been no women there while she was at the place.

John Sullivan, one of the three who were in the taxi party, testified that he had at other times bought cider and liquor from Louis Plotsky at the place. He told of one time when the liquor was taken out and drunk in the lot and the jug was left behind the wall by Louis' direction.

Plotsky, who had pleaded not guilty, was found guilty of keeping a disorderly house, and was fined $100 and costs, but $50 of the fine was remitted and he settled.

The case against the woman was disposed of by nolle on actual costs which she paid.

Nolles were entered in the cases of Joseph Fronsick and Joe Lusinsky who testified they were working for Plotsky.

Merton Hill testified that he had gone there to trade hens with Plotsky. His case was also nolled on costs, and Jeremiah Murphy testified that he had hired a room for two nights, paying $3 to Plotsky. His case was also nolled on payment of costs.

CONCLUDES LENTEN SERIES AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

Rev. Matthew Brady of St. Thomas seminary, Hartford, concluded his series of Sunday evening lenten sermons at St. Patrick's church on Palm Sunday, delivering a deeply impressive address upon the passion of Christ. He spoke from the text, God loved thee and gave himself for thee.

The preacher pointed out to the large congregation the enormity of the sin of the world of which St. Augustine has said that God could be neither just nor wise nor holy nor good if He permitted sin to go unpunished. Man was so far below God that he could not bear this weight of sin but it required some one equal with God to take on himself the sin of the world. So the Son of God to take on himself the sin of the world. So the Son of God came for his work of redemption, bearing all the anger and vengeance and punishment of God against sin, and taking upon himself in infinite agony all the sins of the past and all the sins of the future. What must be the enormity of sin to cause that suffering that broadcast drops of blood from Him in the garden and what a ransom was paid for us.

It was not Judas or Caiphas or Herod or Pilate or the executioners who caused this death of the Son of God upon the cross. But it was our sins the sins of each individual. What should be our feelings as we behold the crucified Saviour and realize that His death and His sufferings were caused by our sins? In that crucifixion we as sinners behold our handiwork. He died in time that we might live for eternity. The son of God in love for us offered himself a sacrifice for our sins. May it be our prayer that by sharing His sufferings here on earth we may be deemed worthy to share His glory for eternity.

The musical part of the service by the choir and soloists was carried out in excellent form under the direction of Henry J. LaFontaine, organist and choir director. Mrs. Bernard Cowle was the soprano soloist and Wiegand's O Salutaris was given in fine voice by Frederick P. Sullivan. The Tantum Ergo was by Miss Loretta Belletieu, and chorus and the Neal Creator was rendered by a male quartette. The Magnificat, an adaption of The Glory from Mozart's Twelfth Mass was sung with splendid effect by the full choir and The Palms was rendered as a special number appropriate to the day.

HORSES DIE WHEN FLAMES DESTROY BARN

Fire of unknown origin, discovered about 5 o'clock Monday morning, totally destroyed a large barn near Lake Avenue, Niantic, owned by Charles F. Eldredge, and resulted in the death of a team of horses. The damage is estimated at $4,000 of which only a small fraction is covered by insurance.

The blaze was discovered by Frank Beebe, night watchman at the Thames Bleaching and Dyeing plant, who saw flames issuing from the roof of the barn. An alarm was turned in to the Niantic fire department which responded with its entire equipment and a large force of men. It is believed that the fire had been burning inside of the barn for a considerable length of time before the flames broke through the roof, for the interior was a roaring mass of flames when the firemen arrived. A line of hose, 1,200 feet long, was stretched from a hydrant in front of the dye plant to the barn.

Unable to check the fire in the barn, the firemen concentrated their efforts on saving several buildings nearby which were in danger of fire from flying sparks. A brisk wind from the west added to the difficulty of fighting the blaze.

The barn contained a large supply of hay and farming implements which were lost. Efforts to lead the two horses from the barn were futile. Several cows in the basement of the building were led to safety.

The barn was a comparatively new structure, having been erected about two years ago. Older residents of Niantic recall that this is the third barn built on the same spot, and all three have been destroyed by fire.

AUXILIARY RAISES MONEY FOR JEWISH RELIEF FUND

The Rose of New England Ladies auxiliary, No. 40 Independent Order of B'Nai Brith held a social and card party at the Buckingham Memorial hall, Thursday, March 26, for the benefit of the Norwich United Jewish Relief. Quite a sizeable party gathered and enjoyed a very fine and social evening. An interesting event during the evening was the auctioning off of a small candelabra of nominal value which brought $36. Guests present bid a dollar each. The rivalry was quite interesting and finally it became the possession of Daniel Polsky who donated it to the relief with the request that it be auctioned off again at a victory dinner to be held in the near future.

The net total raised for the relief during the evening amounted to $35.50. The ladies of the auxiliary donated home made cake and coffee. Entertainment was furnished by Miss Dorothy Pasnik who gave an impersonation of an amusing comic dance, accompanied by Mrs. A. H. Manes at the piano. Israel Rutchick gave an exhibition of the Charleston accompanied by Miss Ida Fishkin for which he received a handsome prize. While prizes were won by the following: Miss Madeline Thune, Mrs. R. Raphael, Miss Novack, Mrs. A. H. Manes and Mrs. Charles Jacobson. The committee in charge of the evening consisted of Mrs. A. Pasnik, Mrs. H. Hambechel, Mrs. Elkin Smith, Mrs. A. Bruckner, Mrs. A. Manes and Mrs. A. Curland.

Wm. F. HILL IS TO RETURN TO MIAMI

William F. Hill, who has been in Miami, Fla., since early in July, is back in this city for about two months during which he intends to dispose of his property here so that he may return to make his permanent residence in Miami.

Mr. Hill is an enthusiast on the wonderful opportunities offered in business life in the big and growing Florida city, but says that people who go there expecting to buy a lot for a small sum and sell it in a day or two for five or ten times what they paid for it are doomed to disappointment. There are big profits to be made in real estate, but they are made by hanging on, not by the man who buys from a fancy prospectus and a map without ever seeing what "Florida salesmanship" represents runs the risk of experiencing a sad disillusion.

Mr. Hill speaks with the utmost praise of the remarkable effect of the climate, a perpetual June the year around, which has a wonderfully rejuvenating effect upon those who go to the state from more northern climates. He has experienced this benefit personally, he declares, and he looks it.

His son, Andrew, has gone into the wet wash business in Miami in company with John O. Johnson of this city, being pioneers in this line in Miami. They built their own building and have met with remarkable success so far.

MYRKLE-HARDER CO. AT BROADWAY THEATER

After an interval of five years since their last appearance in this city, the Myrkle-Harder Stock Co., opened a week's engagement Monday night at the Broadway theater, presenting a cast that promises to add new and well deserved laurels to the popularity which this company enjoyed in other years.

Broadway shows presented in a Broadway manner is the aim of the company and this was proved to be no idle boast by the vehicle that was chosen for Monday evening and by the manner in which it was presented. The play was the three-act comedy, The Whole Town's Talking, by John Anderson and Anita Loos, which was originally produced at the Bijou theater.

As the Myrkle-Harder Co. carries a carload of scenery for its productions, the play was given an adequate stage setting and the cast was all that could be desired. Principals and their well chosen support carried the action and lines of the play with a certainty, smoothness and understanding that made their work a finished production and promises a succession of fine entertainments for the theater going public as the company continues through the week, matinees and evenings.

The following comprised the cast that won the undoubted favor of the well filled house:

PRODUCTION ON INCREASE IN STORRS EGG LAYING

Production continues to increase in the Storrs contest flock, and during the 21st week a gain of 412 eggs over the production for the previous week was made. The lay for the week was 3631 eggs, or slightly over 55 per cent, which is the best weekly record made to date in the 15th competition. This total represents a gain of 806 eggs over the production for the corresponding week a year ago. A grand total of 84,044 eggs have been laid since the contest got under way last November, which is an average of 60 eggs per bird.

The 21st week saw a new weekly pen record made for the present competition, when the Barred Rock entry of the Rambler's farm from Monsey, N. Y., made a score of 63 out of a possible 70 eggs. This is a production of 90 per cent. Second place for the week was taken by Rhode Island Red entry of R. D. Sargent from East Ryegate, Vt., with a score of 60 eggs. Another pen of Reds, the entry of D. Hart Horton from Farmingdale, L. I., N. Y., was third for the week with a lay of 58 eggs. The Barred Rock pen entered by Ontario Agricultural college from Guelph, Ontario, was fourth for the week with a production of 58 eggs. Thus the honor roll positions this week are taken by the Reds and Rocks, and for the second consecutive week not a White Leghorn entry laid enough eggs to make an honor roll position. Adding the records of the four honor roll pens for the week, the production for the 40 pullets is almost 93 per cent, which is exceptionally good laying, to say the least.

Studying the production by varieties shows that the Barred Rocks made by far the best showing with a lay of almost 85 per cent. Reds came next with a lay of almost 61 per cent, and the "All Other Varieties" class were third with a lay of 54 per cent. The White Leghorns lacked just a fraction of laying the same per cent, and the White Wyandottes finished last with a production of slightly over 50 per cent.

This week saw John Z. LaBelle's high pen of Rhode Island Reds go past the 1000 mark, and now their total is 1047 eggs. They gained ten eggs over Dudley Poultry farm Leghorns from Webster, Mass., second high pen in the contest, and now they have a clear advantage of 115 eggs over their nearest competitor.

The leading pens in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes

The Locusts, West Cornwall, Conn.	777
B. A. Baker, Mazon, Ill.	738

TO CONTINUE DRIVE FOR ANOTHER WEEK

The Norwich United Jewish relief committee has bent every effort to complete the work of the relief by March 31st as originally intended however, there are many prospective contributors whom the committee could not possibly see, owing to the short time of the Passover holiday. It was therefore found advisable to continue the drive for another week in order that every Jewish man in town may avail himself of the privilege of contributing to this worthy cause. As the pledges are payable in three years the workers find no difficulty in obtaining sizable contributions.

Many men and women in town are alive to the seriousness of the economic situation in Europe and therefore feel the responsibility in the present crisis more than in any previous occasion. These donations are of no ordinary caliber but are in the nature of a sacrifice. Several young men and women who in former drives were passed over as being too young to participate in work of this nature have voluntarily come forth with their pledges spreading them over for a period of three years. The committee in charge of the drive is very much pleased with the response to the call for funds in this city and feels confident that the quota will be reached.

CASE AGAINST NORWICH MAN IS NOLLED

The only business before the city court Monday morning consisted of three continued cases and they were quickly disposed of by Judge Arthur F. Libby. The charge against Linus S. Sterritt of Nelson place was nolled. He was held by the local police as a fugitive from justice, for the Reading, Pa., authorities. The charge against Mr. Sterritt was withdrawn by the Reading authorities. Mr. Sterritt got intotrouble when he accidentally overdrew his checking account. He had issued three checks, the first two were honored but there were no funds in the bank to honor the third check. Mr. Sterritt paid the check.

The arson cases against Thomas Mallaris, 32, New London, and John Vallas, 27, this city were continued until April 19. They are being held in connection with the fire at the Olympia Candy Kitchen at Norwich Town. They are out on bonds of $3,000 each.

SEES IN CHRISTIANITY THE HOPE OF CHINA

Rev. Edward Huntington Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen S. Smith of 374 Washington street, who, with his wife, is engaged in mission work at Foochow, China, writes The Bulletin as follows in a letter dated, Feb. 13, 1926:

We enjoy the reading of Norwich news week by week so it is only fair we should send our word back again to the many friends there.

We got back early in December and had a royal welcome home from students and neighbors and our many friends put here. We are now on our 25th year of work since we came out in 1901. China with its lovely mountains, bamboo groves, giant banyans and camphor trees, and its innumerable mountain villages seems as much like home to us as does Norwich with its beautiful homes and mills and churches and schools.

Politically chaos reigns—and no signs of a settled orderly government to give justice to the people. One of my young men, a preacher for the past eight years was murdered last week by bandits. I had just spent two days with him planning school and church work in that whole big district of which he was in charge. No redress or justice is possible. He leaves a wife and two baby girls. Personally I travel everywhere without any personal danger, but this civil war is producing a famine that is terrible to contemplate. It has already greatly reduced the numbers in our schools. When you have nothing to eat it is discouraging to talk about education.

It isn't that China wants to be rid of foreigners. They only ask that their government and people shall be given just treatment by the other powers. Nationalism is rampant and intense patriotism but I find no anti-foreign bitterness. All in all the church is welcomed. The need was never more apparent. Without a new moral rebirth China can never build railroads, or schools or run the government. She can find integrity of character, high moral principles necessary for carrying on a republic only in the disciples of Jesus Christ. I'm glad the people of America are coming more and more to understand and appreciate the people of the Orient. We have nothing to fear from them if we first win them as friends. They generally love and admire America. They are disappointed when we do not live up to America's highest idealism.

They stand ready to co-operate with us. They ask that we co-operate with them. If as Christian brothers we help them in these plastic years to mould the new civilization of Asia into Christian moulds; if the teachings of Christ rule among them and among us then the future of humanity is secure.

That is what we are seeking to accomplish by our churches and schools and Y. M. C. A's.

To date they have welcomed all these institutions with surprising eagerness. There is every promise that we face a era of ever greater service, for the task is vast beyond all description. China is coming to take an honored place among the Christian nations in establishing world brotherhood.

Salesgirls Dread Bargain Days

Louise was tired. From morning until night she had been on her feet in the busy department store. No matter how she felt she must serve her customers with a smile. Her head throbbed and her feet ached. Week after week, she felt her strength ebbing until she was in a run-down condition, not fit to work.

"My mother suggested that I try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," she writes. "I took only three bottles and it brought me about all right." Through the Vegetable Compound, she found better health to do her work and she told the other girls about it.

That was several years ago. Louise is now Mrs. L. J. Van Dyke of 1246 Spring St., Morrell Park, Baltimore, Md. She is the mother of three healthy, active children. She says that she found the tonic effect of the Vegetable Compound helpful to her during this entire period.

Every working girl knows that to do her work properly and easily she must have good health. She can not afford to lose time from her work.

Girls who suffer from a run-down condition should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

GRIP, HOUSECLEANING AND POLITICS TAKE UP A GOOD PART OF SUSIE'S TIME

All things considered Susie is having her hands full at the present time or she is deep in the irksome task of housecleaning. Her letter follows:

Dear Sports Ed:

This ain't goin' to be no letter 'cause ain't got no time only to write a note. Between havin' the grip, politics and the great and glorious indoor sport of spring housecleanin' I ain't had nothin' else but trouble. First of last week I was knocked for a row of empty tomato cans by the so-called social evil—the grip and it left me with no pep whatsoever. Then ma give me a nother set-back by announcing that it was time for cleanin' house which ain't no thing of joy. Then there's them letters from folks wants voting for mayor to read and a lotta fool questions to answer so you don't need no speakers for 'cause my life during the past week ain't been no bed o' roses.

Now as for the vote for mayor I guess lotta votes and the standing today is as per follows:

	Votes
Yip Lee	[illegible]
Tony	[illegible]
Abie	[illegible]
Susie	[illegible]
The Scribe	[illegible]
The General	[illegible]

Looks like that China boy was pretty much poplar 'cause the votes is sure flockin' in for that baby. As for the last candidate I ain't goin' to tell who it is for he's kinda a dark horse and his name wasn't mentioned 'til the last minute. The feller what nominates this boy says he's a friend what's up and comin' and I s'pose he's little to help keep Norwich lookin' neat and clean. Outsider that me don't say nothin' which is plenty.

Say Ed, you ain't had the grip if you has you. Well if you ain't you is about 4 miles back of the regular parade. Why the best fambus in Norwich is havin' it, myself included. 'Course it ain't no fun havin' it but neither is wearin' them shoes any picnic but you gotta do it to be in the swim. I was took last week with a cold and a lotta pains. Ma said it was spring fever and pa says its automobiles, smearing something you get from ridin' in automobiles after dark. Ma says take some rhubarb and sody and Pa says lay offen the joy-ridin' both of which I treats with disdane. I phones the doc and he says he'll drop and give me some awful tasting stuff and sends me to bed. Well for a coupla days I ain't got no interest in nothin' but gettin' well so dyestar, and I does the first mentioned thing.

I ain't been outa bed much a coupla hours before Ma declares that she's gonna start to clean house. My Gawd I most hadda recolapse that news was so discomfitting. I pleads but ma is sold like the foundation of a bank so we is gettin' our meals often the mantel if we're lucky and if we ain't we is holdin' our vittles in one hand and feedin' our face with the other. Pa has his annual groan on and his hands is all blisters from beatin' carpets. The old man comes home the other night from a pre-war party with his head in the clouds and his dogs roamin' around in their own sweet way. I ain't got to sleep much. I hears a crash and bang down stairs and I has a hunch that pa has tangled up in some of the furnishings. I ain't far from wrong 'cause pa yells "Who-ever left the coal hod on them stairs." There ain't no answer but I hears ma kinda choke like she's tryin' to smother something. There's some more crashin' and bangin' down stairs so I gets up and goes down thinkin' maybe pa's be hurt.

Well when I turns on the light there's pa huggin' the floor with his head stuck threw the rounds of the rockin' chair, the ironin' board is restin' peacefully on his back, one foot is lovingly entwined in the cold rad and a coupla lace curtains is draped gracefully about his neck. Then I tries not to laugh but I finds mirth can't be refined. Pa don't see nothin' funny bein' so close to the floor and bein' only able to gaze into the carpet.

For a time pa don't say nothin' and I think maybe he's hurted but I guess he don't for he says "Don't stand there like a dummox but unscrew some of those loosened goods often my carcass. I ain't no movin' van." Finally I gets pa and them furniture separated and then I gets a glimpse at his face. Oh, boy, but pa sure did come off second best in that bout. His nose is bleedin, and one eye is black and blue with a coupla touches of green, one of his false teeth is missin and generally he looks like the well known wreck of the Hesperus.

If sent only his face what is wrecked by his good nature is completely lost. When he gets up he declares a real red hot lecture on the sins of housecleanin'. His talk is so warm that the gas in the furniture starts to melt and I hasta shove up my cuts and cover my face to keep from getting scorched. After the fire and brimstone becomes less pa orders me and Ma to stay in the house no matter what and he goes off back to the work. We is two days now since pa and the coal hod had their bout and we ain't seen nothin' of our meal ticket but he calls up now and then to ask how things comin' along. I guess it'll be a coupla more days before pa can enter with safety.

Well Ed I outta quit for 'cause ma wants me to wash some windows so I can read her for the present.

Yours as ever,

SUSIE.

P. S.—The following letter was written by one sports writer and he explains itself:

Dear Sporty Editor:

Lots o' people is abusin' us of ritin Susie's her busy time, and it pleases me ta think that folks think I'm smart enuf ta rite anything as good as nited Suzie, so with good make a public inclination that we am not ritin sume as we don't think its fare to the yung man what is ritin them witicisms.

MORE INSIDE BASEBALL EXPECTED THIS SEASON

NEW YORK, March 29.—(AP)—Critics at the major league training camps forecast one radical change in the game this year as a result of defensive measures to curb the long hops of "Jack Rabbitt" ball.

From their observations of comparative pitching performances, they have found no indications that the resin bag has increased the effectiveness of National league pitchers over hurlers in the American league, which voted against the return of the "foreign substance."

They do assert, however, that the epidemic of long hitting unquestionably has been checked by deadening of the ball. Emphasis on old methods of attack—hitting behind the runner use of the sacrifice, and base-stealing—is predicted on the basis of offensive measures already used in training camp contest.

"We have been using scientific methods more than in the last five or six years," says John McGraw, veteran pilot of the New York Giants. "The new baseball is acting deader than the league baseball of the last seven years. This means that we will introduce a lot of the old stuff—more place hitting and bunting and hitting through the gaps.

"The ball we have been using does not shoot through the infield any more. The old Jack Rabbit is gone, now we will see some real baseball."

The general improvement in training camp pitching as voted particularly to absence of the "Jack Rabbit." Home run hitting also has been lighter than heretofore, and critics consider that the pitchers will figure as a greater factor in the pennant races than at any previous period since 1921.

TUNNEY SIGNS BLANKET CONTRACT WITH RICKARD

NEW WYORK, March 29.—(AP)—Promoter Tex Rickard today announced he had signed Gene Tunney to a blanket contract under which the former American light-heavyweight champion agrees to fight any opponent Rickard may select for him during the 1926 outdoor season.

Although Rickard made no explanatory comment, observers accepted his action today as the first official move in his announced intention of bringing Tunney and Jack Dempsey together this summer in a heavyweight championship battle. Yankee Stadium in New York city is expected to be the scene of the proposed match as a result of the failure of the New Jersey state legislature to pass a bill increasing the top price of admission for boxing contests to $50.

The New York promoter now is expected to make an immediate attempt to close with Dempsey. If he fails to complete this match, critics here look for a bout between Tunney and Harry Wills, Dempsey's negro challenger, who has been accepted by the New York state athletic commission as outstanding contender for the heavyweight crown.

Rickard said that he would enter into no contract with Dempsey until after August 3, when the champion's contract with his manager, Jack Kearns, expires.

MISS WILLS PLEASES TENNIS DEVOTES IN ITALY

ROME, March 29.—(AP)—Miss Helen Wills made a favorable impression on her first appearance on Italian courts today.

She lost a one-set exhibition match to a strong male player, Clemente Serventi, last year's Roman champion, at 7-5, but was avenged in a mixed doubles exhibition set when, paired with Giordio De Stefano, she defeated Serventi and the Countess Giannuzzi, 6-4.

The matches were played at the exclusive Roman tennis club before a gallery consisting mostly of nobles and fashionables, and including a score of American divinity students in their robes and colorful sashes.

Helen's demure demeanor and her great graceful appearance on the court seemed to win the hearts of the Princesses, Duchesses, and countesses and women of the diplomatic circle All costumed in the latest Paris modes.

ROOKIE PITCHER HOLDS WHITE SOX TO SHUT OUT

CHICAGO, March 29. — (AP) — A rookie pitcher who worked through a seven inning game in a chilly drizzle at Dallas, Texas, shut out the Chicago White Sox today, 5 to 0. The opposing moundsmen were two veteran soxmen who were hit without quarter by the St. Louis Cardinals.

Hallahan, southpaw youngster, let the Sox down with two scattered hits while the Hornsby batting order was converting eight hits of Leverette and Blanenship into two runs. The recruit stumbled into one or two holes, but was saved by fast support and Catcher O'Farrell, recently obtained from the Chicago Cubs, led the hitting which gave the Cards their 3rd straight victory.

Hallahan's luck didn't extend to the major league rookies in general. Catcher McCrea and Infielder Westling were released by the Cleveland Indians, practicing in their Orlando Florida camp and the release of Pitcher Watt to his old San Antonio club was announced at the Detroit quarters in Georgia where Cobb is putting the team through the last week of spring training.

DELANEY ANXIOUS TO MEET JACK DEMPSEY

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., March 29.—(AP)—The Springfield Union tomorrow will say that Jack Delaney, of Bridgeport, now spending a few days with his parents in Holyoke, rear here, is eager to box Jack Dempsey on any terms for the world heavyweight title.

"I really believe I would have an excellent chance against Dempsey," he is quoted as saying. "I know I can outbox the champion and I am confident I can hit as hard as he. He would have a weight advantage of about 20 pounds on me, but I expect to build up to about 185 pounds within a year and at that weight we could box on practically even terms."

Delaney declares he is positive he can beat Paul Berlenbach and that so far as a Dempsey match is concerned, "everything is up to Pete Reilly, by manager."

CONFLICT ARISES OVER COLLEGE MEN COMPETING FOR A. A. U. CLUBS

NEW YORK, March 29—(AP)—Conflict between athletic directors of the western conference "big ten" and the National Amateur Athletic union developed today over the practice of college undergraduate stars appearing under club colors in A. A. U. competition.

Protest against such practice, coupled with a request that the A. A. U. take measures to prevent it recently was lodged by Z. G. Clevenger of Indiana university, spokesman for the athletic directors of the "big ten," but in a reply made public today, Murray Hulbert of New York, president of the A. A. U., characterized the proposal as "unreasonable" and denied that the situation warranted any corrective measures by his organization.

While his letter did not say so, it was intimated that Mr. Hulbert resented the implication that "big ten" directors coupled the A. A. U. with professional football in decrying the appeal to college athletes from outside interests.

Mr. Hulbert's letter, in part, follows:

"Notwithstanding the fact that your concern for the welfare of your athletes is less keen than your craving for publicity, I shall endeavor to set forth the position of the Amateur Athletic union and to demonstrate the unreasonableness of your proposal.

"In the first place, you admit your inability to control the athletic students under your own jurisdiction.

"In the second place, you apparently take no account of the fact that there are many colleges throughout the country that do not share your views. To adopt your suggestion would work a hardship on a greater number of institutions than are now members of the big ten conference.

"The dates of the annual national junior and senior indoor championships of the Amateur Athletic union have always been considerable fixed having due regard to the termination of the college year, in the early summer, or the inauguration of a new year in the fall.

"We have always felt that it would be helpful to the college athlete to offer him an opportunity to compete at our championships. Every competition which is open to him during the summer aids him to keep fit. It also affords an opportunity to appraise his worth in competition with other athletes whom he might not meet and, therefore, is a basis for the selection and make up of the American Olympic team.

"Practically all of the eastern colleges voluntarily participate in the indoor competitions and raise no objection to their athletes competing during vacation for the clubs with which they are affiliated. The case of Mr. Schwarze ("Herb" Schwarze, Wisconsin shot put star) cited by you is not a happy selection to illustrate the force of your contention.

"I need hardly remind you that Schwarze competed for the Illinois Athletic club before he ever entered the University of Wisconsin. In fact, a very large number of athletes are developed in games conducted under sanction of the Amateur Athletic union, before they ever enter college and of course, they continue to compete under Amateur Athletic union sanction long after their graduation.

"After Schwarze had fallen back in his studies, he was not persuaded to accompany the Illinois Athletic club team to Europe but was permitted to do so only after he had procured a release from Commissioner John L. Griffith.

"Furthermore, while during the vacation period conference athletes are prohibited under your rule from competing under Amateur Athletic union sanction for the athletic organizations of which they are members, they can and do compete unattached, and we are reluctant because the Amateur Athletic union is so thoroughly democratized in its organization and management to deprive the athletes of what is practically their constitutional right to participate in whatever games are held under our sanction."

STOCKS AT LOW LEVELS.

NEW YORK, March 29.—(By The A. P.)—All classes of stocks were thrown overboard in today's market with the result that over 200 issues crashed to new low levels for the year. Net losses in the active shares ran from 1 to 10 points, with even sharper breaks in some of the ordinarily inactive issues. Both the rail and industrial averages showed new declines of over 3 1-2 points. Trading was in heavy volume, the day's sales aggregating 2,701,600 shares.

The reaction was not associated with anything in the day's news, although the calling of about $25,000,000 additional in bank loans, which sent the call money rate from 4 3-4 to 5 1-2 per cent., undoubtedly stimulated the selling movement. The only explanation which found general acceptance was that large blocks of stocks, representing the holdings of distressed pools, and others apparently were overhanging the market, and that until these were liquidated little improvement could be hoped for.

Rails and oils, which previously had offered stubborn group resistance to selling pressure, were finally engulfed by today's selling movement, indicating a temporary withdrawal of banking support for those issues Prices were reactionary from the start but it was not until U. S. Steel common, General Motors and Hudson had broken through their previous resistance points that the weakness became general. Short covering operations brought about feeble rallies in some issues in the last hour, but closing prices generally were around the lowest of the day.

U. S. Steel common, which sold as high as 138 1-3 earlier in the year, dropped from 121 1-4 to 118 1-4 and then rallied to 119, a net loss of 2 1-3 on the day. General Motors broke over five points to 113 1-4, and Hudson eased 5 1-4 points lower at 78 1-4.

Net losses of five points or more also were recorded by such widely diversified industrial issues as Allied Chemical, Brown Shoe, DuPont, Fleischmann, Phenix Insurance, General Electric, Houston Oil, Laclede Gas, Loose-Wiles Biscuit, Midland Steel Products preferred, Pathe Exchange, Sears-Roebuck and Woolworth.

In the rail group, the sharpest break took place in such issues as Atlantic Coast Line, Delaware and Hudson, Louisville and Nashville, "Nickel Plate," Norfolk and Western and Pittsburgh and West Virginia, off 4 to 6 1-2 points and Jersey Central, which broke 20 points to 250.

Commodity markets were irregular. Active wheat futures dropped 1 1-2 to 2 cents a bushel, with some of the selling undoubtedly inspired by the break in stocks. Cotton futures rallied on reports of unfavorable weather, closing 14 to 20 points net higher. Raw sugar advanced 1-32 of a cent a pound but the futures market was easier. Trading in coffee was dull, with closing quotations five to ten points higher.

Call money renewed at 4 3-4 per cent., advanced to 5 and thence to 5 1-2 on heavy withdrawal of funds by interior banks in anticipation of month-end requirements. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Establishment of record low figures for all time by French and Belgian francs at 3.40 1-2 and 3.52 1-2 cents, respectively featured the irregularly lower foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held firm around 4.85 7-8 but most of the continental rates recorded nominal recessions.

ARRESTED HERE, CHARGED WITH SALE OF TOOLS STOLEN FROM MILL

Held by the local police as a suspicious character, Emil Anderson, who claims his home is in Waterloo, N. Y., was taken to Westerly, R. I., Monday night by authorities from that place, to answer to a charge of theft of a quantity of tools taken from the Pawcatuck Woolen mills. Anderson came to town Monday morning and tried to dispose of the tools and a numbering machine to a local second-hand dealer. The dealer became suspicious of the man and notified the police department.

As a result Anderson was taken into custody and the tools, valued at $35 or $40, were taken to the police station. Chief George Linton immediately started an investigation and during the course of this called Chief Thomas Brown of the Westerly police department, asking him if the theft of any tools had been reported to him. No report of the theft had been received by Chief Brown at that time. However, a short while later an official of the woolen mill which is situated along the Connecticut-Rhode Island state line, notified Sheriff Mitchell that a quantity of tools, the property of Charles W. Austin, had been stolen from the mill some time over the week end. Sheriff Mitchell got in touch with Chief Brown and the result was that early Monday evening Sheriff Mitchell, Chief Brown, Town Solicitor Ferguson of Westerly and Mr. Austin, owner of the tools, came to Norwich and Mr. Austin identified his property at police headquarters.

Anderson, when questioned by Chief Linton, denied that he stole the tools. He said he was in New York city Saturday and spent Saturday night in that city. He then, according to his story, rode on a passenger train to New London, arriving there Sunday evening. He couldn't remember what the fare from New York to New London was.

He said he met a man in the vicinity of the railroad station in New London and that he bought the tools from him, paying the man $7.80. He stated that he didn't know the man. Anderson stuck to his story at police headquarters. He was turned over to Chief Brown who took him back to Westerly early Monday evening.

PREACHES ON DOUBLE MESSAGE OF PALM SUNDAY

The shadow of the cross at noontide, the double message of Palm Sunday, was the topic of the sermon by Rev. A. N. Foster at the morning service Sunday at the Church of the Good Shepherd, when he spoke from the text, John 12:24: Except a seed of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit.

In part the preacher said:

One of the great laws of life shapes itself through our threefold experience. First there is bright and alluring promise; later, this is clouded and shadowed by disappointment; dawning into disaster and this in turn is followed by recuperation; a raising as from a new base and opening into new and enhanced life. The cross of sorrow and of tragedy appears to some—if not to all—in the days of prosperity and success. Only through later disciplinary tests do we come to know the meaning and the scope of the higher life—which comes through sacrifice.

The recurrence of Palm Sunday anniversary portrays to us a mental picture of diverse elements and of persons in charm. The setting of Jerusalem among the rugged hills is very picturesque and the gathering of the pilgrims, from far and near, as to a religious shrine, lends a touch of romance to the panoramic view. Jesus journeys quietly to the south from Galilee to participate in the great national festival of the Passover. It is easy for us to anticipate his cleanshaven, simple and his earnest discussions with different groups of listeners through the closing days also, the increasing and the betrayal cause the growing scores of enemies. All these, the success and the triumph, followed by the great events as set in the text, passing interest to us.

Combined within the leadership of Jesus are the constituent factors of his personality, his gift of preaching and the power of healing. Such were commanded a following both numerous and of interests. There are mentioned persons of Mary Magdalene and Nicodemus and the two young sisters and Zacchaeus and the former centurion—to say nothing of many others who had come under the influence of Master's name with blessing. The opposition to Jesus was gentle, skeptical as he did not fulfill the expectations of the priests and rulers. It was not born in Bethlehem of the line of David, as the prophecy of Micah had declared. He had come from Galilee, a land of which no good was ever said, because Jesus was born there. So it was with the power source of his teaching. Jesus said: "Is not this the carpenter, the son whose father and mother we know? Does he not hail from Nazareth and can any good thing come from Nazareth?" He speaks the command of the temple service and declares that men may worship God anywhere? He tries his hearers with our vested interests in the temple. It is therefore our interest to oppose him and his teachings, so the conservative classes of society were naturally and quickly massed against Jesus in the fateful hour of impending tragedy. The correspondence church is witnessed in society, hence between the appeal of the religious or class and the conservative classes who clamor for safety first for themselves.

It is common to impute supernatural power to deeds to explain its origin or peculiarities regarding its birth and resurrection; his ascent; the facts of his entering the temple His detection of Judas, His institution of the Eucharist and crucifixion, etc. Yet such rejection of supernaturalism is entirely needless in explaining the facts and it makes the story of the events of holy week appear in the light of the theatrical and spectacular rather than the realities of reverent, holy faith and true and steadfast duty. Indeed the imputation is worse than needless for it detracts attention from suffering that is real and courage that is genuine experienced by one who is not a demigod, but one of our own nature who has a keen and loyal love of life and yet responds in heroism to the call of the ideal. It is symbolized by the story of the seed which is planted and hidden in darkness and yet which comes to fruition in the later harvest. This does not contravene great nature's laws but rather expresses exact obedience to those laws.

The vision of the seer and the word of the mystic make very real the scene of the long ago. "And throned on her hills sits Jerusalm yet, but with dust on her forehead and chains on her feet; and what if my feet may not tread where he stood, nor my eyes see the cross which he bowed him to bear nor my knees press Gethsemane's garden of prayer, the voice of thy love is the same-even now as at Bethany's tomb-or on Olivet's brow!"

HOSPITAL SHOWS NEEDS IN 32ND ANNUAL REPORT

Enlarged accommodations for the maternity department and increased facilities for looking after the out-patients of the hospital are two of the needs for the Backus hospital which are mentioned in the 32nd annual report which has just been published.

The executive committee of the hospital includes the following: President, H. A. Tirrell; vice president, Oliver L. Johnson, treasurer, Frank L. Woodard, secretary, Shepard B. Palmer; and Wallace S. Allis.

Executive Committee's Report

Its report is given as follows by President Tirrell:

The executive committee and your board have met with a sad loss in the death of Frederick W. Lester, for four years our secretary. This institution will greatly miss his aid, at all times so generous and helpful. We deeply lament the passing of a co-worker who was near and dear to each of us.

The committee makes grateful acknowledgment of the following gifts:

Ladies' auxiliary, Thanksgiving and Christmas, $735; Oliver L. Johnson, Christmas fund, $25; H. E. Dawley, gift, $100; United Congregational church, for linen, $75; Mrs. H. H. Osgood, for class room, $500.

Numerous other gifts from individuals and organizations are much appreciated.

We have received in legacies:

The Joseph W. Gilbert bequest of $5,000 to be used for general expenses, and the Gertrude Hakes Gale legacy of $7,500 the income of which is to be used for a free bed.

The new nurses' home was completed and occupied for one year last June. This building, so well equipped in every respect, adds much to the contentment and efficiency of the nurses and will greatly increase the efficiency of our organization.

The installation of a new kitchen range with a trained cook and many another necessary step, one staff, the life of a great institution, and the appreciative response of our friends.

The Woman's auxiliary has been of great assistance during the past year in many ways. The large number of surgical dressings and hospital supplies that they have made have been of great assistance to the hospital and represent many hours of faithful work.

The long dreamed of new residence has become a reality and is the greatest improvement and the outstanding event of the year for the training school. To say that this was sadly needed only half expresses it, for during the past five years it has been necessary to rent rooms in private residences in the vicinity of the hospital in order to house the nurses.

The residence is a modern, semi-fire proof building, which, when completely equipped, will be adequate for all our requirements. It is a great credit to the school for it will place the Class A again which standard it was impossible to maintain during the past few years on account of the crowded condition and insufficient accommodation of the original home.

The report concludes with an expression of appreciation to the doctors of the staff, to Dr. Fred L. Varney, the ladies advisory board, and for the fine spirit shown by the entire nursing force.

Women's Auxiliary

The report for the women's auxiliary is made by the secretary, Mrs. Mildred M. Blackmar as follows, the year being April 1, 1926:

The various departments of the auxiliary have experienced the greatest possible response from the public of Norwich and vicinity.

During the year our corresponding secretary acknowledged by personal note or card approximately 400 gifts made directly to the hospital.

The auxiliary membership last year totaled 1225 members and an enrollment of 1400 is assured for this year.

A fund of $585, the total sum covering life memberships, is deposited in saving banks.

From the suburbs have been secured valuable donations for the hospital, as well as numerous one dollar memberships. Sewing clubs are being formed and keen interest indicated in the outlying districts.

The Red Cross has generously afforded the auxiliary unlimited space, and has made possible our keeping of the public informed as to the needs and interests of the hospital.

Flowers have been carried to the wards in abundance, and for holiday decorations and special occasions, such as graduation and the opening of the new residence, the flower committee have taken entire charge of such decorations.

The donations received have been numerous and varied.

The committee has provided 14 loaves of home-made cake for each Monday during the year; and solicitations for canned fruits, vegetables, jams and jellies, etc., amounted last year to 1785 jars, and for eight months of this year to 1500 jars.

Twenty-five quarts of cranberry sauce for Thanksgiving and Christmas, 20 dozen oranges and a quantity of fresh fruits have been given, besides numerous other gifts, among which are mentioned 36 waste paper baskets for use in private rooms and the residence, a 50-yard roll of gray flannelette cloth, a wheel-chair, a pair of crutches and 35 prizes for a benefit whist party.

The linen department have faithfully collected old linens and cottons, empty jars and clothes for needy patients upon discharge.

The visitation committee and the religious service committee have arranged visiting dates for the several churches in the city, and have provided for a musical program in the hospital each Sunday afternoon during the year. The holiday committee have decorated the trays and tables with favors suggestive of festal days, and provided ice cream on every holiday during the year. They have given turkey for Thanksgiving and Christmas, and assisted the hospital management in arranging what has been described as the "best Christmas ever" in the history of the hospital.

Three hundred and forty-two dollars and seventy-five cents was added to the general fund by the finance committee last year. The committee this year is just beginning its work. Since we reported last November, twenty-eight private trays have been outfitted with suitable hospital silverware which includes teapots, cream pitchers, sugar bowls, butter chips, soup bowls, plate covers an ice cream containers, at a cost of $1,070. An electric sewing machine costing $100. For the wards have been purchased four dozen soup spoons, 42 ice cream cups, seven pairs men's slippers, two large oscillating electric fans, and an electric gauze-cutter, at a total cost of $280.

Several subscriptions to magazines and to the local newspapers have been given the literature committee, who have canvassed the city weekly, collecting new and interesting reading matter, delivering it to the hospital. The nurses' recreation committee gratefully acknowledge the assistance given them by the public, making possible various entertainments for the nurses during the past year. The coming winter, the committee will assist in arranging three "at home" evenings, when the nurses will entertain their families and friends in their new residence. It is the application of the production committee to provide gauze and dressing materials for the work department. At present four or more members go to the hospital one afternoon a week and assist in making these dressings from the hospital supply.

The budget consists of the following amounts:

President $5, recording secretary $5, corresponding secretary $25, membership committee $15, finance committee $5, hospital visitation committee $30, publicity committee $15, flower committee $50, nurses' recreation committee $150, production committee $150, literature committee $15, holiday committee $150, donation committee $15, making a total of $625 for expenditures in the several departments and branches of the auxiliary work.

A spirit of kindness and fraternity has been intensified in our members and we have new impetus to the establishment of support and loyalty to our hospital.

Statistics

In the medical statistics pneumonia cases, 32, numbered the most, with influenza, 20, second and cerebral hemorrhage, 14, third.

Of surgical cases appendicitis led with 173. Of infectious diseases there were 18 cases of scarlet fever and 18 of diphtheria. There were 167 confinements and 253 tonsil and adenoid cases. The laboratory report of A. P. Carley, bacteriologist, showed 1388 total examinations.

X-Ray Department

Dr. Houghton makes the report for the X-ray department as follows: We are very limited as to space in our X-ray department. A new system of ventilation should be installed. We are unfortunate in having steam pipes both in our X-ray room and developing room, making the air very oppressive. Patients many times complain about the heat. We also find it is detrimental to getting good development of the films and plates. The department is very much in need of stereoscopic plate shifter and viewing device, but the limited space prevents using one. We are also in need of additional cassettes and screens. These requisites are important for the more advanced X-ray work.

There have been 1083 exposures made in this department during the past year and with the ever increasing demands of the work, hence the above recommendations.

GAVE HELPFUL MESSAGE TO PRISONERS AT JAIL

A delegation from the local Y. M. C. A. conduted a religious service at the jail at 9:15 Sunday morning. Hugh Kinder sang three solos very impressively and C. Edward Smith read the scripture and offered the prayer. Edmund A. Prentice gave a very helpful message to the men and said in part: I wonder why you men have been satisfied to do the wrong things in life. Why you could have done the right things and if you had done the right things you would not be in this jail this morning. You would be enjoying better health, better positions in life. You would have built character with your lives and they would have given you reputation. It would have brought happiness to yourselves, honor to your fathers and mothers and joy to God. I wonder whether it was because you wanted to have your own way in life rather than for God to have His way, or was it because you found it easier to do wrong than to do right. If you found it easier to do wrong than to do right, then you did not use the power that was there to be used and I do not care how low down you go inside or how strong the temptation to do wrong is, there is a power above you, a power around you and a power within you abundantly able to overcome that sin or that temptation. You men had nothing to say about your birth. You will have nothing to say about your death unless you hasten it by some act of yours, but the question and answer as to where you will spend eternity is wholly in your hands. You are deciding that question of your life.

From your neck down is a distance of about five feet, from the neck up the limit of your worth is the sky. The man who gets his thrills from the neck up—he is living; work with your brains, brother, you have got them, train them to work for you with your hands and feet, then your limit is the sky.

Fully half of the men present expressed their wish to lead a new, clean life.

EVERYMAN'S BIBLE CLASS WINS ATTENDANCE CONTEST

The City Bible class for men of the Central Baptist church challenged the Everyman's Bible class of the Trinity Methodist church to an attendance contest which began the first Sunday in March Both classes operated under the military plan and the colonels and captains deserve a great deal of credit for the strenuous effort put forth to win the victory. Much credit is due the men who have made the contest successful by their attendance.

The contest was based on average attendance in each class for the months of November, December and January. The contest ended Sunday, March 28, with the victory for the Everyman's Bible class. It is hoped that the men who made the large attendance possible will continue to attend one or the other of these classes if they have no men's class in their own church.

SMOOT DEFENDS THE DEBT SETTLEMENT WITH ITALY

Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee Asserts That the Settlement Represents "the Very Last Penny the United States Could Get Out of Italy"—Warns Senate That if We Do Not Agree to This Settlement It Will Be a Long Time Before We Get Anything Out of That Country.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(AP)—The debt settlement with Italy represents "the very last penny" the United States could get out of that country, Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, said today in the senate.

"If we do not agree to this settlement," he added, "it will be a long time before we get anything out of Italy."

The pronouncement of the finance committee chairman, who is a member of the American debt commission, was in direct reply to Senator Howell, republican, Nebraska, an opponent of the settlement.

Senator Howell demanded then to know why the American commission had not frankly told the American people that Italy had said "You can take this or you can take nothing."

The debate today lacked the fire and color of yesterday's session, and seemed instead with statistics in total sums of hundreds of millions and billions. Senator Howell opened with a prepared address of two hours, and Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey replied at almost equal length.

Declaring it was time the United States abdicated the role of Santa Claus to Europe, Senator Howell presented figures designed to show that the 12 debt settlements thus far negotiated eventually would cost the American taxpayers 30 billions of dollars.

Senator Edge argued that the settlement should be regarded as a business proposition and that the United States had better get what it could than nothing at all. He added that if the senate rejected this settlement the United States would have the greatest difficulty in reopening the negotiations.

Replying to the attacks on Premier Mussolini, the New Jersey senator said the United States was not concerned in this settlement with the internal affairs of Italy. The Mussolini government, he added, seemed stable, and already had lasted much longer than the administrations of several other European countries.

While the senate was continuing its discussion of the Italian agreement, Secretary Hoover, who is a member of the American debt commission, said that failure of the senate to ratify the settlement would not be objectionable to Italy.

"The Italians probably will be glad if we don't pass it," he said. "They would be relieved of all moral obligations."

NO CLEMENCY WILL BE SHOWN BANDIT WHITTEMORE

NEW YORK, March 30.—(AP)—Diplomatic relations" between the members of the Whittemore gang and the district attorney were broken tonight.

Mrs. Richard Reese Whittemore, the "tiger girl" of the robber gang set by her husband, will not be freed, because her husband did not make a truthful confession of the gang's activities when he volunteered to talk to save his wife, District Attorney Banton said. He will have "no dealings" with Leon and Jacob Kraemer, Mr. Banton added.

Mr. Banton declared tonight Mrs. Whittemore, who already has been indicted, would be brought to trial with other members of the gang. Whittemore's confession, said the district attorney, had been found not truthful when its details were checked.

Whittemore, who is facing murder charges in Buffalo, N. Y., and Baltimore, Md., and is under a roobery indictment in New York, volunteered several days ago to make a full confession, on condition that his young wife be liberated.

The district attorney said the New York courts would relinquish their claims to Whittemore, so he could be tried either in Buffalo or Baltimore.

"Whittemore has not told us the truth as he promised to do," the district attorney said, "and Mrs. Whittemore's case will be tried on its merits."

He added that Whittemore would not be given another chance to change his mind and make another confession on the same terms.

NEW TRIAL FOR ROBBER GUILTY OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER

BOSTON, March 30.—(AP)—Celestino Madeiros, found guilty of first degree murder after an attempted bank robbery in Wrentham, Nov. 1, 1924, won a victory in his fight for a new trial today when the supreme court sustained an exception taken by his counsel. The sole ground upon which the decision was based was the failure of Judge Henry T. Lummus to instruct the jury at the outset of the trial that the defendant was presumed to be innocent.

Chief Justice Rugg, who wrote the opinion, set forth that "it is the established practice to give such instruction, which has the great weight of the authority of Chief Justice Shaw. That practice has been recently confirmed in explicit language in three decisions where the point was expressly adjudicated. It is imbedded in our law. The presumption is not evidence. It does not run with the defendant through the trial and come with him through all its stages." It was said to be the only error disclosed in the record.

FIVE MEN CRUSHED TO DEATH BY TONS OF ROCK

NEW YORK, March 30.—(AP)—In the fear that other workmen might still be imprisoned, rescue crews worked all night removing tons of rock which crushed five men at work today in the excavation at Broadway and 123rd street where the world's tallest building is to be erected.

The five laborers were killed when a cliff-like formation, known as Fort Horn rock, collapsed into the adjoining excavation. Three others were injured. Police reported tonight that two arrests on charges of homicide were imminent.

The excavation is being dug for the erection of the 65 story Christian Missions building which is to cost $16,000,000. It is being built by Oscar E. Kenkle in express his gratitude for the recovery from serious illness of his son, Howard, now a student at Colgate university. The building will house a hospital, a hotel and a bank.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 30—(AP)—Seven negroes were killed and 15 persons injured, two white and 13 negroes, at Edgewater, near here, late today, when a workmen's accommodation train, composed of wooden coaches, collided with a freight train on the Birmingham-Southern railroad.

The white men were said to be members of the train crew. All the workmen were negroes. The accident occurred when the accommodation, carrying nearly three hundred laborers, crashed into a freight which was standing dead on the tracks after rounding a curve. Two passenger coaches were derailed and many feet of track torn up.

Blow torches were resorted to remove the bodies from the debris.

DISORDER IN THE FRENCH CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

PARIS, March 30—(AP)—The chamber of deputies opened its debate on measures for the financial restoration of the country today to the accents of the socialist hymn, the "International," and got little further than that.

The entrance of two communist deputies elected in the second district of Paris on Sunday provoked a demonstration which threatened for a moment to turn to violent conflict. The communists began by cheering their new colleagues and as they warmed up they rose and started singing the "International", to which catcalls and hisses replied from the other side of the house.

Edouard Herriot, president of the chamber, hurriedly left his chair and declared the session suspended. After a short recess he announced that it had been learned that the catcalls and hisses came from the public galleries. He warned the spectators that if any such manifestations were repeated the galleries would be closed.

Finance Minister Peret then was able to present his bills to the house, after there came a flood of amendments, the considerations of which took up the entire afternoon. The chamber adjourned until tomorrow morning without having disposed of a single article.

British Electricity Bill.

LONDON, March 30.—(AP) — The house of commons passed the second reading of the government's electricity bill today after defeating an amendment offered by William Graham, laborite, by a vote of 325 to 127. The size of the government's total showed that the revolt in the conservative ranks against the bill on the ground of its alleged unjustifiable interference with private and municipal enterprise has not affected the voting.

SHEFFIELD'S GOOD OFFICES IN MEXICO

WASHINGTON, March 30—(AP)—The efforts of Ambassador Sheffield to aid American citizens during the recent closing of convents and religious schools in Mexico by the Calles government were described to the house foreign affairs committee today by Mother Semple, head of a visitation school, near Mexico City, which was ordered closed last February.

Mother Semple was ordered expelled from Mexico, but this order was revoked to permit her to keep the institution open under religious restrictions, which she said could not be met. These restrictions, she explained, involve the banishment of all religious services and teachings.

Mother Semple's testimony was given at the outset of a hearing on the Bowman resolution seeking withdrawal of American officials in Mexico.

While American officials in Mexico City accorded her and her associates "every courtesy," Mother Semple said she soon realized that "their hands were tied."

When she first appealed to Ambassador Sheffield, she related he told her he was powerless to aid because the Mexican government viewed the whole question as purely a domestic one in which he was not privileged to interfere. When she left Mexico on March 6 she said, Ambassador Sheffield told her she would feel free to relate her experiences and, she added, she could tell many things that Mr. Sheffield is not free to tell.

Charles W. Darr, attorney for Archbishop Curley, of Baltimore, and representing him, said 20,000,000 Catholic laymen in the United States, urged withdrawal of recognition. He said Mexico is fast drifting toward bolshevism as it exists in Russia.

The committee was in receipt of communications from Secretary Kellogg giving a summary of Mexican laws and a list of persons against whom the department had been informed expulsion orders had been directed, and later revoked.

REVISION OF POSTAL RATES RECOMMENDED

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(AP)—The joint congressional postal committee today heard recommendations by Postmaster General New for revision of certain postal rates and then established a precedent that might have a bearing on the practice of flooding members of congress with letters intended to influence them.

The committee voted unanimously to bar Richard H. Lee, of New York, attorney for the National Council of Business Mail Users, from ever appearing before it again. A letter written by Lee, read by Chairman Moses, republican, New Hampshire, and said to disclose a propaganda plan to influence congress to reduce postal rates, prompted the action. The letter accused Chairman Moses with unfairness and dilatory tactics and called for a bombardment of members of congress by mail in advocacy of lower postal rates. The disbarment was in the nature of punishment for contempt, it was explained.

Restoration of the one cent rate for private mailing post cards and establishment of a rate of two cents for one cent for newspapers and periodicals mailed second class by others than publishers were asked by Mr. New. He thought the rates on third and fourth class mail should not be changed, but asked that the department be permitted to collect additional charges on matter mailed with insufficient postage.

TILSON PREDICTS APPROVAL OF $85,000,000 PLANE BUILDING

WASHINGTON, March 30.—(AP)—After another conference today with President Coolidge on curtailment of appropriations, Representative Tilson, the Republican leader, predicted early approval by congress of the $85,000,000 building program for the naval air service.

At the same time, the house rules committee voted to give privileged status to the naval bill which provides for two dirigibles each three times the size of the wrecked Shenandoah and one thousand navy airplanes at the end of the five-year period.

The white house attitude toward the five year building program for the army air service on the Kingham-Parker bill designed to build up commercial aviation was not revealed.

Mr. Tilson went over with the executive a wide range fo proposals which would take money out of the treasury, discussing with him particularly those relating to aviation.

At the white house, it was learned later that while the president hopes that congress will do its utmost, in view of the recent tax reduction, to ward off a treasury deficit, he favors an increase in the pay of federal judges.

Jail Breaker Sh[illegible] Man in [illegible]erbury

In Return Fire of Detectives a Lineman Was Hit Above the Knee.

WATERBURY, March 30.—(AP)—Dennis McCarthy, who escaped recently from the county jail in New Haven, was captured in the railroad yards here today after a gun battle. He was lodged in the station house.

Patsey Di Carlo, of Naugatuck, lineman in the employ of the Connecticut Light and Power company, was tonight that detectives who had been sent to the railroad yards in search of McCarthy opened fire, declaring that they began firing as soon as they had sighted the prisoner.

Detectives and one of the three linemen who were at the scene, however, insisted that McCarthy fired first. One of the linemen, Amede Roberge was hit in the leg above the knee by one of the bullets. McCarthy broke away but was captured in the woods soon afterwards.

Officer John Hussey of the New Haven police, went around a rock behind which McCarthy was ambushed. In spite of a leg wound which McCarthy inflicted as the officer advanced, Hussey hurled himself upon the fugitive and held him until other officers arrived.

McCarthy is being held on charges of assault with intent to murder and with being an escaped prisoner.

UNEMPLOYED SCRIMMAGE WITH MOUNTED POLICE

LONDON, March 30.—(AP)—From bustops in Oxford street this evening, homegoing office workers watched a lively scrimmage between a crowd of unemployed and mounted police near Hdye Park. The police charged and scattered the demonstrators who were attempting to form a procession for a "go-slow" march through the business part of London at an hour when the sidewalks were thronged and the streets were jammed with motor traffic.

Bandsmen dropped their instruments; red flags and banners denouncing the government were trampled underfoot! Women screamed and men sought refuge as the mounted police bore rown on the agitators. In the melee there were many battered bowlers, lost walking sticks, much torn clothing and some bruises among the crowds of curious, who greatly outnumbered the demonstrators.

About five hundred had followed the leaders into the people's forum near the Marble Arch earlier in the afternoon and listened to speeches against the government, demand the release of communist prisoners from jail. It was after this meeting that the unemployed attempted to re-form the procession, contrary to police orders.

Chapman Alibi Witness Ex-Convict

State's Attorney Alcorn Declares That He Has Documentary Evidence.

HARTFORD, March 30.—(AP)—Hugh M. Alcorn, state's attorney for Hartford county today made public documentary evidence which he said would prove that Charles William Gregory, so-called missing alibi witness for Gerald Chapman, convicted murderer, is an ex-convict and a former member of Chapman's own gang.

Gregory is the alleged witness who telegraphed Mr. Crochi from a small town in upstate New York that he would appear as an alibi witness. Last summer Gregory went from New York to Hartford with Nathan O. Freedmen, of the defense counsel, and identified Chapman at the state prison as a man with whom he rode on a train from Springfield, Mass., to New York on October 11, 1924 between 4.10 p. m. and 8.15 p. m. The patrolman was killed early the next morning, too soon for Chapman to have returned to New Britain, according to the attorneys.

Mr. Alcorn said tonight that he now had evidence to show that instead of being on the Springfield-New York train on that date, Gregory was in fact employed on a trans-Atlantic liner as an assistant storekeeper. This information is contained in a statement from Dr. William T. Hanson of the Bridgewater hospital at Bridgewater, Mass.

Mr. Alcorn said he made public this information to support the stand he took yesterday at the habeas corpus hearing before Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas at New Haven. At the hearing he called Ray M. Wiley of the Chapman defense staff, "the Springfield alibi expert" and followed it with the statement that "I know more about you and your footprints than you think I do."

GOVERNMENT GIVES APPROVAL TO THE SALE OF 3.75 PER CENT MEDICINAL BEER

WASHINGTON, March 30—(AP)—While the nation seemed to get a kick today out of the approval given by the government to sale of 3.75 per cent medicinal beer, about the only reaction the announcement stirred up here was a protest from the Anti-Saloon league that the issuance of permits for the manufacture of such strong malt tonics was a "mistake," and would lead to diversions for beverage use.

Nothing was said in congress about the new order. In fact, for a change, prohibition was completely out of the picture, except for the introduction in the house by Mrs. Mary T. Norton, democratic representative from New Jersey, the resolution previously offered in the senate by Senator Edwards of New Jersey, proposing a sweeping investigation of prohibition and its enforcement.

Officials in charge of prohibition enforcement declined, in the absence from the city of Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury, to say much about the new regulation, except to give assurance that the new "health booster" would be available without prescriptions to drug stores even in bone dry states.

The only restrictions on sale of the malt tonic will be the number of cases drug stores may handle. The permits granted the two brewing companies by Assistant Secretary Andrews of the treasury allow an alcoholic content of 3.75 per cent by volume. From five to 25 cases may be furnished drug stores weekly, according to their size, and no prescriptions will be required of consumers who feel the need of more and better health.

The permits for manufacture and sale of the tonic were issued for six months, and provided that the brewers should assist the government in keeping it out of the hands of bootleggers. Wholesalers already have been asked to assist in the enforcement of this provision.

In condemning the medicinal beer order, six officials of the Anti-Saloon league, among them F. Scott McBride, general superintendent, and Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel, joined in a formal statement which said:

"The issuance of permits for the making of malt tonic of 3.75 per cent alcoholic content is a mistake and will lead to multiplied evasions of the law and diversions to beverage use. Tale was the experience of the government before such permits, which were formerly granted, were cancelled. No new evidence has been presented to indicate that this malt tonic will not be used as a subterfuge for evading the law.

"It is not a question as to whether the government technically can issue a permit for the making of malt beverage, but whether it should insist upon its policy of preventing a so-called malt medicinal liquid which is easily diverted to beverage use or which can be added to near beer to make potable beer.

"The best way to enforce the prohibition law is not to loosen its provisions, but to tighten them and carry out the expressed purpose of the act, namely, that it shall be construed and enforced so as to prevent the use of beverage intoxicants."

Although there was a lull in the halls of congress on the prohibition question for a day at least, the eighteenth amendment was attacked again in the supreme court, this time by a minister of the gospel. Dr. A. Stanley Copeland, of Buffalo, who filed a petition asking for a review of his conviction for violating the law. He was sentenced to three months imprisonment for dispensing wine at what he called religious meetings in front of the government building in Buffalo, a year ago. He contends that the prohibition amendment did not make it unlawful to possess and dispense wine.

STOCK SELLING WAVE IS MYSTIFYING WALL STREET

After Three Successive Weeks of Liquidation a Renewal of Selling Yesterday Carried 285 Issues to New Low Levels For the Year and Sent 70 Others to Their Previous Minimum Quotations—No One Appears to Be Able or Willing to Tell the Cause of the Selling—Bankers Generally Believe Business Conditions Are Fundamentally Sound.

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—The stock market, staggering under the hammering of three successive weeks of liquidation which has carried scores of issues 20 to 100 points below their high levels of the year, was dealt another crushing blow today, when a renewed outbreak of selling swept 285 issues to new low levels for the year and sent 70 others to their previous minimum quotations. Trading was in enormous volume, the day's sales aggregating 3,317,700 shares, as compared with 2,785,700 in the record breaking session on March 3, and 2,015,700 on the day before.

At the close of the market tonight, the average of 20 leading industrial issues was nearly 23 points below the year's high established on February 11, while the average of 20 leading railroad issues was down 12 points. It is estimated that the reaction this month has wiped out between $5,000,000,000 and $10,000,000,000 in the quoted value of the securities listed on the exchange. In one month, the market has more than cancelled the gain of the six preceding months, many issues being quoted at their lowest levels in years.

Over a score issues collapsed to new low levels for the year in the first few minutes of trading, as weakened marginal accounts were closed out "at the market." Organized banking support immediately made its appearance, and a few high grade industrial issues, such as U. S. Steel common, General Motors and General Electric, and this started a brisk covering movement in other sections of the list, which sent prices of scores of issues bounded upward 1 to nearly 8 points.

Powerful financial forces showed little disposition, however, to follow up the advance, apparently being content to support a few issues in which they were primarily interested. Shortly after noon, bear traders launched a savage attack on the railroad shares, which previously had been almost immune to selling pressure, using the interstate commerce commission rejecting the application of the Chesapeake and Ohio railroad for authority to float a bond issue to finance new improvements, as an excuse for the selling.

One block of 5,000 shares of Pennsylvania railroad stock appeared at 50, the year's low, and this was followed by heavy selling of the other high grade issues, and after another breaking below their previous resistance points. Atlantic Coast Line plunged 11 1-2 pointse downward. Jersey Central 10. Chesapeake and Ohia 7 3-8 and Lackawanna, Delaware and Hudson, Norfolk and Western, New York Central, Wabash common, Southern Railway and other popular rails were hammered down 3 to nearly 6 points.

Then followed a renewed attack on the motor stocks, with Hudson breaking 7 1-4 points to 69. Finally, the ofis gave way although they had not participated extensively in the "pell" movement which had been under way, with few interruptions, for two years. Apparently, no group was immune, although a few issues, such as Baldwin Locomotive, Famous Players, Foundation company, National Dairy Products, Seaboard Air Line and the Ward Baking issues successfully withstood selling pressure, and closed higher on the day. General Electric showed a net gain of over six points at 292 3-4.

The rank and file of Wall street is plainly mystified as to what is behind the selling movement. All sorts of rumors, some of them questioning the financial stability of various individuals and firms were in circulation, but these always appear after every drastic reaction in prices, and, lacking confirmation, little attention was paid to them in responsible banking quarters.

While speculation for the rise unquestionably had been overdone in the wild orgy of buying last fall and winter, there is a growing impression in Wall street that the decline represents something more than a correction of a weakened speculative position, but no one appears to be able, or willing, to tell what it is. While bankers generally decline to be quoted on the days movements in the market, most of them privately express the opinion that business conditions are fundamentally sound, and that the reaction in stocks is not a forecast of any sustained period of business depression.

It is generally conceded that the break in stocks has had a temporarily depressing psychological effect on business. It undoubtedly has held up millions of dollars of stock financing, delayed the completion of pending mergers and resulted in the postponement of several other business projects. It was reported tonight that several bankers, who had booked reservations for Europe within the next two months, were preparing to cancel them, until stability had returned to the market.

The extent of the decline from the high prices of today's further break is shown in the following table of prices on representative railroad and industrial shares:

ATTEMPTING TO CLIMB MT. WASHINGTON BY DOG TEAM

PINKHAM NOTCH, N. H., March 30.—(AP)—Arthur T. Walden's attempt to climb Mount Washington by dog team seemed assured of success tonight. Before noon the veteran musher from Wonalancet had been sighted through field glasses at the horn, six miles up and only two from his goal at the summit.

At that time, however, the wind was rising rapidly and the keeper at the Glen house who sighted him considered it probable that he would continue to the summit and camp there over night rather than attempt the return trip over the steep wind-swept slopes of the carriage road. Walden's failure to return four hours after night-fall bore out this belief, he said.

No dog team has ever been driven up the mountain and Walden's attempt today was his second in two days. Yesterday, he was forced to turn back when a 70 gale threatened to blow dogs, driver and newspaper followers from the trail. He left the Glen house at 6 o'clock this morning, hoping to complete the height mile climb by afternoon.

CONFERENCE ON TAXES HELD IN BRIDGEPORT

BRIDGEPORT, March 30.—(AP)—Suggested by William H. Padgett, tax commissioner of Connecticut, a conference was held in bankruptcy court today between Tax Collector Howard S. Challenger and Referee John Keough.

There have been instances where claims for taxes owed the city of Bridgeport by bankrupts equal or exceed the total assets of the estate. If the city's claims are paid in full, no money is left for creditors or administrative expenses.

Referee Keough declared a like situation does not exist in any other town or city in Connecticut. Elsewhere, he said, they collect taxes and don't wait for bankruptcy or law suits. He sought to negotiate an agreement or compromise in such cases to prevent all creditors, except the city from suffering entire losses.

Unless some understanding could be reached, the referee said, he would hereafter conduct full investigations concerning city tax claims with particular attention to the matter of assessments made on store properties. He added, however, he did not intend to go into the legality of the taxes.

"So far as I am concerned," said Collector Challenger, "I am going to stick to the law. I have nothing to do with assessments. My duty is to collect. If there are any errors of over assessments, that does not concern me at all."

STORM CAUSED DEATH OF FOUR PERSONS IN TEXAS

KANSAS CITY, March 30.—(AP)—A march storm, its breath chilled by rain and snow, had spread out over unusually large area of the country tonight, brought death to four persons in Texas, injuries to at least 30 other persons and property damage estimated at about a million dollars.

To a large part of the southwest the storm brought the heaviest snowfall of the departing winter, while in some sections it was the heaviest in years. Snow fall continued unabated tonight over a wide area.

From the Rocky mountain region east and south, including virtually all of the central, southern and south western states, the country was lashed by the pent-up fury of the parting March disturbance.

Out of the Rockies, where it had harbored for several days, the Marchlion swept. Over the plains states and down to the foot of the Texas plains it stretched, leaving a blanket of white that varied in depth from a few inches to more than a foot.

GAMBLING CASES TRIED— LEGAL ISSUE RAISED

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 30—Police court disposition of the cases of fourteen young men arrested in connection with a raid on a pool room at 13 Railroad street, March 20, was made at the session of court Tuesday morning, in spite of the fact that all of the men are under ords to appear at the April term of the superior court after having been arrested on the same charges through bench warrants. The bench warrants, issued by State's Attorney Howard C. Bradford of Putnam, were served Thursday of last week. The men, fifteen in number furnished bonds of $300 each. Previous to this action, the cases had been taken up in police court and continued to Tuesday morning and the men were also under bonds for their appearance in the local tribunal. With this complicated state of affairs existing as to whether the lower or higher court would eventually dispose of the cases.

When the cases were called Tuesday, all the accused pleaded guilty and each received a fine with costs. Ernest Bernard, one of the proprietors of the pool room was charged with running a gambling place. He was fined $50 and costs, amounting to $17.15 each. Fred Barnhard, Joseph Bernet, William [illegible] of Scotch, Dwat Dyak, James Brown, Arthur Green, Charles Swiston and Walter Lariviere were charged with frequenting a gambling place. They [illegible] costs, totaling [illegible] assessments amounting [illegible] bench warrants. [illegible] Bretschger, a joint proprietor of the pool room, who was in New York city at the time of the raid, was also placed under arrest. He is now under bonds of $1,000 pending the next superior court term.

The place was raided Saturday evening, March 20, by County Detective William E. Jackson and Captain of Police Thomas F. Grady. After the cases had been continued in lower court Detective Jackson, Deputy Sheriff and Deputy Sheriff Charles N. Avery of Killingly, with Chief of Police Allen McArthur set forth and served the bench warrants. Attorney Arthur T. Kelley, for the defendants, stated that the disposition of the cases in police court nullifies the bench warrants, as those having paid the penalty cannot, according to statute, be brought before the superior court on similar charges. He states his opinion that the young men must answer when called to the superior court, but that they cannot be given another fine.

County Detective Jackson was not in court during the trial of the cases, although efforts had been made by officials to locate him. Communicated with later in the day and asked about the present status of the cases, he replied that what transpired in police court was of no interest to him, as his work was not in engaging in legal stratgery but trying to enforce the laws.

NAYMAKERS' CAPTAIN TO PRESENT ROTARY GONG

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, March 30—Captain Charles B Pomroy, of the Haymakers' team in the attendance contest of members of the Willimantic Rotary club, will have the honor of presenting the club the beautiful new gong which was the goal of the contest. It was announced at the regular meeting of the club Tuesday noon. The meeting marked the closing of the contest which has been well fought, resulting in half a dozen one hundred per cent meetings and leaving the Coal-Hewers, captained by Raymond A. Parker, only two points behind. The gong will be presented next Tuesday.

The program for the day was in charge of Walter Abbe, chairman of the Business Methods committee. Chairman Abbe gave a concise talk on the subject of Capital and Labor, primarily pointing out the advantages of the trade school for mechanical labor and co-operation between employer and employe. This co-operation, he termed as the keynote of success as capital is helpless without good labor and good labor lies idle without capital. Other important factors of this mutuality include fostering home ownership, giving insurance protection and promoting thrift among the employes, said the speaker.

Guests present at the luncheon were Rotarians Ruel Gray of New London and Henry S. Lyons of Norwich, accompanied by John C. Frazier; Rotarian George E. Johnson of Norwich; Attorney E. Frank B. Hughes, introduced by Albert B. Smith; Attorney Arthur T. Kelley, guest of Aime J. Martineau and George F. Taylor, guest of Kenneth N. Hillhouse.

They were shown how it was done by a genuine quartet, composed of Rev. Arthur S. Wheelock, Harry W. Standish, John R. Pickett and Dr. R. Bullock, song leader. John T. Quinlan was at the piano.

The secretary was instructed to draw up a set of resolutions on the death of Rotarian Leo Korper of Hartford, a former resident of this city, and to forward a floral tribute to his home. It was voted that Secretary Loisell send a letter of congratulation to Charles W. Hill, charter member of the club and former secretary who has recently been promoted to assistant superintendent of the finishing department of the local mills of the American Thread company. Both pleaded guilty and added that they had about as much chance of paying a $1,000 fine as the one they had received. They were taken to the county jail at Brooklyn.

A bond of $20 was called in the case of John Skea of Walnut street, charged with intoxication. The case had been continued from Monday when Shea failed to appear.

This story of "Willimantic Fifty Years Ago" as published in 1893 contains the personal recollections of Gen Lloyd E. Baldwin, an early builder and contractor who erected many of the dwellings and business blocks of that day, and he had accurate knowledge of the details of the "village".

There is also much of history and anecdote about early Willimantic to be found in the "Modern History of Windham County" (published in 1920), especially the personal recollections of James Haggerty, Arthur C. Andrew and the late Rev. Dwight A. Jordan.

Both volumes are to be found in the Willimantic Public library, and many copies are owned in homes in this vicinity.

GIRLS OF SCHOOL AGE LEARN VALUABLE LESSON

Find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Medicine

LOUISE LOUTHAN
ROUTE 2, CHARLESTON, ILLINOIS

From the days of the polonaise to the days of the radio, mothers have given this dependable medicine to their daughters. School girls are often careless. They get wet feet. They overstudy or they tire themselves with too many dances and parties. They get run down.

Many an active girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, has found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is helping her to find better health and energy.

"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. ALICE LOUTHAN, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

"My daughter was out of school two terms. I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my life and finally decided that she should try it. Three bottles helped her in various ways for the next couple of years."—Mrs. W. E. GILLETTE, 986 E. 52nd Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have always been sickly, and until I was fourteen my father was very strict about my perfect attendance at grammar school. I have gone to school through hard storms and often taken cold. When I was fourteen I took to my bed and did not get up for eighteen months. Everyone thought I could not live. Just four months ago I began taking your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I could notice a great change almost at once. Now I feel like a new person. I wish all girls would try Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine."—Mrs. C. M. SMITH, Union Village, Vermont.

DANIELSON

STEAM SHOVEL DIGGING WILL SAVE BOROUGH $600

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 30—Through an arrangement that borough officials have made for the use of a small steam shovel, excavations that are to be made incident to the enlargement of the sewer beds on the borough farm will permit the work being done at an estimated saving of some $600, over what the cost would be were the digging done by hand. This saving can be applied to distributing and grading the excavated material over the section of the farm that it is intended to use as an emergency landing field for aeroplanes flying on the Boston-New York route, via Hartford, and over Danielson. Warden Anderson believes that a splendid field can be developed on the farm, and that opinion is supported by many others. The field is regarded as likely to be a valuable asset to Danielson as commercial aviation develops. It will be the only field on the kind in this corner of the state.

MISS MADELINE FOURNIER AWARDED ESSAY PRIZE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 30—Miss Madeline Fournier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henri Fournier of Franklin street is to be awarded first prize for this district for an essay submitted last fall in a nation-wide movement among school children to arouse interest and create a fund for the reconditioning of the constitution, famous Old Ironsides of the early days of the American navy. The little girl is a pupil at St. James' school. The contest plan in this district, which included Killingly, Putnam, Woodstock and other towns, was conducted for the general organization by Putnam lodge of Elks. An announcement giving more details about the awards will be made today by A. Newton Vaughn, of Putnam, representing the Elks.

An item that recently appeared in this column relative to the splendid financial management of the borough affairs under Warden Walter Anderson and his associates of the board of burgesses during the fiscal year closing today has drawn interesting editorial comment especially from a New London paper. This comment suggests that Danielson must have a system other than that in vogue in many Connecticut communities—the practice of increasing real estate valuations to get more tax revenue—that is efficient and effective in paying a community's bills and meanwhile show impressive reduction of outstanding indebtedness. A further suggestion is that there would be profit in studying Danielson's system and practices. The Danielson method is simplicity itself. A budget system, rigidly adhered to as well as kept within reasonable bounds, a tax rate sufficient to discharge the budget apportionments and something over and above that for reduction of debt. It works splendidly. It may be mentioned that a present prospect is for Danielson to make as good a showing the fiscal year that closes tomorrow as it has made the past twelve months, and it is going to do it on a nine mill tax, a mill less than the year closing today.

The following is the interesting annual report of Danielson Public library as compiled by the librarian, Attorney Harry E. Buck, for inclusion in the annual borough reports, soon to be published:

To the directors of the Danielson Free Public Library:

The thirty-fourth annual report of the Danielson Free Public library covering the year 1925 is submitted as follows:

The value of the library to this community is demonstrated by its record of usefulness. Three hundred and eighty-eight books were added to the library, of which 142 were added by purchase, 146 by gift and 100 by binding. There were withdrawn 100 volumes which were worn out, and 0 are missing through loss, leaving a net addition to the library of 288 volumes. There are now in the library 13946 volumes. The number of registered borrowers of books is 7000.

During the year there were circulated 33,019 books. Of these 1272 were adult non-fiction, 13,177 adult fiction, 1778 juvenile non-fiction and 6792 juvenile fiction. The library was opened 303 days during the year, and it was closed during nine holidays. The branch of the library at East Killingly has been maintained under the direction of Mrs. Lydia A. Bartlett. The circulation of books through the schools and the assistant librarians.

Because of the additional wear, loss and depreciation of books, through the extra use imposed upon the library by the East Killingly branch and by the schools, it is clear that the town of Killingly is not paying to the borough of Danielson adequate compensation for the use of books outside of the borough of Danielson. It is for the borough of Danielson to decide whether it desires to carry this burden for the entire town or whether it feels that the town itself should make a larger appropriation.

The interior of the library is decidedly soiled and its redecoration has been postponed because it has been evident for the past few years that, sooner or later, a new heating system would have to be installed. It did not seem wise to redecorate the interior so long as the dilapidated hot air furnace was in use, leaking gas and smoke. That furnace is now in such condition that a new heating plant is demanded, and the matter will be called to the attention of the voters of the borough at the annual meeting.

If a new heating system is installed, the interior of the library should be repaired and redecorated and the exterior of the library, especially the roof, should be carefully looked after, so that there would be no leaking of water to mar and damage the newly decorated interior.

Tuesday morning the funeral of Miss Hannah Grady was held from the undertaking rooms of L. E. Kennedy on Furnace street, with funeral services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. James McCarthy, M. S., was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in Holy Cross cemetery. The bearers were Thomas Moran, Thomas H. Moran, Mark Moran and John Moran.

Members of Killingly Woman's club are to meet at the Congregational church vestry this (Wednesday) afternoon.

Do not be fooled into thinking that old age can be beaten. It behooves us all to prepare for old age, and a good way of preparing is to deposit in the savings department of the Windham County National bank, Danielson, Ct., which offers the very best of security.—adv.

A contralto solo was given Sunday at the Zion church, Columbus avenue, Boston, by Mrs. Ransom Lilley of North Main street. On Saturday evening at Boston these friends in that city held a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Lilley.

The condition of Palmer street, in the Riverview section, is such as to continue to cause complaint from those that travel that way. Heavier traffic than to which it has been subjected in years past and unusual conditions of the present spring have created what amounts to a quagmire.

Hebrews of Danielson and vicinity are observing the feast of the Passover, one of the great festivals of the year and which will continue for eight days from sundown of Monday.

Telephone subscribers in the Danielson division are finding the new rapid toll line service a boon to the transaction of business. This service is being gradually introduced throughout the state and has been in use in the larger centers of Connecticut for some time.

Members of the Service battery are having a little respite from their weekly drills following the annual federal inspection. The battery will not be called together again until April 13, a special occasion when they will be addressed by the chaplain of the 102nd field artillery, of which they are a part—Preside Benjamin T. Marshall of Connecticut college.

Notices for the annual borough meeting will set forth that the voters will be asked to pass upon a proposed appropriation for the installation of an auxiliary fire alarm on the central fire station on Academy street, a part that Chief Engineer A. P. Woodward of the department will stress in his annual report.

Warnings are given by officials that trout fishermen who will make a mass descent upon trout brooks tomorrow, April 1, the opening of the season, must have their licenses with them and the license button now being issued prominently displayed on the left breast of their outer garment.

Warden Anderson, who is retiring during the coming month from his place as head of the borough government, hopes that it may be arranged that Governor Trumbull can find time to come here in early April and talk to a meeting that will have to do largely with the development of an emergency landing field for aeroplanes on the borough farm on lower Dyer street.

Miss Anna Richmond, who is attending a private school at Marlboro, Mass., will come here today (Wednesday) to spend the Easter vacation.

Gilbert Reeves, who has been employed as a salesman in a Danielson men's furnishings store, has taken a position in a clothing store in Providence.

Numbered among bequests in the will of Mrs. Nellie J. Medbury, who died here recently, is $500 to the Old People's home on North Main street.

Miss Hazel Lyman has been visiting in Meriden with relatives the past week.

Miss Mary Greene, teacher in a private school in Boston for a number of years, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Greene, who also have had their son, Deacon Charles B. Greene of New London, as a visitor.

Dana Blakeley, Killingly high school athletic star, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam, where he has undergone a minor surgical operation to relieve an infected hand.

Special Holy Thursday services are planned for St. James' church and there will be other special services on Good Friday and Holy Saturday, bringing the Lenten season to a close.

Cosmer A. Young and members of his party, who have been at New Smyrna, Fla., since last fall, are on their way north and are expected here the coming week end.

"Brooks splendid, roads leading to most of them terrible," was the forecast Tuesday night for trout fishermen whose halcyon period of the year opens tomorrow morning.

PUTNAM

CHECK FRAUD WARNING RECEIVED FROM N. HAMPSHIRE

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 30—The Putnam chamber of commerce has received the following warning notice from the New Hampshire chamber of commerce:

"A man purporting to be George H. Clark called on a local dentist in Concord to have some work done. On completion of the work he tendered a check in the sum of $9.75 drawn on the Rhode Island Hospital and Trust company of Providence. This check was signed in the name of E. J. McCarthy and Mr. Clark endorsed it. The dentist paid the difference between the bill and the amount of the check, $8 and on the next day received a telephone call from Mr. Clark stating that he did not think there were any funds in the bank to cover the amount and would call at his office the next day and make payment.

Examination of the check disclosed that both the signature of Mr. Clark and Mr. McCarthy are in the same handwriting and information received from the Rhode Island Hospital and Trust company indicates that there is no account there under either name."

JOSEPH M'KACHNIE WAS CHARTER MEMBER OF POST

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 30—Joseph McKachnie, 80, one of Putnam's best known Grand Army men, who died Saturday at Howard, R. I., was buried this afternoon from the chapel at the Grove street cemetery. Since the death of his wife five years ago, Mr. McKachnie has made his home in Rhode Island. He was one of the charter members of A. G. Warner post G. A. R. of Putnam.

Automobilists in Massachusetts towns bordering on the Connecticut line are no longer worried over the prospect of being compelled to pay a registration fee in this state for the privilege of driving 200 yards over Connecticut roads while driving Webster to Southbridge. Commissioner Stoeckel of Connecticut has informed Registrar Goodwin of Massachusetts that unless the motorist has a place of residence or business in Connecticut, for a period of more than 15 days, no registration fee will be required. The Massachusetts motorists have been much disturbed over the interpretation of the law of this state and the prospect of a state policeman being stationed at Quinebaug to check up the number of trips each individual Massachusetts car made through the village of Quinebaug and have been discussing the advisability of putting a state road on the Bay state side to avoid coming into Connecticut.

In celebration of the 15th birthday of Harry LeClaire of North Grosvernordale about 35 of his friends were entained at his home. He received many remembrances. Friends from Westerly, New London, Hartford, Putnam and Webster were among the guests. Music was furnished by the Crescent orchestra, of Webster.

Thomas Mikatajemalas, four year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mikatajemalas of George street, Dudley, Mass., was struck and injured by an automobile driven by Jesse Burgess of Walnut street, Putnam, Monday afternoon on Schofield avenue, Webster. According to witnesses, the child ran across the street directly in front of the car. The child was taken to the office of Dr. Joseph O. Genereux where it was found that he had a cut on the right arm and on the forehead. Aside from this there seemed to be no further injuries.

L. Mosher, aged 44, died suddenly of heart trouble at his home near North Grosvernordale on what is known as the Copeland farm. He had gone to the cellar to attend to the furnace and on returning seemed to be almost exhausted and died in a few minutes. He was born in 1881 at St. Martin's, Canada and came to Windham county about two years ago. The following year he married Leolyn Copeland, daughter of A. S. Copeland.

Miss Isabelle T. Byrne, matron of Sloan hospital, in New York city, has been in Putnam to see her sister, Miss Katherine Byrne, who is still a patient at Day Kimball hospital.

Mrs. John Gahan and daughter, Mrs. M. H. Delaney were recent visitors to John Gahan, who is a patient at St. Vincent's hospital, in Worcester.

Miss Gladys Chaffee of Boston has been the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Paterson of School street.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

CRAIG SENT TO CHESHIRE FOR DENNERLEY ASSAULT

(Special to The Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, March 30.—The case of the state against Walter E. Craig of this town, charged with assault and battery of Jack Dennerley of the same town, Thursday night, March 18th, on the Hollow road, and with breach of the peace, was disposed of at a session of borough court this morning. Deputy Judge E. K. Taft sentenced Craig to the Connecticut reformatory at Cheshire.

Craig was arrested last Wednesday afternoon by Officer Walter Hardisty of the state police barracks, who had charge of the investigation of the assault case. When presented in borough court Wednesday afternoon Craig pleaded guilty to charges of assault and battery of Dennerley, and breach of the peace. Deputy Judge E. K. Taft, acting in the absence of Judge Heald, placed Craig under bonds of $500 and deferred sentence until this morning. At the request of Judge Heald, who presided at the session of court this morning, Deputy Judge Taft imposed the sentence.

Stanley Kology and George Guay, both of Stafford, were in court this morning, each charged with breach of the peace. Kology and Guay were arrested March 23rd, on charges of assault and breach of the peace, when it was found in the investigation of the Dennerley matter that these boys were companions of Craig at the time of the assault. No evidence could be secured to show that either Kology or Guay actually struck Dennerley or assisted in the assault. They pleaded nolo contendre to the charge of breach of the peace this morning and Judge Heald imposed a fine of $15 and costs in each case, amounting to $25.10 for each. The fine and costs were paid.

Unusual interest was aroused in the case through the popularity of young Dennerley, who was painfully injured when Craig assaulted him on East street, March 18th, as he was returning to his home on Westford avenue, after accompanying a girl to her home. Craig was driving a Ford touring machine and offered Dennerley and the girl a ride. After the offer was refused Craig drove about the Hollow road, coming back to the borough and going up toward Staffordville again, apparently waiting for Dennerley to return to his home. Craig stopped the machine and, according to the testimony given, grabbed Dennerley and struck him in the face, knocking him to the ground. Dennerley was stunned by the blow and the unexpectedness of the attack. He sustained severe cuts and bruises about the face, but did not know who had struck him and was unable to give much information to the state police, who investigated the affair. Kology and Guay testified that the assault was brief, and as much of a surprise to them as to Dennerley. They drove off with Craig in the machine, leaving Dennerley in the roadway.

COAL LEGISLATION

As the result of developments since the close of the coal strike, the fear has been expressed in Washington that the plan is to have the public pay the cost of the strike insofar as the producers are concerned.

At the resumption of mining it was reported that there would be no advance in the price of anthracite over normal times. This was based upon the fact that the miners returned to work at their old wages and thus the cost of production was not increased. Anthracite has not been flowing as freely as it did in normal times because of the widespread demand for coal at once, but it is realized that even if the cost of production has not been increased it is not obtainable at the price prevailing before the strike, and according to prices which have been announced in some cities for the spring and summer there is probably no chance that it will.

Through higher prices for the product it will be possible in time to whittle down the losses sustained during the strike period. All that is exacted from the consumer may not go to the producer but he will get the credit for the higher price if he charges only part of it.

Because there has been certain evidence which indicates that the coal prices are not going back where they were, congress is being spurred into action on the matter of coal legislation before this session adjourns. Since the recommendations by the federal coal commission and since the advocacy by President Coolidge that they get attention congress has done nothing. The coal strike has come and gone. The coal consumers have felt the effects of the lack of just such legislation as would have permitted the government to have dealt with the situation. Congressional dawdling stands out conspicuously and it is well that congress should bestir itself even at this late date to set in motion some legislation that will give some consideration and protection to the coal consuming public.

The public isn't favorable to higher prices for coal for one reason any more than for another, and it has indicated its opposition very strongly against paying larger coal bills.

DEMANDING GOOD BRAKES

Attention is being called to the fact that inspectors in Massachusetts have announced their intention to enforce the law against defective brakes. It is no more than should be expected but the warning is such that it should be needed by all drivers of automobiles who are in the habit of giving too little thought to such a manner. Good brakes are necessary at all times. There's no telling when they are going to be required, either for the protection of the driver and those with him, or others who may be in the highway. Defective brakes sooner or later mean trouble, and it is a mistake for those who are endeavoring to bring about greater safety in the highways to pay no attention to them.

Whenever laws are adopted for the purpose of increasing safety it is most unwise to permit them to go unenforced. If they are worth having they are certainly worth enforcing, while the recognized need of such protection should spur every auto driver to action before the inspector has a chance.

Effective brakes do not mean a burdensome expense and there are but few instances where the driver is not aware of the condition. Brakes are subject to frequent use and any driver can quickly tell whether they are in need of attention. This is applicable of course to the emergency as well as the footbrake. Both should be kept in good condition and yet there are too many instances where drivers seems to take pride in telling about driving without brakes.

It is just such drivers that the Massachusetts inspectors, and those of any other state for that matter, are desirous of locating. They constitute a menace to all other users of the streets and highways. They know better than to wait until they are caught and warned, or until they are involved in an accident and are made to bear the burden of considerable expense and the undesirabel publicity that goes with prosecution.

SNOW FENCES

Under present day conditions concerning transportation more and more dependence is being placed upon our highways for getting to points which were formerly served by the railroads. All goes well until winter comes, and if winter is a bit severe and produces two, three or more severe storms with heavy snow and much wind there is no small problem faced by those who carry the responsibility of keeping the highways clear for travel.

Side roads have been blocked for days and main thoroughfares have likewise felt the effects of the huge drifts and impassable conditions. It has been a case of wait until the highway could be shoveled out. Drifts much higher than a motor bus are unusual but they were encountered only last month. They yielded in time but there was inconvenience and delay until the shovelers did their work.

States to the north encounter these conditions much more frequently and it is natural that they should have done a bit more thinking in the way of prevention. Thus the recommendation of Maine's chief engineer of the highway department to the effect that snow fences should be erected at appropriate places along the highway as a means of helping to keep the highways clear of snow might well come in for consideration elsewhere.

Where snow has piled up in large drifts winter after winter railroads and trolley lines have erected snow barriers, and they have considered the expense was justified. If such is desirable and worthwhile for such transportation lines isn't it bound to get attention from the highway departments which are being forced to take care of an increasing proportion of travel?

If snow can be kept from making such huge drifts in the highways through snow fences it will mean a big relief to the opening up of state roads following heavy storms and thus a big contribution to highway use on which more and more dependence is being placed each year.

AMERICAN FOREST WEEK

Because of the repeated presentation of conditions surrounding the forests of this country, the dwindling timber supply, the wastage and the need of reforestation in order to anticipate the time when the woodlands or the country under the existing rate of decrease would be exhausted, there should exist a comprehensive idea of the present day needs in this direction. But it cannot fail to get proper emphasis from the proclamation which has been issued by President Coolidge designating April 18-24 as American Forest week.

We are not going to recoup our forests or put them on the road to complete recovery through the observance of American Forest week, and yet the educational value of such a plan should not be underestimated.

It is well that there should be an increased amount of thought directed to this problem. It is time that there was more attention given to the elimination of the waste, the conservation of the existing supply and the preparations for reforestation, and through such a week interest can be centered upon this need.

Woodlands develop slowly but time and money better be devoted to such development than to permit land to continue to go to waste and to stand idly by waiting for a fortune to appear out of the thin air without effort. There are the town forests, the demonstration plots and the state forests which show what can be done where the proper methods are used and the right interest prevails. We cannot wait until our forests are exhausted before trying to conserve our timber supply and yet that is what will happen unless we change our tactics and aid in the growing of as much if not more timber than we are using every day. Connecticut has a great number of acres which ought to be employed in this manner.

REDUCING LYNCHINGS

Mob violence never reaches so low an ebb as it does when forced down by law enforcement. As the result of the records it has kept the Federal Council of Churches shows that there were 17 lynchings during the last calendar year, an increase of one over the year previous but a decrease of 66 in comparison with 1919.

In the past few years, aided by the many lynchings which have occurred, there has been an arousal of public sentiment to a greater extent than ever. States in which little or no opposition has been shown to such lawlessness have about faced, officials have risen to assert their responsibilities and serious steps have been taken to cause those who participated in lynchings to pay the penalty. Mobs have been frustrated in their attempts to take prisoners away from officials and institutions and lynchings have decreased.

Demonstrations against law and order of the past have been turned into demonstrations for law and order. Perhaps the full credit for this cannot be attributed to the efforts which have been made in behalf of a federal anti-lynching law but there is no doubt but what this has gotten the people of numerous states to thinking about their own responsibilities with the result that they have decided to do for themselves what such a law would require others to do for them.

It is far preferable that the states should deal with crime of this kind and those where lynchings have become almost chronic are taking a new and better view of such a problem. If by so doing they can sidetrack a federal law so much the better, but if they cannot the need of eliminating this deplorable form of murder should force other action.

TO MANY CURVES

"Excuse me," said the handsome young man dressed up within an inch of his life, who had parked an expensive car at the curb and rung the doorbell of the corner house. "I certainly am sorry to trouble you, but could you tell me how to get to 173 5th avenue?"

"Oh, my goodness!" said the lady who had answered the doorbell, looking very sorry for him. "You are trying to find a street number, after dark in this suburb. Oh, dear me!"

"It wasn't dark when I began," the handsome young man pointed out, looking quite cheered up at her manifestation of complete understanding. "This is a very nice suburb, indeed, but I have decided that when one is looking for a number he ought to start right after breakfast! I'm late now!"

"It isn't an avenue, it's a street," said the sympathetic resident. "Drive right up that way and you'll strike 1st street, go ahead and the next is 3d because 2d isn't cut through, and go on across 4th and the next—still, if you that you're due to hit all those queer curves and bewildering—"

"I have hit 'em," the handsome young man explained earnestly. "That's all I have been doing for quite a long time!

"Every half block the street stops in front of somebody's garden and begins again three-quarters of a block in the direction you don't take," he went on. "And when you turn back to take it you find you are headed on a curve and if you follow the curve looking at all the luxurious evergreens and pergolas and sunken gardens, you are totally lost and have to ask 16 persons the way back to where you originally started to do it all over again, with results worse if anything. I know that the curve is a line of beauty but I never did believe in going mad over any—"

"I have a cousin who feels precisely the way you do," the sympathetic resident told him. "The first time he drove out to see us after we moved here he landed with a splitting sick headache all because he had driven so rapidly around so many curves in his haste to reach our chicken dinner.

"You'd better drive up to the next corner which is 1st street, and then go west on 1st street for about three—"

"Are you sure which is west?" asked the anxious young man. "People seem so undecided or absent-minded or something! I followed directions going south a little while ago and it turned out to be east, landing at the gas plant."

"That way always has been west," the lady insisted. "Then when you turn again toward 5th the road will tolerably straight and won't give you—"

"How tolerably?" inquired the young man, consulting his watch again.

The sympathetic resident looked a trifle confused. "Well," she said, "it'll be straight for one block and then you sort of curve around the Fisher's privet hedge and when you reach the next street there is a job of half a block."

The handsome young man groaned and gasped his neckscarf as though it were choking him. "If I ever did reach 5th street" he said in bitter hopelessness, "how would I find the number? If I got out and walked 100 feet into a house and took a searchlight out to hunt for the number, which generally is all painted over the same color as the house if it isn't hidden behind a luxuriant vine or a potted tree, you know what would happen to me. If two police dogs didn't grab me somebody would shoot off a gun from an upstairs window! You see, I'm dated to be best man at the wedding later on and I really ought to show up—"

"Oh, it's the Figtart's dinner," gasped the sympathetic lady beginning to stir around. "I'll say you should. Mrs Figtart's never'll forgive you—you drive up to 1st street and don't you move till they send after you! I'll telephone them."

"Whew!" gasped the handsome young man, mopping his brow in relief. "I certainly am obliged to you. Sometime when it is a pleasant day I'm coming out here and loop the loop around these streets for exercise, but I'll confess that I have been good and worried tonight. There are a lot of new bridesmaids there, too."—Exchange.

EASTER

Easter is the most ancient feast in observance.

The name of Easter comes from "Eastre," a goddess whose festival was in April.

In Pomerania, an apple eaten on Easter is believed to be a preventive of fevers.

An old belief was that a babe born on Easter morning was likely to know neither want nor care.

On the evening of Easter day in olden times an effigy of Judas Iscariot was solemnly burned.

An ancient superstition was that the bread and cake baked on Good Friday and preserved were specifics against any disease occurring during the year.

In Cornwall the people believe that if they remove the bees from their hives on any other day than Good Friday, death will surely occur to these useful and industrials insects.

In England in olden days the most popular dish of the Easter menu was a red herring "on horseback." The effect was obtained by the cook arranging the herring on its tail in a corn salad.

Every Easter morning the old town of Winchelsea elects its mayor. A water-bailiff, having a silver oar as his badge of office, is also still appointed although the sea has retired several miles from the town.

In rural England there is a superstitious belief that if the wind is east on Easter day, it is a wise plan to draw water and wash in it, as by this means one will avoid the various ill effects from the east wind throughout the year.

Some years ago in England a remarkable idea was carried out by indulgent parents, who, on the occasion of their daughter's marriage, gave her an Easter egg nine feet high and eighteen feet in circumference. It was filled with a complete and costly trousseau.

In parts of Ireland it was once—and the custom still lingers—the practice for housewives to prepare Easter's feast on the Saturday, but woe unto anyone who, however well they had fasted during Lent, ventured to partake of any of the dainties until the cock has crowed on Easter morn.

From remotest times fire has played a prominent part in Easter celebrations in many different countries. Especially in the east do the people believe in what is called "The Miracle of the Easter Fire"—a ceremony of elaborate character. It is confined to the Greek and other eastern churches, and takes place each Easter in Jerusalem.

From Small Beginnings

Thomas Holcroft, the Shoemaker, a Great Writer

In his father's shoemaking shop young Thomas Holcroft had to sit on a bench and work with his father making and mending shoes. The family was too poor to think of sending the boy to school any longer than the law compelled. The father had been able to make a living by shoemaking, and he expected the boy to help him, to become a shoemaker, and to carry on the little shop when he grew into manhood.

Thus, without opportunity or education without even the lesson of success or of ambition, Thomas Holcroft sat down to his manual work. How it would have surprised that shoemaker father, who sat watching the boy cut leather, if he could have seen the career the boy was to lead: a master of languages, a translator of books from foreign tongues, a writer of novels, a writer of plays, a man so honored that people respected him highly and urged him to write the story of his life. All that, Thomas Holcroft became in spite of the fact that fate started him off only as a shoemaker in a poor little shop.

After he had worked for a long time making and mending shoes he tired of the bending posture and the necessity of long hours of sitting still. He left the shop and secured work helping take care of horses in a stable. Here was a job that gave him a chance to move about, and to enjoy some variety. The desire for activity that made him wish to use his muscles made him also wish to use his brain. He began to read and study in the times when he was not hard at work. In this way he picked up considerable knowledge, and was able to teach others. In the stable he had further exhibited activity by doing things that made his fellow workmen laugh. He mimicked men's whom they knew, and by doing this became somewhat of an actor. This interested him in going to the theater, in reading plays, and in thinking about plays. After some years of reading and study, of play-going and play-acting, he became a writer for periodicals. He continued to read and study. Then at 35 he translated a play from the French, for his newspaper work had sent him to Paris, where he had learned to speak French. The play he translated made a hit. Then he began to write plays of his own, and still later he wrote novels, and last of all his autobiography.

He mastered several languages, translated various foreign books and was recognized as a learned man. His whole life was characterized by energy.

Little Talks on Thrift

WASTES

Such rapid strides are being made in the realms of scientific research and invention that we seem to be living in an age of miracles. In childhood we thrilled at the tales of the Arabian Nights' entertainments. But even those strange stories revealed no more wonderful accomplishments than are the feats performed by the modern man of science.

Amid this progress, however, we are lagging behind in point of waste elimination, for in the field of production and distribution, there is a prodigious loss. It is estimated that one-half of all the gas produced in the United States never gets into the pipes that should take it to the consumers. In coal, it has been estimated that half the output is wasted in the mine, and what with the careless methods of distribution, of firing methods in furnaces and the like, one authority maintains that one-twentieth of our available coal supply is used and nineteen-twentieths wasted.

Mr. Stuart Chase in his book, The Tragedy of Waste, summarizes some of the outstanding wastes: coal, 750 million tons per year; water power, 50 million horse-power per year; oil, 1 billion barrels per year; natural gas 600 billion cubic feet per year; lumber 5 million cubic feet per year.

Constructive thrift, conservation of our natural resources, such as Theodore Roosevelt preached 20 years ago, a resolve to eliminate waste wherever waste can be eliminated—here are the keys to a power and greater prosperity surpassing by far any prosperity this nation knows now or ever has known in the past.

These things can be brought about only through individual effort. There must be a greater national thrift consciousness. We must learn to be concerned with losses even though their personal effect may seem remote. We must learn to appraise thrift not only as a personal virtue which shall aid in our individual success, but we must learn to think of it in terms of general economic betterment, yes, indeed (and this seems like an echo of the war) in terms of patriotism.—American Society for Thrift.

The Voice In the Water

Surprising 'tis how just a voice
Can cause so many to rejoice.
—Old Mother West Wind.

Gentle Sister South Wind had been busy for some time. There was no longer ice in the Smiling Pool. The water looked cold, but the ice was gone. It was gone in the Laughing Brook. It was gone from the pond of Paddy the Beaver. It was gone in the Big River. Jack Frost still came occasionally at night, but he was no longer strong enough to pinch hard or to make ice. Sweet Mistress Spring was on her way, and everybody knew it. Everybody went around listening. Had you asked any of them what they were listening for, they couldn't have told you. They would have said that they were not listening for anything in particular. But they were, although they didn't know it.

Peter Rabbit was doing a lot of listening with the rest. He would hop along lippety-lippety-lip, then stop sit up and listen. He would have told you that he was merely making sure that there was no danger. But he was doing more than that, for each time he always went on again with just a little feeling of disappointment.

So it happened that just after the Black Shadows had crept across the Green Meadows and made black the water of the Smiling Pool, Peter Rabbit arrived on the bank of the Smiling Pool. He wondered if he would find Jerry Muskrat there. He had hardly seen Jerry since the ice had covered the Smiling Pool at the beginning of winter. Now as he sat on the bank he looked eagerly this way and that, way in the hope that we would see Jerry. He wasn't disappointed. He saw a silvery line moving out from the farther shore and presently Jerry Muskrat himself came climbing up the bank near where Peter was sitting. He had made that silvery line by swimming.

"Hello, Jerry," cried Peter. "My, I'm glad to see you swimming about again! Did you pass a pleasant winter?"

"Hello, Old Longlegs," exclaimed Jerry. "I certainly did pass a pleasant winter. All winters are pleasant for me."

"Were there any and storms during the winter?"

"I should say so," exclaimed Peter. "What a silly question to ask."

"Nothing silly about it," retorted Jerry Muskrat. "Nothing silly about it. How should I know down under the ice what kind of weather we were having. It is all the same under there."

"I forgot," exclaimed Peter. "I must say you have it easy, Jerry Muskrat."

"I earn it," said Jerry. "If Paddy the Beaver and I have an easy time in the winter, it is because we have worked and worked hard for it. Yes, sir."

Peter was sitting up with his long ears pointing straight up. He was listening for something else, Jerry himself sat up and appeared to be listening. For some time they sat there gossiping. Every now and then they would stop for no reason at all and listen.

As Peter was in the middle of a story of one of his adventures during the winter, and just as he reached the most exciting point, there came a faint sound from the Smiling Pool. Peter stopped right in the middle of a word. He leaned forward and listened eagerly. Jerry Muskrat did the very same thing. For a couple of minutes there was no sound. Then they heard it again —that voice from the water. It was a little louder than before. It was a clear, piping peep.

"Peeper the Hyla!" cried Peter and Jerry together. "Hurrah! Mistress Spring is almost here!"

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Today is the 26th birthday anniversary of Prince Henry, the third son of their British majesties, and according to recent despatches from London his engagement to wed Lady Mary Scott, daughter of the Duke of Buccleuch, is likely soon to be announced. In the event of his two elder brothers dying without heir Prince Henry would become king, a rather remote contingency, it may be assumed, but not by any means an impossibility. The prince is said to be one of the most popular members of the royal family. He is a typical Anglo-Saxon, fair haired, blue eyed, and sturdy of limb. He is a keen sportsman and more versatile in his taste in this respect than is the prince of Wales. He is an expert swimmer and can hold his own at cricket and boxing.

You can almost see the cracks in the voices of some people when they attempt to sing.

Curling and Waving Dries Life from Hair

The constant curling and waving demanded by present styles in bobbed hair, slowly burns the color, lustre and very life from the hair, leaving it dry, faded, brittle, and full of dandruff; then the hair roots shrink and the hair falls out fast.

Since girls just must curl and wave the hair to appear their prettiest, try "Danderine" to offset any bad effects. After the first application your hair will take on new life and that healthy, youthful lustre, become incomparably soft, wavy and appear twice as thick and abundant. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears.

A 35-cent bottle of refreshing "Danderine" from any drug store or toilet counter will do wonders for any girl's hair. It goes right to the roots, invigorates, nourishes and strengthens them, helping the hair to grow thick, healthy and luxuriant.

William H. Young was driving his wife's car at the time and they were returning to New London from Colchester, where Miss Allen who runs a shop in New London, had been conducting a gift sale for Mrs. Young. CELEBRATED ANNIVERSARY OF BIRTH OF SPIRITUALISM

The 78th anniversary of the birth of Modern Spiritualism was observed by two especially interesting and well attended services, afternoon and evening, Tuesday at the Spiritual academy on Park street with three mediums, Mrs. Nettie Holt Harding, Rev. Lucy Booth Moran and Mrs. Amelia Adams as the speakers and message givers.

Charles A. Dowsett, president of the First Spiritual union, presided and presented the greetings of the union at both services. In the afternoon the address was by Mrs. Harding, who spoke with much conviction upon the theme, Hydesville Rappings at the Door of Today. The messages were given by Rev. Mrs. Moran and Mrs. Adams, the latter a flower medium. An appropriate musical programme was given that included prelude, Idylle in A (Lawrence), a violin solo, In Absence (Ashford) by Mrs. Charles A. Dowsett, and a soprano solo, My Task, which was sung in fine voice by Mrs. Josephine Stewart.

At the evening service the address was by Rev. Mrs. Moran who spoke upon "What the Hydesville Rappings Taught Us." Among other things she mentioned that the Hydesville rappings have taught us that Spiritualism is a truth, a force, a light that has come into the world and given us a better understanding of life, by the illumination of spirit power enabling us to discern things as they really are. They have set in motion new thought, Christian Science, call it what you will, all the things that make for the progress of the human race. They have taught us to send out the vibrations of sympathy, of brotherly love, and have called our attention to the great truth that the door of reformation is never shut but there is eternal progression for every soul. We hold the optimistic view that the world is now perfect but incomplete and we hope to make it more complete.

The messages were given by Mrs. Harding and Mrs. Adams and were heard with great satisfaction by the many to whom the medium brought words of advice and encouragement.

An organ prelude, The Vesper Bell (Acate) opened the evening service and the other pleasing musical numbers were a well rendered violin solo, Hope Lights the Way (Cadeaux) by Mrs. Dowsett, and a soprano solo, In the Garden (Miles) by Stewart whose organ was heard with great acceptance by her audience. The service concluded with the postlude by Mrs. Dowsett, violin, Miss Grace Cobb Taft, cornet, and Mr. Dowsett at the organ.

From 5 to 6:30 p. m. supper was served in the social room at the Academy.

NORWICH TOWN

Mrs. Charles F. Geer of West Town street, was agreeably surprised Monday afternoon and evening, when relatives and friends, mostly members of the Bible class of the First Baptist church, Norwich, of which she is a member, visited her home in recognition of her birthday.

At noon Mrs. Geer had as dinner guests, her sister, Mrs. Frank Case and a niece, Mrs. Walter Rhen, both of New London.

About 3 o'clock others began to arrive, until a company of 14 had assembled. Several other members of her class who had planned to attend, also the teacher, Mrs. Edwin Olcott, were unable to be present.

The afternoon and evening were spent in sociability, with piano selections, and Victrola music. At 7 o'clock a tempting supper served by Mrs. Frederick Wilson, one of the class members, consisted of potato salad, sandwiches, olives, cake, fancy wafers, whipped cream and toffee.

Mrs. Geer occupied the honor seat at the head of the table, during the repast. The center of attraction was a handsomely decorated birthday cake made by Mrs. James Tourtellotte. On the white frosting were fancy pink bonbons and 12 pink candles to signify each month of the year, also the date, March 29th, 1926, in red letters. Mrs. Geer, who has talent at verse-making, read a poem written by her for her birthday, as well as many other interesting stanzas of poetry.

Mrs. Geer was remembered with cards from friends, boxes of candy, fancy cakes, etc., besides congratulations over the telephone. Included in the guests was Mrs. Fanny A. Moulthrop, of Gales Ferry, who was visiting friends in Norwich. Mrs Geer was born in Norwich, a daughter of the late Captain and Mrs. Cleveland Geer, well known residents of the Thamesville section, many years ago known as Geers Plains, her family being the first settlers there. Mrs. Geer grew to womanhood in the same home in which some of her ancestors were born. She has been a resident of Norwich Town for several years, her home on West Town street being among the most attractive in that section.

Charles D. Card, who died last week in Erie, Penn., when residing in Norwich several years ago, was one of the obliging conductors for the Connecticut company, and served for a long time on the Tantic route. He is well remembered by older patrons of the road.

R. C. PLAUT SENDS BOOK ABOUT ALLIGATOR FARM

James Turnbull of Wauwecus Hill, received Tuesday morning an interesting booklet from Los Angeles, Cal., sent him by Rutherford C. Plaut, of Norwich, who had been passing some time there. The booklet contains eighteen colored pictures of the California Alligator farm, established for the purpose of raising alligators for their hides, and to supply live specimens to shows, parks and zoological gardens. The pictures show various sections of this farm, parks, with beautiful scenery, foliage, flowers, lakes and swamps. From the time of the eggs hatching, the alligators shown in the pictures vary in size and age. On one cover a large alligator is shown near one of these attractive little parks, with two small children on its back, indicating the tameness of the reptile, while other views display large numbers at a feast, in which they are tearing a piece of meat apart. Other groups are basking in the California sunshine on the water banks after a plunge. Another interesting picture is that of Okeechobee, the largest alligator in captivity. The alligator is indigenous to the swampy parts of the southern states, extending from the exerglades of Florida to southeastern Texas. Owing to the depredations of the hunter and the demand for his hide, the alligator is rapidly becoming extinct, at least in its natural haunts. The breeding of alligators in captivity has been found to be an easy matter, when placed in a reproduction of their natural environs. In the warm and congenial climate of Southern California the natural and climatic conditions are highly favorable to the raising of saurians.

The alligator lives to a grand old age, some naturalists say 50 years or more. In its natural haunts the reptile hybernates by burying in the ground during the cold weather, but in California it is warm enough so they do not bury but can be seen every day in the year, yet they do not partake of food during the winter. As the weather warms up in the spring, they begin to eat very lightly, becoming ravenous in the hot summer. The feeding is a very interesting sight; large pieces of meat are thrown in and a number of alligators will take hold and begin rolling over and over in this manner, twisting pieces of the meat off.

The farm referred to consists of twenty small lakes and swamps where the alligators are kept. Owing to canabilistic tendencies they have to be segregated according to size, the youngsters in one lake, those a little large in another, etc. This farm is open to visitors every day in the year. Alligators of all sizes from babies hardly the size of a lizard, to huge monsters, the nests, eggs, etc., may be seen in a beautiful park. Guides are furnished visitors to give information and explain the life and habits of these strange creatures.

Mr. Turnbull was highly pleased with Mr. Plaut's remembrance. At his home on Wauwecus Hill, he has several specimens of snakes, some of which he has tamed. He also has small animals kept chiefly as pets, including a dog, cats, coons, skunk, etc. Mr. Turnbull is a life member of the Reptile Study society, of America. Each year, he is presented new specimens from another reptile fancier who annually goes on a snake hunt and presents Mr. Turnbull one or more. At the present time Mr. Turnbull has about five large snakes in his keeping on his farm. He considers them harmless, when one understands them.

SEEK NAME OF BOY LAWYER WHO BEAT LINCOLN AT BAR

CARTHAGE, Ill., March 30—(AP)—Search for the name of an unknown boy attorney who defeated Abraham Lincoln and T. Lyle Dickey when they defended a Schuyler county murderess in Many, 1839, and for a legal document filed in the case in Lincoln's handwriting, is being made in Carthage.

Statements that Lincoln would never defend a murderer are inaccurate, as court records will show, said J. A. Thompson, an old resident of Monmouth, who is acquainted with the case.

"Lincoln was a lawyer practicing before the bar, just as any other attorney," Mr. Thompson declared.

"Somewhere in Carthage there is a motion in arrest of judgment in Lincoln's own handwriting, but that was taken from the records years ago, and has never been found since. The motion was overruled, and the murderer was hanged on May 19, 1839.

"The mutilated records of the court and tradition give the names of the attorneys for the defense as Abraham Lincoln and T. Lyle Dickey, who later became a justice in the Illinois supreme court. No record of the man's name who appeared against them can be found, however.

"The wording of the old records of Hancock county filled a book of unpronounceable names in a saloon brawl in Frederick, Schuyler county, and so on. Other records have the name of the murderer as fledging frame. The murderer and the man he killed were probably transients for neither was known to the settlers. The case went to Hancock county on a change of venue from Schuyler county."

NEW STYLE PASSPORT WILL BE SMALLER SIZE AND PRINTED

WASHINGTON, March 30 (AP)—The state department has decided to stop issuing the old, style engraved passports and within the next month or so will publish a neatly printed substitute of vest pocket dimensions.

Underlying the change of style are two chief factors, safety and economy.

Departmental officers expect the new form to give the government absolute protection from counterfeit products, a source of constant worry. Then too, they say, the government will save much of the expense that went with the production of the engraved parchment, and by using less expensive paper.

As a further step in the direction of economy, the new passport will be embossed and sealed in colors by machinery rather than by hand.

RICKARD PLANS TUNNEY-DEMPSEY BOUT DESPITE COMMISSION'S EDICT

NEW YORK, March 30.—(AP)—Despite the arbitrary edict of the state athletic commission that Harry Wills, negro challenger, must be given consideration in any heavyweight program involving the world's title, Tex Rickard today continued to lay plans for a championship match between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney.

The veil of mystery surrounding these plans, temporarily lifted yesterday when Rickard signed Tunney to a blank contract to fight any opponent, fell over the situation again today when it was reported that the promoter had received a communication from Dempsey, presumably about the Tunney match.

Questioned by the state athletic commission about the contract signed by Tunney yesterday, Jess McMahon, Rickard's matchmaker, admitted that Tunney signed a blank contract, but added that "it didn't mean anything."

Meanwhile Rickard was closeted with Colonel Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankee stadium, in an effort to lease the boxing rights to the stadium for the summer season. Neither would talk concerning the conference, but Rickard promised to make public an important statement sometime Thursday.

James A. Farley, chairman of the commission, said two obstacles stood in the way of Rickard's program if he intends to stage the fight in New York state. One, he said, was the commission's edict that Dempsey must fight Wills before he meets any other opponent, and the other involves the renewal of Tunney's license which expired March 15.

"Tunney mustn't think he can barter for a match and then walk into this office and get a license immediately," he said. "He must first fulfill a promise made to this commission last year concerning a match with Jack Sharkey, the Boston heavyweight. He told Colonel Phelan, chairman of the license commission, that he would fulfill a verbal agreement to meet Sharkey and he will be reminded of this promise before a license is issued. We sought to interest him in the match early this year, but he passed the buck to Billy Gibson, his manager, and we got no satisfaction, but our time is coming."

Chairman Farley said he would endorse a Tunney-Wills match, recognizing the victor as the chief claimant of the heavyweight title only upon the presentation of "bona-fide evidence that Dempsey does not intend to fight any more."

Harry Wills arrived in New York today from a vacation at Hot Springs, Ark., but he was silent as to his future plans. Paddy Mullins, his manager, reiterated his statement that he was not interested in any heavyweight match in which the title was not at stake and refused to discuss a match with Tunney until such a time as he is convinced Dempsey will not return to the ring.

RUTH'S BATTING SLUMP HAS NOT HURT HIS POPULARITY

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—The decline in Babe Ruth's hitting last year, a slump from which he has only partially recovered this spring despite rigorous winter training, has not apparently impaired the Yankee star's standing as baseball's greatest drawing card.

Barnstorming trips of the New York Americans in the south have indicated that interest of fandum rings as high in the erstwhile champion as in the days when he was shattering extra base hit records. Games of the Yankee team have drawn crowds the equal of former years, observers report, although Ruth has responded to their enthusiastic receptions with strikeouts more often than with homers.

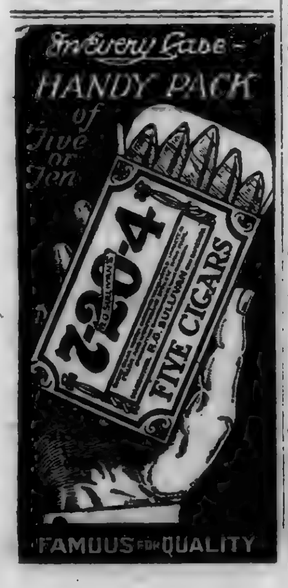
The big question of the training belt has been: Will Ruth regain his home run laurels, or has he passed the peak of his greatness?

Now 32 years old, the Babe has entered into his come-back drive with an enthusiasm which has had an inspiring effect on the whole team. But home run drives have caromed off his mighty willow with less frequency than in former years, and his batting average has not expanded—probably, says President Ruppert, because he is trying too hard.

As a matter of fact, the Yankees as a whole have not been hitting as lustily as Manager Huggins had anticipated. Tony Lazzeri, Salt Lake City infielder, who collected 60 homers a year ago, has found major league pitching in the training camps more puzzling than the giants of Pacific coast moundsmen. Bob Meusel, another Yankee long distance batter, likewise is clouting below the expectations of Yankee owners, although Mark Koenig, new shortstop, and Lou Gehrig, young first sacker, have been belting the ball vigorously.

O. D. H. S. JUNIORS ORGANIZE BALL CLUB FOR SEASON

The Junior branch of local lodge No. 11, O. D. H. S., expects to put on one of the fastest baseball teams in this section of the state this season. The management has already signed a number of the leading ball-players in eastern Connecticut but is lacking a fast battery. Local men will be given preference for positions on the teams and tryouts are being held every Sunday afternoon at Duwell field. It is intended to play a large number of home games on Saturday with out of town games on Sunday. Harry Wichnewski is manager of the team with E. V. Gleason as assistant manager.



SNOW CALLS HALT AT SPRING TRAINING CAMPS

CHICAGO, March 30—(AP)—With what the big league ball club managers cheerfully concede as the world's worst in spring training seasons rapidly drawing to a close, the weather man put on a final touch today. The clubs were accustomed to being rained out but it was a driving snow storm, that forced the cancellation of the Chicago White Sox-St. Louis Cards engagement at Dallas, Texas. Manager Collins of the Sox decided that with frozen out games in a row was enough and started the club back for a week's work at Shreveport, La.

Basking in the California sunshine, Manager Joe McCarthy waxed talkative and announced that "we have a ball club that's going to be the surprise of the league." He based his opinion on the youthful trend of his squad and said that not only will the pitching and infield work give the Cubs a real defense, but the Chicago team will hit all year.

All set for a hard week's work, Ty Cobb was forced to sit indoors and watch the rain fall at the Tigers Georgia camp today. It was a serious interruption of the planned week's drill and overtime work will be meted out until the club starts northward at the end of the week.

Eddie Roush tried his hand at pitching in the Reds camp at Orlando, Fla., and hurled the Cincinnati regulars to a 7-5 win over the youngsters. Hargrave will not need an appendicitis operation, it was announced, at camp Over at Lakeland, the Cleveland Indians wound up their training and started on the road, stopping off at Waycross, Ga., for a tilt with Rochester tomorrow.

Sisler worked his St. Louis Browns for 13 innings at Clearwater taking time out to announce that Gaston will be in the mound in the Browns opening game with the Sox at Chicago on April 13.

WESTERN HIGH SCHOOL TEAMS TAKE LEAD IN BASKETBALL

CHICAGO, March 30—(AP)—The west dominated the national interscholastic basketball tournament as teams from all sections of the United States swept through the opening games at the University of Chicago today.

The day saw the closest opening tilts in the history of the classic. Leads changed hands with disconcerting swiftness and the results of virtually every one of the games was in the air until the final gun.

Breckenridge High of San Antonio, Texas, led off in the title play by eliminating the team from Torrington, Conn., semi-finalist last year, in a fast game, 31 to 26.

The second game went to the Cheyenne, Wyo., team which outbattled Ft. Valley, Ga., winners of the Cotton States tournament, 20 to 28.

Pine Bluff, Ark., nosed out Lewiston, Idaho, in an overtime game, 23 to 24, after the most bitterly fought of the opening round encounters.

The ramped defense of the quintet from Scott county, Miss. gave the southerners a victory over Canton, Ills., 25 to 21 in a game in which few shots were wasted.

The two decisive victories of the day were scored by Westport High of Kansas City, Mo., and Newton, Kansas, whose short pass style proved too much for teams from West Virginia and Ohio, respectively. The Westport players, after being held down by the Point Pleasant, W. Va., five up until the latter portion of the game, opened up a brilliant offense in the last quarter to win 44 to 26.

Newton, Kansas, Sunflower champions and rated one of the leading contenders for the championship, played an easy game to defeat Zanesville, Ohio 26 ot 15. The Buckeye players surprised the crowd by taking the first half, 11 to 10, but were ineffective in the final period.

The fast and smooth-working team from Lexington, Ky., where the national title went in 1922, defeated the slower players from Ogden, Utah, 44 to 20 tonight. Lexington worked the ball down the floor by short passes and developed openings to pop in the goals. Ogden scored but one field goal during the second half.

Worn out by a gallant uphill battle which overcame Pueblo's wide lead and tied the score at 26-all just before the game ended, St. Joe, Mich., lost to Central high of Pueblo Colo., after 3 minutes overtime, 33 to 26.

"BIG TEN" COLLEGES RENEW DEMAND THAT A. A. U. KEEP HANDS OFF ATHLETES

CHICAGO, March 30—(AP)—The demand of western conference universities taht the Amateur Athletic union "keep its hands off" "Big Ten" athletes until they complete their intercollegiate competition was renewed today by John L. Griffith athletic commissioner of the conference.

Within 24 hours after Murray Hulbert, A. A. U. president, had retorted to Z. G. Clevenger, athletic director of Indiana university, who took the matter up with him on behalf of the "Big Ten" coaches, Griffith issued a statement declaring that conference athletes get as much competition in the athletic programs of their schools as their coaches believe to be good for them, contrasting Hulbert's attitude with that of the American professional football league, which has ruled that no college student may be signed for professional fotoball until his graduation.

"The schools and colleges," said Mr. Griffith, "are developing practically all of the outstanding athletes of the day. In the last Olympics the United States track and field teams won 255 points, all but 21 of which were won by athletes developed in the colleges.

"The athletic directors and coaches in educational institutions have arranged schedules in which their best men have plenty of opportunity to compete. They believe they are making possible all of the competition taht is desirable for these boys to engage in as long as they are undergrautes. Mr. Hulbert differs, and believes college athletes should compete in A. A. U. basketball tournaments and track meets. "In my judgment this is a matter for college men to decide, and not one that concerns any outside organization."

Assailing Hulbert's statement that the conference "admitted inability to control the athletes under ist jurisdiction" by appealing to the athletic union to refrain from overtures to undergraduate athletes, Griffith said:

"Bill Edwards, president of the American Professional Football league, might have taken the same position. But being a college man he recognized that colleges are competent to provide plenty of competition for their undergraduate athletes, and the league has forbidden any professional league club to sign college students prior to their graduation. This action is appreciated by college men throughout the country who are averse to the exploitation of the men who achieve distinction in college athletic circles."

Clevenger's letter to Hulbert on behalf of the conference was occasioned by an overture to George Spalding of Purdue, Big Ten basketball ace, to play in the National A. A. U. basketball tournament at aKnsas City, and by the action of the Illinois Athletic club in taking on a European trip Herbe Schwarze of the University of Wisconsin.

The suggestion to Hulbert that "you might care to call the attention of your clubs to the desirability of not enrolling conference athletes for A. A. U. competition until they have graduated," was answered yesterday by Hulbert with the statement that the proposal was "unreasonable" and that situation called for no corrective measure by the A. A. U.

YALE PLANS TO SEND SWIMMING TEAM TO EUROPE

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—Plans for an invasion of Europe this summer by the champion Yale university swimming team were revealed here today. Although permision to compete abroad has not yet been secured from the A. A. U. the New Haven athletes have made tentative arrangementsto sail in June with a view to competing in title events in Germany and England.

Eight swimmers expect to make the trip, including J. A. House, intercollegiate backstroke champion, and J. L. Lake, 440-yard title holder. Others will be W. S. K. Stage, P. W. Sunnell, W. S Meany, G. G. Mason, W. H. E. Hall and H. G. Phillips. The team will be accompanied by its coach, Robert Kiphuth.

RACHEL POTTER SETS NEW TRACK RECORD AT TIJUANA

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—Rachel Potter today joined the ranks of track record-holders at Tijuana over the club house course. 230 feet less than a mile, beating Marsdale's mark of 1.35 by two-fifths of a second. In establishing the new time the winner defeated Spanish Star and Kingman, the favorite.

Lardj took the Palmetto handicap at Tampa Downs from Shivesdale and Star Falcon, covering the mile and seventy yards in 1:56 4-5. The track was heavy but a warm sun attracted a large attendance.

Orlando's feature, a four-furlong dash, went to Natrolight in 53 1-5 seconds, with Seth's Hope second and Miss Fountain third.

SCHAEFER LEADS HOPPE FOR 18.1 BILLIARD TITLE

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—Jake Schaefer, challenger, assumed the lead tonight in the fourth block of his 3,600 point match with Willie Hoppe for the world's 18.1 balkline billiard championship, counting 385 to Hoppe's 329 in eleven innings. Schaefer had high runs of 133 and 104. The match now stands: Schaefer 1,200, Hoppe 982.

Hoppe gave the worst exhibition of the match up to this time, having difficulty in keeping the balls together, failed to score in six of his eleven turns at the table. On the other hand Schaefer appeared at times to be at his best and his string was an interesting exhibition of balkline play.

The night score:

Hoppe 17 0 0 0 0 26 25 0 2 2 0—83.

Schaefer 59 0 51 4 0 16 133 5 104 6 8 —385.

Playing the finals over a soggy course, the Ohio champion held her own all the way and seized the lead when Miss Collett faltered at the tenth hole. From them on Miss Fordyce's lead was never overcome.

SENIORS WIN INTERCLASS BASKETBALL TITLE AT C. A. C.

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, March 30.—Defeating the sophomores 14-14 here last night, the Connecticut Aggie seniors came through the final game of the class basketball schedule to win their fourth consecutive class championship. The game was an extra one that became necessary when both teams were tied for first place at the close of the regular schedule.

The sophomores took an early lead, but baskets by Putnam and Donovan enabled the seniors to go to the front, and at half time they were ahead 10-5. During the second half, both teams battled on even terms, but their lead gained in the first half enabled the seniors to take the game.

CHECKER TOURNEY STARTS FRIDAY MORNING AT 10 O'CLOCK

The Duwell checker championship tourney to decide who in eastern Connecticut shall occupy the pinnacle of champs in this line will start Friday morning at 10 a. m. at the Duwell rooms on East Main street. Play will continue throughout the day with the necessary time out for meals. Before Good Friday has passed someone will have earned the much sought title in addition to $25 in gold and a large silver loving cup suitably inscribed, which at the present is attracting much attention, being on display in the window of Lee Clegg, Franklin street.

The one coming in second will receive $10 while the next two runners up will receive $5 each.

The club room will be open throughout the day to the public and everyone is cordially invited to watch the series of the games which without a doubt will prove real interesting as some of the best players east of the Connecticut river have entered in hopes of bringing the championship back to their city or village. Many of the surrounding cities and villages have entrants although New London to date has only entered one man. Whether there will be any more entered from that city is unknown but it seems as if the Whaling city is a little behind and it is hoped that before the tourney starts there will be a few more entrants from the city by the sea. Entries will be received until Thursday night by the sporting editor or can be addressed to "Sports", the Duwell club.

N. Y. COMMISSION REFUSES TO ALLOW BISKO-BERLENBACH GO

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—The state athletic commission, today refused permission to Paul Berlenbach, world's light heavyweight champion, to fight Johnny Risko, Cleveland heavyweight in a return match. In defending its edict, the commission said it would follow its policy for forcing champions to fight in their own class, and pointed to Jack Delaney of Bridgeport, Conn., as a logical opponent, "if Berlenbach is looking for action."

Risko recently scored a decisive point victory over Berlenbach.

Jess McMahon, matchmaker at the Madison Square garden, said that attempts will be made to sign Risko for a match with Georges Carpentier, the French light-heavyweight, who is in this country looking for matches. In the event Carpentier is unwilling to meet Risko, McMahon said Jack Delaney or Paul Berlenbach will be offered as opponents.

Scotty Monteith, one of the managers of Louis (Kid) Kaplan, world's featherweight champion, was reinstated by the commission when he appeared to answer charges filed by the Montreal commission that Kaplan had refused to carry out a contract to meet Kid Roy, the Canadian featherweight champion November 14th. 1925. Monteith was suspended last week when he failed to answer a summons. He told the commission that a new contract for a future match has been signed and the board elected to drop the affair.

RADEMACHER BETTERS TWO WORLD'S SWIMMING MARKS

PHILADELPHIA, March 30—(AP)—Eric Rademacher, German breast-stroke swimming champion, tonight bettered the world's record time at 500 yards and 500 meters in an exhibition at the Penn A. C.

Swimming against a relay team of five men, the German negotiated the 500 yards in 6 minutes 56 3-5 seconds, and the 500 meters in 7 minutes 35 2-5 seconds. The former marks, both of which were established by Rademacher, were 7 minutes 3 2-10 seconds and 7 minutes 40 2-10 seconds.

Gustave Froelich, back stroke champion of Germany won the 100 yard back stroke event, in which several American stars were contestants. His time was 1 minute 8 3-5 seconds. The German swimmer finished one yard ahead of Arden Allen, Stanford university, champion, of the Pacific coast.

LINDLEY RETURNS TO YALE AND WILL PLAY WITH NINE

NEW HAVEN, March 30.—(AP)—Captain Dan Lindley, of the Yale baseball team, who has been at his home in Englewood, N. J., for a week threatened with an attack of appendicitis, has returned to Yale and will accompany the team on its annual Easter trip which starts tomorrow. Lindley has recovered sufficiently to play and probably will start in the first game, that with Georgetown at Washington on Thursday. Lindley is expected to play left field this season.

Dean Frederick S. Jones, who has made several trips south with the Yale team, and Burnside Winslow, one time captain and present member of the graduate committee on baseball, will accompany the team.

TIDES VARY BUT EIGHT INCHES IN RIVER TUESDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 30. — A most unusual occurrence in the Pawcatuck river Tuesday was the fact that there was not eight inches difference in the heights of the tides and this, too, in spite of the fact that the moon was full Monday. It was due to this condition that Capt. Frank H. Robinson of the tug Westerly, decided to have the barge Kate, which had a cargo of 657 tons of chestnut and stove anthracite coal for delivery at a dock in the upper waters of the Pawcatuck river, remain at Stonington and come up the river on a favorable tide Wednesday. This barge was of a sufficient capacity for transporting an even larger cargo than the one carried.

EMIL ANDERSON'S HEARING IS SET FOR THIS MORNING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 30.—Emil Anderson, claiming his home as Waterloo, N. Y., arrested Monday in Norwich and later brought to Westerly by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, who went there for the purpose, continued to be held Tuesday at the Westerly police station. He will be presented in court Wednesday morning on a complaint charging that he broke and entered a building in the night time and committed larceny. Anderson's arrest in Norwich followed his attempt to dispose, in Norwich, of some tools which were alleged to be the property of Charles W. Austin and stolen from the mill of the Pawcatuck Woolen company, Potter Hill, over the past week end.

MAURICE SULLIVAN DIES— HONORED CIVAL WAR SOLDIER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 30.—One of the surviving veterans of the Civil war and Westerly resident for over 50 years, the death of Maurice Sullivan, 78, occurred Tuesday morning at the Soldiers' Home, Bristol, R. I., where he was of the flag detail. Mr. Sullivan was born in Ireland and came to America when a boy of six. He resided here until he entered the Soldiers' Home at Bristol in 1914. For over 40 years he was employed at the New England Granite Works. During the Civil war he served for four years with Battery G, 1st Rhode Island light artillery, and saw action in all the main battles of that conflict. His outfit was nearly annihilated in one battle and the remnants were combined with Battery E.

He was a member of Budlong Post, G. A. R.

His wife, Mrs. Mary Collins Sullivan, died in 1896. He is survived by three sons, Dr. Frank E. Sullivan of Bridgeport, Conn., Maurice J. Sullivan of New York city, and Raymond H. Sullivan of New Britain, Conn., and a daughter, Mrs. Owen Sherry of Westerly.

The second day of work on Main street by the Westerly highway department in the rebuilding and resurfacing of that street showed perceptable gain in the removal of paving blocks. On Monday the blocks were removed from between the old electric car track rails and on Tuesday the pavers on the outside edge of the rails above the ties were taken up so that the rails and ties can be ripped out. The eight-inch gas pipe has been distributed so that when the ditch is opened by the workmen from the South County Public Service Co., there will be no delay. Police officials were kept busy all day Tuesday in directing all traffic by vehicles for the upper end of Main street to proceed over Union street to make one-way traffic up Main street.

Having been a resident of Pawcatuck for more than 40 years, the death of John J. Kennelly occurred there Tuesday morning, at his home, 71 Liberty street. His illness was of about three weeks' duration. Mr. Kennelly was born in West Medway, Mass., the son of Daniel and Julia (Madden) Kennelly. He came to Westerly about 45 years ago and since that time has resided in the same house. He has been employed at various manufacturing plants, including Arnold's mill in Stillmanville, the American Velvet mill at Stonington and the Pawcatuck Woolen mill at Potter Hill.

He was a member of the Holy Name society of St. Michael's church.

Surviving him are two sisters, Mrs Richard J. Butler, and Miss Alice DeS. Kennelly, both of this town.

With gas escaping from an alleged leaky gas stove and nearly dead from asphyxiation, George Cameron was found alone in his apartment, 23 Granite street Monday evening. The leaking gas was discovered by a young man who had occasion to visit the house late Monday and smelled the strong fumes. He notified Mrs. Antonio Sammatro, who lives in the upper flat at the same address. At 7:30 o'clock Medical Examiner Dr. Michael H. Scanlon was called to the house.

Dr. Scanlon Tuesday morning reported that he found Cameron nearly dead and it was only after working on him for a considerable period, he said, that the man was finally revived. Cameron spent the night at police headquarters and was able to go to his home Tuesday morning.

Edward H. Buffum and daughters, Misses Margaret S. and Helen L. Buffum arrived in Westerly from Tampa, Fla., Tuesday morning on the Everglades express. Mr. Buffum, whose health is not of the best, was taken to his home from the station in the ambulance of the Westerly sanitary corps.

Abel P. Randall of Hadlyme, who has visited relatives in Providence returned to Westerly, his former home Tuesday afternoon for a short visit with relatives before eturning home.

James H. Coleman, crossing tender at the Palmer street crossing of the New Haven railroad, was taken with a sudden attack of illness downtown Monday morning, which required confinement to his home.

Frank D. Friend of Pawcatuck who has been confined to his home by illness for the past week was able to be downtown Tuesday.

Miss F. W. Valentine, who arrived in Westerly from Washington, D. C. to visit Robert Valentine, left Tuesday morning for Boston.

Crist Ferraro, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at the Westerly hospital a short time ago has been able to be out for the past few days.

Judge William A. Wilcox of Pawcatuck returned Tuesday night from a business trip to New York.

A regular session of Stonington probate court for Pawcatuck was held at the probate court rooms in the Walton block by Judge Frank H. Hinckley of Mystic Tuesday afternoon.

Benjamin L. Peabody has entered the employ of the Hoxie Taxi service Westerly.

Clarence A. Vars, master of Franklin lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M. of Westerly, was in Providence Monday evening and attended a special communication of the grand lodge of Rhode Island, and witnessed exemplification of degree work.

In a head-on collision Tuesday night at 6:30 o'clock, on West Broad street, Pawcatuck, near the top of Moss hill the Ford sedan L882, Connecticut driven by Estella W. Bradley of 10 West Mystic avenue, Mystic, sustained broken headlights and front spring, while the new Ford coupe N3887 of R. E. Cushman, of New London, had broken headlights and radiator. The sedan was bound for Bradford and the coupe was en route from Bradford where Mr. Cushman is employed in the A. and P. store. No one was injured but broken glass littered the highway. The brakes of the sedan were set and the auto skidding for some distance down the hill so that the headlight as the Cushman machine turned toward the Crandall garage. Patrolman Aden R. Sheldon, of Pawcatuck, was called to investigate. The owners agreed to take adjust the damage.

The condemning of the state armory on Dixon street for social usages pending repairs, has followed the visit of Quartermaster-General Major Horace L. Manchester of Providence Monday. This will cause the annual ball of Haley P. Chase post, Veterans of Foreign Wars, to be held in the Westerly town hall, according to Captain Elvin B. Byers and Harry T. Power of the post committee and not in the state armory as has been the custom.

An expenditure of over $3000 will be made to put the building in a safe condition. On the last night of the automobile show in the armory a week ago last Saturday night heavy granite copings fell out from the main building and a quantity of brick and cement, on the Railroad avenue side. When Building Inspector George E. Egger visited the armory last Saturday he found, as did Captain John F. Datson of Battery E, 243d R. I. C. A. C. stationed in the armory, that coping stones had also pushed out on the wall of the main building on the east side above the main drill shed. As a result of Major Manchester's visit, William Rhodes will repair the stone and brick work and Fred Harvey the plumbing.

INTENTIONAL SECOND EXPOSURE

PERTINENT POINTS ON CORN BREEDING

By SILAS S. WHIPPLE, Corn Breeder

It was some time back in husking time that the Bulletin's Boss Farmer, who gives us every week such excellent ideas, was telling us that he was saving twin ears in order to breed a corn that produced twins as a rule. Corn breeding is a subject that has interested me for about 30 years. It seems to bore most people to listen to how it is done, but they are always ready to plant it if there is an extra dollar rolling their way thereby. So now that I have found some one that I feel reasonable sure would be interested let us exchange thoughts on the subject and see if we cannot learn something from each other.

I was wondering when I read it if our Boss Farmer had presence of mind to experiment and see if there was not a difference between the top ear and the bottom ear in that respect, or if he just threw them in the same pile.

Like a mariner we need to take observations to know just where we are. If you farmers had been here when my early corn was blooming I could have shown you 50 or more stalks that had set seven ears to a stalk and when it was ready to gather for use there was not two dozen stalks with twin ears in the whole plot. In every instance the top ear matured. The ground they grew in was an old strawberry bed highly fertilized the year before. In the spring I covered it out of sight with barn manure and plowed it in. Once I heard two men debating which was the best way to apply manure, before or after plowing, so I experimented and found that crops did the best when manured both top and bottom. Let's see. I had plowed it in and after it need harrowing. I marked it off, dropped all my big hand would hold of sulphate of ammonia and acid phosphate, about 50-50 mixture, about 15 inches apart in the furrow, and planted my corn, at a safe distance away from the fertilizer. When the corn was three inches high I gave it another handful, and then another each. I had given it five handfuls. I had planted 18 inches apart instead of 40 inches and it takes twice the feed, yes, a little better than twice, to fatten two pigs in a pen than it does one, hence the need. The corn was not bred for a multiple of ears so I got my number on more stalks.

A lady came to my farm after hot peppers and wanted to see where they grew. I took her through this corn field and when we got back she said to her husband, I just saw an ear of corn as big as my head."

Once I saved and planted top ears and bottom ears in two plots adjoining. Where I planted bottom ears more than half the stalks had twin ears. The top ear was no better than the ear. We need for something different than what is commonly produced and that is the bottom ear I have, for ears from cross planting and that is a reason why seed grown among our rocks is better than western grown seed where it is grown three four rows crossing each other to admit of cultivating.

Let us leave the twin ear subject and look for earliness. Most of us know that flint or state corn matures farther north than dent corn. We can observe the shock even when only just beyond the milk stage, while dent corn must stand in the field to get a good cure. Had it ever occurred to you that curing it from the ground maturity had something to do with the shortening of the season or making it earlier? If that is so, then we can hunt the best ear in the field and gather it at the right stage of maturity for earliness strip off the husks and hang it to dry for seed. I have proved it to my satisfaction.

I am breeding sweet corn, but what good is a sweet corn that is not sweet? In Denmark the roots that seed are grown from are all tested by the government in their laboratories for sweetness and no seed can be sold from roots that are not tested. I have sometimes thought of sending ears of corn there to be tested for where in all the length and breadth of our United States can be found a laboratory for that purpose? So without it I, a descendant of the nutmeg makers, am trying to find some other way. I fall back upon the sense of taste and to learn a means of knowing sweet by the eye. I plant the corn before I taste it. I take from an ear a kernel of corn and take a sharp knife and cut length ways of the kernel and another kernel from the same ear cut cross ways. The substance of the kernels has two colors, a white and a brown. One of those substances represents sugar the other starch. Different ears have kernels that have different proportions of these substances so that when one has learned it they can tell the sweet kernels. If any of our group of farmers have better or different ways "spit them out" so I can try them.

The Boss Farmer was sure "some one would be glad to get it." Right you are Boss Farmer. Those who do not care a fig how the job is done or how much time and study you have spent to produce it are ready to jump in and scoop for all they are worth when they see a dollar in it and if the seed of Farmer corn brings a higher price than other kinds the market will be flooded with Farmer" corn which when grown will resemble yours about as much as a guinea hen resembles a turkey. When you try to sell to the dealers in your home town some will make sport, and others will jockey your price telling what they can buy your corn for from other growers. You will find advs. in the New England Homestead, "Buy your Farmer Corn direct from the grower." when you have not sold them one kernel of seed to grow it from. If you do not like breeding corn do not breed it, especially for seed for after people have raised guinea hen corn they will say that your Farmer corn is no good.

WESTMINSTER

The events in the life of Christ culminating in His triumphal entry into Jerusalem, the events immediately following, and the significance of the day to us in the present, were considered in Westminster's morning worship.

For the first time in the present pastorate, the Easter service of Westminster and of the Plains is to be one of fellowship at the latter's church, the visiting church sharing in providing the lilies; the floral arrangements to be wholly in the hands of Fred G. Oats of Danielson, who has been spending the winter with the pastor, Rev. Mr. St. John at the Plains.

Deep mud has made travel nearly impossible for the past fortnight and it is expected that another week will make the roads comparatively dry and usable for Easter.

After spending several days as guests at the Gilbert Palmer place, after the destruction of their ancestral home by fire, March 21st, Bert Bennett and his sisters, are temporarily established in a part of the Oscar Usitala house, the next neighbor south of their place, therefore more convenient. They have received some greatly needed articles of clothing and other things to help tide them over their extremity and are doing bravely under their misfortunes. The insurance was promptly paid and as soon as possible Mr. Bennett will build a smaller house, or bungalow, on the old site. The assistance of neighbors and friends at the fire and since, the family describe as "wonderful" and they have deeply appreciated it all.

Among the articles rescued were three of their heirloom pewter pieces and a remarkably good picture of their burned home.

Oscar Usitala, who recently bought the town farm is to pay the purchase price $2,000 cash, April first, when it will pass into his possession.

Westminster Hill is to have a similar program later in April. Both schools will plan to aid the new town library as a result of this work. Westminster Hill hopes also to buy frames for the posters earning second prize and honorable mention in the Chelsea bank contest recently, so the posters may be permanently kept in the school room, with other trophies of various kinds.

Miss Gold is at her Hartford home for the vacation.

Howard A. Rix recently treated himself to a short vacation, to see relatives and friends in Salem, and to be present at the golden anniversary of former neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rogers. Mr. Rix and Mrs. Rogers were schoolmates years ago when Henry Rogers was their teacher, and Mr. Rix, was a guest at their silver wedding. Leaving Westminster Saturday he went to New London and Sunday visited friends and relatives at Chesterfield, East Lyme and Noank Lyme, at the last named place finding his sister much better after a serious illness. Beside seeing many friends at the Rogers anniversary Monday, Mr Rix visited two daughters, Mrs. Charles Malone, wife Representative Malone and Miss Alice Rix. As the father's coming was to be a surprise, Miss Alice chose today to drive up to her father's place here on a matter of business. Leaving here that he had gone to Salem she hurried home, and arrived in time to welcome her father. Mr. Rix returned to Westminster Tuesday.

TOOTHACHE FAVORS NORWICH MAN, WHO GETS INTO NEW LONDON COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 30. — The police are asking, "What is the magnet that attracts autoists to the east side of Bank street to there park their cars?" This morning just 19 violators of the parking ordinances were in the police court, and most of them were for parking their automobiles on the water side of Bank street. If the offenses had been committed in pre-prohibition days there might be some reason for the parking attributed to the offenders. It is possible that the offenders stopped to wind their watches or to tie their shoes, but they did not make that defense when they were put to plea in court this morning. They generally admitted that they were offenders against the regulations made by the city council to avert the blocking of traffic on that street. Offenders other than those who tarried too long on Bank street were many who stopped on State street and on the north side of Church street. One fellow who parked on State street declared that he went into a dentist's office to have an ulcerated tooth treated and was delayed longer than he anticipated. Former State Senator Fred A. Johnson, of Montville, was a violator of the ordinance, stopping as long as he desired to on State street. He was very frank about it and declared that any excuse he might make would not bring him immunity from a fine so he said he would make no excuse. A fine of $5 was attached to him. He was told that he had before offended similarly and was reminded that he should not have offended yesterday.

Edward L. Hall of Norwich was the offender who had the ulcerated tooth and had his car tagged because he tarried more than 30 minutes at the curbing on Main street, where the highway is narrow. Judge Prince evidently had sympathy with a fellow who had an ulcerated tooth and was having it treated, so he suspended judgment in the Hall case.

Lawrence B. McEwen parked his car more than a foot away from the curbing. He might have escaped a penalty for that offense, if he had not been an offender once before this session. He was told to pay a fine of $5 also.

John Lersky parked his car on the north side of Church street right in front of a sign that forbade that sort of stopping. He said he didn't see the sign, but the court realized that he should have seen it and would have known that he was an offender had he given even casual heed to where he was leaving his car. He drew a fine of $5.

Ben Kaplan, a hardware dealer, parked his car on Church street also. He said he did not realize that he was offending. Judgment was suspended in his case.

Adam Lapowski got over here from Groton and he, too, was found with his car parked on Church street. He got away without paying a fine, for he doesn't come to New London often enough to be familiar with the parking laws. His experience today is expected to be a lesson to him for the future.

Nedd Joseph Lester allowed his car to remain much more than an hour on the south side of State street. He was warned a week ago that he would be arrested if he offended again, but that didn't service to stop him, so he was fined $5. That will have an effect that warning did not have.

James E. Brown and Frank B. Rose of Waterford and Norman Church, of Westerly all tarried too long on Bank street and their cars were tagged They did not suffer any penalty, however, for they offered excuses the court regarded as reasonable.

James La Salle had also been warned against parking on Bank street, but he didn't heed the warning, so he was penalized to the extent of $5.

Mansur J. Sabagh, Walter N. Harris and Isadore Levine all failed to notice the passing of time and so remained long with their cars parked on Bank street. Sabagh was moving ladders that his painters might work in the Capitol theatre and was so busy he failed to realize anything outside. The others were also engaged in chatting as they allowed time to flit by unnoticed. Melville Mason, of Mantic, was in the same fix. All escaped with a suspension of judgment. This was "auto" day in the police court.

Tom Connolly, a straggler, has been coming to New London many years and seldom has he appeared when he did not show up in the police court. Today he was there with his chum, Tim Kenney, who came to town with Tom on the strength of information they claimed to have received to the effect that there was an abundance of employment at Fishers Island and that the wage was attractive. The pair talked things over and occasionally hoisted in a drink, so that late in the day they were in a mix-up on State street. Officer Opperman stopped their encounter by arresting the pair. They were charged with intoxication when in the police court, Connolly, because he was a familiar visitor to court was sent to jail for a 30 day stay and was ordered to pay costs that will detain him at work for the county ten days more. Kenney was fined $10. His funds were very scant, so he went to jail for a stay of three weeks.

CHINESE PLACES YIELD DOPE— OFFENDERS TAKEN TO NORWICH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 30.—Narcotic Agents Flynn, Collins and Kenedick, of Providence, armed with search warrants, arrived in New London from Providence last night and between 1 and 2 o'clock this morning raided the Chinese coffee house, 121 Golden street, and the residence of Willie Mar, 206 Main street. Evidences of the violation of the law were found and a quantity of opium and smoking outfits were seized. The several men found in the places were arrested. This forenoon they were taken to Norwich where they were presented before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson and held in bail of $1,000 each, for trial before the next term of the United States district court, on charges of violation of the narcotic act.

The narcotic squad arrived in New London shortly after 10 o'clock and shortly after 1 o'clock they secured the services of the police to assist them in making the raids. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolmen William Manice, Augustus Ray, John Sullivan and William Riordan, were assigned to assist the federal officers County Detective William Lewis and Captain Charles Kelley, and Sergeant David Marks of the force of special agents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, also participated in the two raids. At the two places visited, Lee Yuen, of the firm of Soon, Shink and Yuen, proprietors of the coffee house; Oik Lenng, Louis Lung, Lee Quong, Yen On and Robert Lee, were found and taken into custody. Both places have been raided before by narcotic agents. It is understood that the agents recently received information that opium was being used by the Chinese in both the coffee house and the Main street residence and with this information federal warrants were issued. The raiders were possessed of three warrants, two of them being for the coffee house, for the Chinese use both a store and a dwelling apartment located above the store.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

Harry Carey in The Prairie Pirate heads the double feature bill at the Breed theater today and tomorrow. The Prairie Pirate, Hunt Stromberg's latest production is an adaptation from the Liberty Magazine story, The Yellow Seal, by W. C. Tuttle. Directed by Edmund Mortimer, under the personal supervision of Hunt Stromberg and released through Producers Distributing Corporation, the cast includes such screen favorites as Tribly Clark, Robert Edeson, Lloyd Whitlock, Fred Kohler, Jean Dumas and Tote Ducrow.

Thank You is the title of the second feature. This William Fox picturization of the John Golden stage play is presented by an all-star cast that seldom has been equalled for quality in the history of pictures. Heading the layers are George O'Brien, Jacqueline Logan and Alec B. Francis while the supporting members include J. Farrell MacDonald, George Fawcett, James Neill, William Courtright, Marion Harlan, Vivian Ogden, Edith Bostwick and Frankie Bailey. John Ford remembered chiefly for his wonderful direction of The Iron Horse, also wielded the megaphone in Thank You

The photodrama deals with the troubles and persecutions visited upon a small-town minister whose salary is woefully inadequate to his daily needs.

The Fox news complete this big double bill for today and tomorrow.

Broadway Theater

A sparkling comedy with a serious background, by the author of Silence and Badges, and numerous other plays, some of very recent reputation, Cheating Husbands being among these. It is regarded as a gem of modern stage effort. Max Marcin is a master of stage conversation and in this play there is a succession of bright and striking comments on modern social ethics which keep an audience in an uproar of delight. It is a story dealing with a young married couple and their immediate friends and neighbors The wife is pretty and devoted, but just a little too old fashioned to suit her jazz loving hubby. It is her reformation in this regard which brings developments of such a fast and furious nature and contains surprises as to be almost unimaginable even in these hectic days of modern gliding.

It is presented by the Myrkle-Harder Co. at the Broadway theater, tonight and Thursday matinee.

Tickets can be reserved for any evening performance by calling 1020 or coming in person at box office.

Palace Theatre

When a man can no longer ride he is dead.

In proof of this ancient Navajo belief thirty Indians, each more than 70, and two who have passed 90, rode with 2,000 younger red men in fierce battle charges from early morning until the afternoon light failed, day in and day out, for scenes in "The Vanishing American." The filming of this Zane Grey story took a company of 500 whites from Hollywood to the Navajo reservation in northern Arizona.

One of the riders was Bit-sie-sa-ch, "White Hair," 92, one of the Navajo chieftains who fought against Kit Carson when the famous Indian agent, at the head of an American army rabble, conquered the Navajos in 1863.

Richard Dix is the Indian hero of "The Vanishing American." Lois Wilson, Noah Beery and Malcolm McGregor also are featured in the picture, which will be shown at the Palace theatre on Sunday.

POETRY

Pussy Willows

In the marshes and the meadows
Where the snow is disappearing;
On the brown stems of the willows
Bulgy buds are now appearing.
For they hear the wee brooks singing,
See the robins northward winging,
Feels the warmth the South Wind's bringing
And they know it's time for spring!

Underneath their winter blankets
All the growing things have slumbered,
All the brooks, and shrubs, and grasses,
And the Flower Folk unnumbered.
Now the time is past for sleeping,
Pussy Willow buds are peeping,
From brown sleeping-robes they're creeping
At the first warm call of Spring!

Still the air is somewhat chilly,
So the Pussy Willow mother
Wraps a tiny furry blanket
'Round each little pussy brother;
Then the catkins come out sunning,
'Round the willow branches running,
In gray jackets soft and cunning,
And we know it's really Spring!
—Shirley R. Williams in Indianapolis News.

Country Boy

Before the first cock ever crowed aloud
Then he was up to greet the early day,
Praising the glow white passing of a cloud.
And valleys standing in a mist of grey.
Here was the thing to cherish and adore;
The world held in a few small acres there.
A field to walk through and beyond, a door—
Leading to moonlight by a winding stair.

O Country, here is your lover, for he knows
How soft the grass is and how kind the breeze,
And how the rabbits track across the snows,
And how the March sap hurries through the trees.
Here is a lad who knows what sweet fields are,
The warmth of night, the first flash of a star
—Harold Vinal in The Christian Science Monitor.

STOCK PRICES FLUCTUATED

NEW YORK, March 30—(AP)—Stock prices started upward at a brisk pace soon after the opening of today's market and then crashed with startling suddenness when another selling movement engulfed the general list, sweeping nearly 300 issues to new low levels for the year. Both the rail and industrial averages were forced into very low grounds. Trading was in enormous volume, the day's sales totaling 3,317,700 shares, making the third time this year that the three million share mark had been crossed.

The decline was not associated with anything in the day's news, although production in copper prices undoubtedly stimulated the selling of those issues. The fresh outpouring of stocks came, however, accompanied by the usual unfavorable rumors regarding the financial stability of individuals and firms, but they looked confirmation and little attention was paid to responsible banking quarters.

A morning rebound had inspired hope in some quarters that powerful interests, who apparently had been allowing the market to run its course through three successive days of declining prices, finally had come to the support of high grade investment stocks. Early gains ran from to nearly 5 points in scores of issues with short covering operations making much of the buying power. Large blocks of stocks were being absorbed on the rally but they were not steadily absorbed when bear sellers launched a savage attack on railroad shares, which previously had stood up with reluctance to the pressure. One after another of high grade rails cracked under strain, and this started a fresh movement in the industrial list, the effects of which also had been well in recent decline, being hammered unmercifully.

This gave way when renewed liquidation and bear selling developed in earnest, which collapsed 7 1-4 points and high rallied a point. General Motors, which had touched 116 in early trading, sagged to 113 and then mounted to 115 1-8. It was up 1 1-8 on the day.

Trucks touched a new low at 1-2. Chrysler at 28 1-2, Dodge A at 29 3-4, Packard at 32 Pierce Arrow at 22 and White at 24, but several made partial recovery from the low levels.

Among the scores of industrials to make new ground were U. S. Cast common at 147 5-9 Allied Chemical at 196; American Can at 35 American Smelting at 112 1-8, Tobacco at 111 1-2; Bethlehem Steel at 54, S. S. Kresge at 42 Pacific Oil at 51 7-8; Pullman at Radio Corporation at 52, Sinclair at 19 7-8, United Drug at 134, Industrial Alcohol at 45 3-8, Rubber, at 61, Western Union and Woolworth at 142.

The weakness of Chesapeake and Ohio broke over 7 points to announcement that the commerce commission had had an application for a $10,000,000 issue to finance new improvements with the suggestion that a bond instead, featured the Seaboard Coast Line dropped points to 181 1-2; a new low Delaware and Hudson, Lackawanna, New York Central, St. Louis Southwestern, Southern Railway, Missouri Pacific preferred, Northern Western, Erie second preferred, Pittsburgh and West Virginia and the many other issues in the declines of 3 to 10 points.

Forty-three applications were received by the Taftville Rod and Gun club Monday evening, at a meeting at St. Louis hall on Dion street. Through the efforts of Leo LePage, County Game Warden Robert W. Chappell of New London was the speaker of the evening. He gave a very interesting talk on hunting and fishing, stating that he believed in the existence of clubs of this kind, and offering to assist the local men in any way that he can. He advised the club to make application at once for trout fingerlings, also to have their brooks and streams ready, and to take thought to obtaining pheasants for the coming season. The committee appointed to take this matter up with the property authorities is Frederick Dugas, chairman; Edward Kelley, Victor Fontbine, Edward Dupuis, Alfred Benoit and A. Paul. A drive for new members is now going on, and Mr. Dugas expressed the wish that every sportsman in this locality would cooperate in the campaign. A prize is to be given to the member obtaining the largest number of applications. The next meeting is to be held on May 1st and it is hoped to have a supper at that time.

HOLY WEEK SPEAKER ON "THE DEMOCRATIC GOD"

A larger congregation than on the first day was at the Palace theater on Tuesday for the noon service conducted by the Protestant churches in the observance of holy week.

Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown presided and the subject for the address by Rev. Charles A. Spalding of New London, who is the speaker for the series of meetings, was "The Democratic God."

In part the speaker said:

Some think that democracy carries human thought away out beyond all conceptions of the God of the Bible; that he can never put on the garments of freedom and fraternity. It has been said that democracy is itself a religion and it has been recommended for "those who can no longer endure the limitations of the old thoughts of God."

But this is all amiss. Democracy does not carry us out beyond the God of the Bible. He has been out there a long while waiting for us to catch up. He Himself is the source of all true democracy and if He wonder, He must wonder that we are slow to see the implications of his own nature leading us into the great world of truth that we call "democracy."

Ancient ideas of God have pictured Him very like an oriental despot. His saints have been conceived after the analogy of the suppliant, truckling courtiers of such a monarch. It is a picture of a monarch who is bound by no law but his own will. It was a gross and utterly barbaric conception of freedom. It is a long way from this misconception to the idea that "Obedience to law is liberty" and the only liberty.

God was never such a monarch. Oriental monarchs took much delight in the prostration and abasement of their subjects. This bit of pageantry, heavy with the decay of a useless past, has often been attributed to God. But God never desired that men should serve Him so much as He desired to serve men in lifting them up to appreciation and fellowship with Himself. He has wished to draw out and develop the strength and latent goodness in man and make him a being of power and glory, fit for eternal fellowship with Himself.

THREE SUITS BROUGHT ON NOTES AND BILLS

Three suits in which the aggregate damages claimed are $2,185.25 have been brought in the common pleas court against Charles L. Wilson of New London. They are for accounts and notes alleged to be due and unpaid.

One suit is brought by the Thames Lumber Co., of New London for $447.15 alleged to be due on Feb. 23, 1926 and which is claimed to be unpaid.

A second suit is brought by the Capitol City Glass Co., of Hartford, for a note alleged to have been given the plaintiff by the defendant on June 26, 1925, for $238.20, payable 30 days from date. It is alleged that this is due and unpaid.

The Metropolitan Lumber Co., of Newark, N. J., brings the third suit, alleging that on Aug. 28, 1925, the defendant made and delivered to the Level Lumber Co., of New York, a note for $583 and that the note which is wholly unpaid, was endorsed over to the plaintiff.

It is further alleged by the plaintiff that on Dec. 28, 1925, the defendant gave another note for $589.84 to the Level Lumber Co., and that this note also unpaid, was endorsed over to the plaintiff, who claims $1,500 damages.

SUES TO SECURE REAL ESTATE CONVEYANCE

A decree of conveyance or title otherwise vested in the plaintiff is sought in a $1,500 damage suit brought by Phillip Sann against Harry Shuman, alias Harry Shumacker, both of New London in a suit brought in the superior court which is returnable in April.

According to the complaint, on Oct 14, 1923, the plaintiff and defendant entered into an agreement, whereby the plaintiff was to purchase the interest of the defendant in a two-story house at 41 Spring street for $2,000. It is alleged that the plaintiff paid $100 down and on the same day the defendant owned an undivided half interest in the property.

It is further alleged that in a reasonable length of time, the plaintiff tendered the defendant $1,900 and the latter denied him a conveyance of the house and that the plaintiff is still ready, able and willing to purchase the same.

SAYS TOO MUCH SPECULATION IN COMPENSATION FINDING

In a decision filed with the clerk of the superior court at Middletown, Judge John W. Banks of the superior court reverses the finding and award made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue of this city on the workmen's compensation claim of Mrs. Louise A. Dumeer for the death of her husband, who was in the employ of the Middletown Gas Light Co.

In making the decision, Judge Banks concludes as follows, after reviewing the findings of the commissioner:

"It seems to me that the evidence before the commissioner furnishes no more substantial foundation for his finding as to the cause of Dumeer's death than bald speculation and conjecture. The plaintiff was bound by her evidence, to remove the cause of death from the realm of speculation and to establish facts affording logical basis for the inferences which she claims."

Dumeer, it will be remembered, was employed in the boiler room of the Gas Light Co. He worked on a very hot day early in June of last year and at the close he went home. The next day he left his home to go to work, but did not appear at the plant. His dead body was found in the river three days later.

Mrs. Dumeer made application for compensation, claiming her husband suffered through his work on a hot day and that it affected his mind to a degree that he fell into the river. There was no evidence to show how this happened. He was seen going to work and was traced up to a certain point. Then he disappeared. Nothing was known of him until his body was taken from the river.

Commissioner Donohue gave a hearing in which several witnesses were examined, including those who worked with Dumeer the last day he was at the company's plant. After consideration the commissioner awarded compensation to the widow at the rate of half his wages for a period of 312 weeks, with other allowances provided by law.

The case raises an unusual point in interpreting the law and it is expected that the decision of Judge Banks will invite an appeal to the supreme court.

MOTORCYCLE RIDER SUES DRIVER OF AUTOMOBILE

Damages in the amount of $10,000 are claimed by John Lietowsky, Jr., a minor, of New London against Matthew O'Brien of Groton in a suit brought in the superior court which is returnable on the first Tuesday in April.

According to the allegations in the suit, brought though John Lietowsky, the plaintiff on Nov. 1, 1925 was riding on a motorcycle owned and driven by Lewis Oliver, on the Eastern Point road, Groton. It is then that at about 5 p. m., the defendant, driving an automobile in the opposite direction, caused the plaintiff to be thrown off of the motorcycle, when he made a left turn without warning in an attempt to turn into an intersecting street, the plaintiff being thrown violently to the road, resulting in him sustaining a broken leg, sprained and bruised left arm and wrist, injuries to the head and back.

It is further alleged that the defendant was driving at an excessive rate of speed and turned from the right to the left in his attempt to turn into the intersecting street, without giving warning or signal. The plaintiff claims to have expended large sums of money for medical treatment and nursing and claims to be permanently injured.

COLLECTION AGENCY BRINGS SUIT FOR SERVICES

Rockwell & Co., of New London is made defendant in a civil action brought by A. L. Wesson of Boston, according to papers served on the defendant company by Deputy Sheriff J. H. Tubbs and returnable the first Tuesday in April in the court of common pleas. Attorney H. H. Pettis of this city represents the plaintiff.

It is alleged in the complaint that on Nov. 5, 1924, the plaintiff and defendant entered into a written contract, whereby the defendant company agreed to give the plaintiff $144 and the plaintiff agreed to give the defendant the use and benefits of its collection system. The complaint alleges there is money due the plaintiff for this service.

SAY THEY ARE READY TO SHOOT APE-MAN

Charges that the antics of an "ape-man" which has aroused curiosity in the town of Stonington are an attempt to drive them from their farm have been made by Muriel Miner, 19, and her sister, Mildred, 16, who inherited an interest in the property from their father, Horace D. Miner, who died three weeks ago.

Their brother, Latham Miner, 21, executor of the estate, backed the girls in their statement. The girls have been living in the family farm house alone since their father's death, their mother having died two years ago. The brother takes care of another part of the 2,000 acre farm, living in a house about a mile away.

The "ape man" who has been seen four times near the Miner farm house, they describe as a man dressed in skins. He appeared only at a distance, they said, and fled at the approach of one of the sisters. Other farmers in the township claim to have seen the creature.

The Miners ascribe its activities to a plot to drive them from the farm in order that it may be purchased at a low price. They declare it is one of the most valuable in this part of the state and that if the girls are driven off, the family would not be able to care for the place. This opinion is shared by neighbors, while others either ascribe it to imagination or to a demented person.

There are nine co-heirs to the Miner estate.

The sisters threaten to shoot the "ape-man" on sight, and declare that they will not be driven from the property.

OBSERVE ANNUAL CELEBRATION OF PASSOVER SEASON

The annual celebration of Passover observed by Jews all over the world in memory of their liberation from the Egyptian tyranny, began at sundown Monday in synagogues and homes. During this period Jews will refrain from eating leavened bread which will be replaced by unleavened bread known as Matzoths and characterized as the "bread of affliction." This bread is referred to in the Bible as the bread that was unleavened because of the Jews' hurried departure from Egypt, the land of oppression.

Passover is an historical holiday which is featured by prayers of Thanksgiving for the safe emigration of the Jews from Egypt. The orthodox celebrate eight days and the reformed seven days.

SUIT IN MONTVILLE FOR COST OF PUMP FOR WELL

Two Montville people, Anistrari Zagorski and Stafangia Zagorski, have brought suit against another Montville resident, Felike Gutkoski for damages of $175 in a suit brought in the common pleas court.

According to the allegations, the plaintiff owned land with a building thereon in Uncasville and the defendant between Oct. 18, 1924 and May, 1925, drew water from a well situated on this land, securing the water by means of a hand-drawn bucket. In May, 1925, the defendant desiring a more convenient means of getting water, requested the plaintiffs to have a hand pump put on the well and agreed to share the costs in so doing.

It is alleged that the plaintiffs had the work done at a cost of $210 and that the defendant has not paid his proportionate share as agreed.

SENTENCE IN NEW YORK FOR MRS. C. A. RUICKHOLDT

A sentence of from 30 days to 2 1-2 years on Welfare island, New York, was given to Mrs. Charles A. Ruickholdt in New York Monday when she prevailed upon Judge Koenig to rescind sentence imposed last week of 2 1-2 years at Auburn prison for passing a worthless check. The parole board will determine the length of sentence she will serve.

Mrs. Ruickholdt was formerly a resident of Waterford, this state, her maiden name being Champion.

She had only recently completed a prison sentence at Auburn, where she said the officials had placed so much confidence in her that she was ashamed to go back there again.

Mrs. Ruickholdt, who is the wife of a New Haven physician, first fell into the toils of the law when she represented herself as a prominent New London woman and gave a large order for jewelry at a New London store on the represented woman's name. She ordered the jewelry sent to New York where she was arrested when the parcel containing a piece of coal was received by her from the jewelry store.

At that time she made a unique defense in claiming that she was under the influence of some hypnotic person. For the offense she was sentenced to Auburn prison where she served two years.

Her husband, who claims that she wrecked his life financially, refused to have anything to do with her and when she left Auburn she was alone in the world. A month ago she was apprehended in an attempt to pass a worthless check for $853 in a New York store. She confessed to the crime but defended her action by saying: "The devil led me by the hand."

She said she tried hard to "go straight" after being released from Auburn but that her husband refused to acknowledge her and that she always lost her job when her employers found out her past.

WILLIAM HARDER GREETS OLD FRIENDS IN NORWICH

William Harder, executive head and owner of the Myrkle-Harder company coming to the Broadway theatre this entire week arrived in the city Tuesday. He is here to personally supervise the work of his company. For the past twenty years, Mr. Harder has been touring the country either actively in charge of the company or happening in to see that the standards established at the beginning of the season are being rigidly adhered to.

There is, perhaps, no more picturesque figure in our theatre world today than Mr. Harder. Harder is a man of six feet, two and a half inches in height, weight two hundred and thirty pounds, and is an athlete in stature. He strikes one at once as being a cosmopolitan, and his cordial manner and strong handclasp add a deeper impression of straightforwardness that suggests the man of the middle west. It was not a surprise to learn that Mr. Harder was born in Michigan and comes of a family of theatrical and hotel men.

Mr. Harder, speaking of business conditions throughout the country, said in part:

"I am tremendously impressed with the spirit of business activity and prosperity I encounter in these cities I am visiting. The talk of hard times would seem to be a myth. Our company is doing a tremendous business everywhere, and it seems to me that every city is fairly booming."

Mr. Harder expressed pleasure at being in Norwich once more and said that he was happy to recognize many familiar faces. It has been more than four years since he was here last.

NO SOLACE FOR TOPERS IN 3.75 PER CENT MALT TONIC

Prohibition Bureau Chemist Predicts That "If a Fellow Gets an Edge From This Malt He Will Be so Full of Malt Sugar That He Will Pop"—General Andrews Declares That if the Public Attempts to Use It as a Beverage It Would Be Withdrawn Instantly From the Market.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—(AP)—Calm in the face of the flurry caused by the word that 3.75 per cent malt tonic would be on sale shortly, prohibition officials today assured drys, disturbed by the announcement that they need fear no breakdown in enforcement, and cautioned the drinking population not to regard the extract as a beverage.

By no stretch of the imagination can the product be regarded as "beer", said Assistant Secretary Andrews, in charge of prohibition, adding that its sale was "practicable and reasonable."

If the public attempts to use the tonic as "beer", General Andrews said it would be withdrawn instantly from the market. He explained that the manufacturers of the extract, which will contain 25 per cent colids, had will contain 25 per cent solids, had distribution and that the policy of issuing permits had been doped "after thorough consideration of the question."

Solicitor Britt of the internal revenus bureau took a hand in the discussion by expressing the opinion that states could prohibit sale of the tonic if they so desired, although it was pointed out that grocery stores generally have on hand products containing more alcohol, which like the tonic, are unfit for beverage purposes.

Stressing the point that the tonic won't be fit to drink, J. H. Doren, prohibition bureau chemist, said that a man by consuming one quart of it "probably will get the equivalent reaction one stiff drink of liquor gives.

"If a fellow gets an edge from this malt," he predicted, "he will be so full of malt sugar he will pop. Try and trim down this syrup with water and you will dilute it to the point where it is no good."

If alcohol were mixed with it, he added, it might be drinkable, pointing out that this could be done with near beer.

"At the capitol there was another lull today so far as prohibition is concerned. It didn't figure in house or senate debate, although Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, offered an amendment to his beer bill making state having enforcement laws exempt from its provisions, and slightly modified his bill removing the restriction on prescription whiskey.

NO RIGHT TO SEIZE U. S. SHIP BEYOND 12 MILE LIMIT

BOSTON, March 31—(AP)—The American rum ships will be safer from coast guard seizure than British was the interpretation placed tonight by United States officials on a ruling of Judge E. H. Brewster in the U. S. district court.

Judge Brewster ruled that the coast guard has no right to seize an American vessel that is more than 12 miles off shore.

The ruling it was pointed out, will mean that any American rum boat is safe 12 miles out, but that under the terms of the liquor treaty with England any British liquor carrier may be seized at any distance from shore provided she is within one hour's sail of the coast.

To be absolutely immune from seizure British vessels have been anchored 40 miles or more off shore, or nearly 30 miles further out than their American trade rivals will be able to anchor safely.

Judge Brewster's ruling was made on the case of Abel Doucette and Charles R. Bentley of Gloucester, whose rum laden motor boat was seized 20 miles off the north shore last January.

FAVORABLE FOR "DRY" REFERENDUM IN N. Y. STATE

ALBANY, N. Y., March 31—(AP)—Opportunity for the people of New York state to pass upon proposed modification of the Volstead act moved a step nearer today when the senate judiciary committee voted ten to eight to report favorably the Karle resolution calling for a referendum on the question. Five republicans joined with the five democratic members of the committee in voting for the measure, thus assuring passage by the senate when the proposal comes up for final action.

The question which would be asked of the voters at the referendum election, set in the resolution for June 8, is as follows:

"Should the congress of the United States modify the federal act to enforce the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution of the United States, so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective states?"

SUGGESTS REFERENDUM IN NEW JERSEY ON PROHIBITION

TRENTON, N. J., March 31—(AP)—Governor A. Harry Moore in a special message to the legislature today suggested both the house and senate go on record as favoring modification of the present dry law. Such a resolution would be in response to public sentiment throughout the country, he said.

STATEMENT OF OPERATIONS OF THE NEW HAVEN ROAD

NEWYORK, March 31—(AP)—A statement of operations of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad company for 1925, made public today, shows, net income of $7,418,252, an increase of $4,419,901 over the year, before, and equivalent to $4.72 a share on the stock outstanding.

Net railway operating income amounted to $23,324,795 which was 4.74 per cent., of the property investment on the tentative valuation basis, compared with 4.09 per cent., in 1924, 3.89 per cent. in 1923; 3.75 per cent. in 1922 and .63 per cent. in 1921.

"This improvement is encouraging," said President E. J. Pearson, "but the aggregate earnings for these five years are approximately $73,700,000 short of the 5 3-4 per cent. fixed by the interstate commerce commission as a fair return on railroad property used in the service of transportation. While the betterment in earnings is gratifying, to say that the present situation is satisfactory because of improvement over a previous ruinous period, would be misleading. If your company is permitted to earn a fair return on its reasonable property value, it will have, after the payment of all fixed charges, a substantial net income."

Freight revenues increased $4,233,094 and passenger revenues $65,126. Total income was $30,311,893, a gain of $4,-155,395.

R. I. SENATE CORRECTS DIVORCE PROCEDURE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 31—(AP)—The Rhode Island senate today passed the measure designed to correct the present divorce procedure which permitted the Horton Dougherty "divorce mill" to secure some 100 fraudulent divorce decrees, according to the attorney general, before the practice was detected. The bill now goes to the house. It would prevent the present practice of taking divorce testimony on depositions except in special cases and would require that testimony be given by witnesses in open court.

LIQUOR HAS SLIPPED PAST PATROL VESSELS TO LAND

BOTON, March 31—(AP)—Reports from coast guard headquarters here today indicated that a large stock of liquor has been accumulated in New England waters for the Easter trade, and that some of it has slipped past the cordon of patrol vessels to land.

Five British schooners were reported today on the rum row off Cape Ann. They were the Fishborn, formerly the Canadia, built several years ago as a contender for the international fishermen's cup, the I'm Alone, the George and Earl, the Beatrice and the Alcala. At another station in Massachusetts Bay the Ocean Maid and the Mary J. The cargoes of these vessels, coastguardsmen said, consisted of Scotch whiskey, champagne and alcohol.

The coastguard cutters Ossipee and Red Wing, and the 100-foot patrol boat, Dexter, were watching the row, while a fleet of 75-foot patrol boats patrolled the coast between Cape Ann and Cape Cod. A swarm of 36-foot picket boats did duty in the harbor. As a result of the close patrol, it was said alcohol which was sold at $1.50 a gallon overside, was quoted at $8 on shore and at from $12 to $15 retail.

Selling Movement In Stocks Checked

Recovery of Prices Yesterday Exceeded Any Single Day's Decline.

NEW YORK, March 31.—(By The "silent panic" in the stock market, as the recent drastic reaction has been widely characterized in Wall street, is over, at least temporarily. Bear traders, flushed with success at their ability to set in motion a liquidating movement which has wiped out billions of dollars in the quoted values of listed securities, made a last desperate effort to keep it going today by a salvage selling onslaught on the railroad equipment shares, but the market weathered the storm, and prices of all classes of stocks closed 1 to 15 points higher on the day.

Judged by the averages, the recovery was even more impressive and extensive than any single day's decline the industrials rebounding more than 4 points and the rails almost 3 1-2 points. Total sales were calculated by Associated Press tabulators at 2,576,200 shares as compared with 3,317,700 yesterday, and 3,785,700 in the record breaking session on March 3.

While strong banking support was apparent from the opening of the market, particularly for some of the high grade railroad and industrial issues which apparently had been depressed well below their intrinic worth, the recovery was generally segarded as a correction of an obviously oversold condition.

Wall street breathed a sigh of relief when it became apparent that the selling movement had been checked. So widespread had been the rumors that some of the large brokerage and banking firms were in distress that several brokers volnteered to help one of the largest firms on the street, which is reported to have sold $150,000,000 in securities, only to learn that this institution was loaning millions of dollars in the call money market, some of it to their own firms. Neither could confirmation be obtained of reports that several individuals had been "taken over" by the banks, although in a reaction such as the market has had it would not be unusual for wealthy men, whose fortune was tied up largely in the securities of their own companies, to obtain temporary assistance.

Announcement of new stock offerings, which had been withheld during the severe decline, was accepted in many quarters as an indication that bankers believed the worst was over."

The recovery in prices today has a favorable quota of trade news as a background. One of the most encouraging items was the suggestion in the weekly steel trade reviews that there had been no widespread cancellation of orders such as followed market breaks in the past. Motor car companies, whose stocks have borne the brunt of much of the selling, rushed into print with reports of record production and sales. Oil companies also provided a number of unusually favorable earnings reports.

The following table illustrates the extent of the recovery in a dozen of the leading issues:

	Yesterday's Low	Today's Close
Industrials.
U. S. Steel common	117⅝	121
Hudson Motors	69	77¼
American Smelting	112½	117½
General Electric	289	305⅜
Woolworth	142	154⅜
Allied Chemical	106	114⅜
Railroads.
Atlantic Coast Line	181½	192
Chesapeake & Ohio	125	130
New York Central	117	121
Delaware & Hudson	150¼	156⅝
Southern Railway	103⅝	110¼
Wabash	33⅞	37½

NO RECORD OF STRIKE LEADER IN WAR SERVICE

PASSAIC, N. J., March 31.—(AP)—Activities of the striking textile workers today were confined to morning picket lines at all mills and a series of indoor mass meetings at which the enthusiasm and attendance was diminished by a downpour of rain.

First hand investigation of the strike was begun here by Senator Edwards, democrat, whose report will be made to the senate manufacturers committee, which has before it a resolution by Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, proposing a senate probe of the disturbance.

Albert Weisbord, strike leader, was confronted today with a letter from the war department showing there was no record of his being in the military service of this country during the World war, Weisbord claimed that he "wore the uniform at Camp Devens where I was a member of the reserve officers training corps."

Remedies Suggested In Coal Legislation

Representative Treadway Criticized Policies of the State of Pennsylvania.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—(AP)—Coal legislation continued to occupy the attention of the house commerce committee today with Representatives Treadway, republican, Massachusetts, and Jacobstein, democrat, New York, offering suggestions for remedies.

The Massachusetts member criticized the policies of the state of Pennsylvania, contending they tend to keep the price of anthracite up and he espoused legislation "just as far in the control of the industry as is constitutionally possible." Jacobstein advocated government regulation of anthracite mining with a declaration by congress that the coal industry comes under the head of public utilities and the establishment of an independent coal bureau to gather essential facts.

With reference to the Pennsylvania policies, Mr. Treadway said: "There are three factors adding materially to the price, the license law of the state, the so-called anthracite tax and the royalties. They come within the range as to whether or not the federal government can use any other course than that of moral suasion. All three of these factors ought to be publicly and continuously condemned, until such time as the authorities within that state are forced to make correction."

ATTACKS ON PREMIER OF ITALY IN THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, March 31.—(AP)—Vigorous attacks on Premier Mussolini marked senate debate today on the Italian debt settlement.

Senator Harison, democrat, Mississippi, declared the Italian premier threatened "the peace of the whole world" and that if this country assisted Italy in obtaining more loans the premier would make war on Germany and other European countries.

"He talks fight, he dreams fight, he thinks fight, he makes war," shouted the Mississippi senator.

"He is made for armaments. He wants to see Rome again sitting on its seven hills."

Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, also expressed the opinion that if the Italian premier were given more money "he probably will plunge Europe into another war."

Cancellation of debts also figured in the senate discussion, Chairman Borah, of the foreign relations committee declaring there was a campaign on in England for cancellation of the British debt to the United States.

PRINCESS VICTORIA HAS INFLUENZAL PNEUMONIA

OBITUARY

Lloyd Phoenix

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—Lloyd Phoenix, former naval officer and for years one of the best known yachtsmen in America, died today at his home here. He was 84 years old.

He was born in New York city, a member of an old New York family. He was graduated from the United States naval academy in 1861 and immediately entered active service the Civil war, serving as midshipman master and lieutenant throughout the conflict. He resigned his commission in 1865 and thereafter his chief interest centered around the New York yacht club.

He built three auxiliary schooner yachts, each called the "Intrepid."

Jacob P. Adler.

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Jacob P. Adler, Jewish tragedian, known as "the David Garrick of the East Side" died at his home tonight. He was 71 years old.

Although Adler retired from the stage more than six years ago, following a paralytic stroke, he remained the idol of the Yiddish theatre.

Adler was born in Odessa, Russia, in 1855, and passed almost his entire life in the theatre. He became an actor at the age of 17 and early achieved a European reputation. He came to this country 40 years ago and soon made a name for himself.

He declined to desert the Jewish stage for the brighter lights of Broadway. His entire professional life was passed in the Yiddish theatre.

Two years ago he was prevailed upon to come from retirement for a single performance of "The Stranger," written especially for him by Jacob Gordon.

GOV. TRUMBULL SAYS POSITIVELY NO MORE REPRIEVES FOR GERALD CHAPMAN

HARTFORD, Conn., March 31—(AP)—Governor John H. Trumbull refused today to interfere with the execution of Gerald Chapman, condemned mail robber who goes to the gallows next Monday night for the murder of a New Britain policeman. Appealed to in person by Frederick J. Groehl, Chapman's senior counsel, to grant a reprieve of at least one week.

The governor replied: "No, not for an hour."

The chief executive told Mr. Groehl that he had granted three reprieves to Chapman to allow time for completion of court action which had already been instituted when the applications for reprieves were made. "Inasmuch as no court action is pending," the governor said, "it would be an unwarranted interference with the judicial department to stop the execution."

Mr. Groehl based his request for a stay of execution on the ground that he needed more time to prepare a petition for a new trial in superior court.

TO SEEK TODAY A STAY OF EXECUTION FOR CHAPMAN

HARTFORD, Conn., March 31—(AP)—A motion for a new trial, which if denied could be appealed to supreme court and automatically act as a stay of execution for Gerald Chapman, sentenced to be hanged April 6 for murder, will be filed in superior court tomorrow, his chief defense counsel, Frederick J. Groehl, of New York, announced tonight. Mr. Groehl said the motion would be based on new evidnece supported by the affidavits of four new witnesses.

One affidavit, he said, was sworn to today by a man who says he saw Chapman in New York subway about 8 o'clock on the night of October 11, 1924, the evening before Policeman James Skelly, of New Britain, was murdered.

Another affidavit will be presented from Edward Higginson or Meriden. Higginson is willing to testify that he was in company of Louis Kubeck, proprietor of the Old Colony Inn, of Meriden, on the night before the policeman's murder and that he is sure Kubeck did not see Chapman at his hotel, as he testified during Chapman's trial, according to Mr. Groehl.

The third affidavit, Mr. Groehl said was from John Callahan, a Jamaica, N. Y., chauffeur, who is supposed to have seen the slayer of Skelly running from the scene of the crime and to have later accompanied him on a train to New York. It is understood that his affidavit will say that this person was not Chapman.

The fourth affidavit will be from a man, who does not know Higginson and who lives in a different part of the state, yet supports Higginson's deposition.

STORM SENDS SHIPPING SCURRYING FOR SHELTER

Two Freighters Were Crippled and a Barge Was Sunk Off the Delaware Capes—Snow, Sleet and Rain Accompanied the Gale—British Freighter Laleham Messaged That She Was Rolling Almost on Her Beam Ends 400 Miles Southeast of Halifax—Mauretania is Speeding to the Rescue—Coast Guardsman Was Lost From Ship Off the Coast of Connecticut.

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—March died on the Atlantic ocean tonight in a mighty convulsion of storm tossed waters which sent one coast guard seaman to his death, sank a dredge off the Delaware Capes and crippled two luckless freighters.

After several weeks of comparative quiet, a snow, sleet and rain freighted gale, swept down from the northeast which sent inshore shipping scurrying for shelter. From mid-ocean ship's radios stuttered messages of distress and threatened disaster.

The British freighter Laleham messaged that she was rolling almost on her beam ends 40 miles southeast of Halifax. All of her lifeboats had been carried away by the storm and water in the holds was gaining steadily, the message stated.

The Laleham carries a crew of about 28 men. She was bound from Newport News to Ipswich, England.

Shortly after the distress call was received Captain Arthur H. Rostron, of the Cunard liner Mauretania, wirelessed that he was making full speed to the rescue of the Laleham. He gave his position as about 180 miles distant from the distressed vessel, and said that under ordinary conditions would be able to reach the scene in six or seven hours.

Another S. O. S. call was picked up by naval communications from a steamship signing S. S. Blair. No details were given, and the call was not repeated. The Blair is a freighter owned by the American Export Lines, due here from Huelva, Spain, about April 6. The owners of the vessel said they had received no word from the ship for several days.

The coast guard patrol boat 169, off the coast of Connecticut, wirelessed that it had been caught in the storm and had lost one seaman overboard. The vessel, whose base is at Staten Island, said she was in no danger and expected to make the Long Island coast tonight without aid. The name of the seaman who was lost was not given in the message.

Fifteen men were rescued off the Delaware Capes from the sinking dredge Clarement, by the sea-going tug Susan A. Moran. The dredge was in tow of the Moran when the gale struck. The high wind and heavy seas swamped it and the tug was compelled to run a life line to take off the crew of the dredge.

STEAMERS STORM-BOUND IN NEW LONDON HARBOR

NEW LONDON, March 31.—(AP)—The terrific gale that raged over Long Island sound and this section today, attained a velocity of near hurricane velocity tonight, holding up shipping, delaying trolley and rail traffic and causing damage to electric lighting and telephone equipment.

The wind reached a velocity of 50 miles an hour tonight and was accompanied by a heavy rain and a violent electrical display.

At sailing time, the Central Vermont steamer New London and the New England Steamship company's liner, Chester W. Chapin, both with passengers and freight bound for New York, were unable to leave their piers because of the wind and were detained awaiting a break in the storm.

Long Island sound tonight was a white capped stretch of water and general shipping held tightly to the safety of harbors. The lower harbor here was filled with craft of various kinds, mostly coastwise tugboats and their tows which had sought the shelter of the harbor late this afternoon.

Six destroyers from the New London coast guard base were at sea off Montauk Point, Block Island and No Man's Land but all were reported to be riding out the storm successfully. Fifteen patrol boats of the 75-foot type from the local base were reported earlier in the day to be safe in various harbors along Block Island and Long Island.

Nothing further was heard here tonight from the patrol boat 169, attached to the New York base, which in messages received here today reported the loss of one man who was swept overboard by the storm. Efforts to raise the craft which was on patrol some distance off Long Island, by radio from the destroyers at sea failed but officials here were inclined to believe that the patrol boat was safe in some Long Island harbor.

The coast guard cutter Mojave was held at the state pier here tonight with steam up ready to depart to sea should any vessel need assistance.

ATTEMPTING RESCUE CREW OF BRITISH FREIGHTER

BOSTON, March 31—(AP)—The British tanker Shirvan was attempting to rescue the crew of the British freighter Laleham sinking 400 miles southeast of Halifax, the coast guard cutter Tampa reported by radio to the navy yard here tonight.

SEVERE STORM SWEEPING FROM TORONTO EASTWARD

MONTREAL, March 31—(AP)—A storm the like of which central Canada has seldom experienced is sweeping over the territory around Toronto and eastward, with the probability that it will extend to Montreal and Quebec.

The gale reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour, with snow, rain and sleet, and carried down in its track virtually all wire communications, both telegraph and telephone.

It was impossible to communicate direct with Toronto after 10 o'clock this morning, but meagre reports from other parts indicated that great damage had been done. The telegram companies were hard hit, the Canadian National having more than 50 wires down, including its Montreal to New York wires that connect with Toronto. Temporary lines were pitched up and put into operation shortly after noon, but it was not long before these, too, were swept away.

Telegraph officials say that this is the worst storm in their experience and that never has such damage been done to their systems. Montreal firms on the stock exchange, which have extensive dealings with Toronto, were totally at sea as to how things were going in the Queen City.

The Bell Telephone company was in equal straits. Not one of its wires was working to Toronto. Hundreds of its wires was working to Toronto. Hundreds of its poles were down. Attempts at wireless communication with Toronto also failed. Snow began to fall in Montreal this today.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST BANDITS AND "FENCES"

NEW YORK, March 31—(AP)—The mills of the law whirred busily today grinding out indictments against the Richard Reese Whittemore band of jeweler robbers whose depredations have totaled nearly $1,000,000 and have cost several lives. In all 12 indictments were returned during the day.

The most important development of the day was the finding of indictments against two alleged "fences" in Brooklyn, after Florence Carter (as she was called to hide her true identity) had been closeted with the king's county grand jury. The names of the indicted "fences" were not made public but it was said they were prominent jewelers believed to have disposed of the loot of several of the Whittemore robberies. Warrants were issued for their arrest and it was hoped through them to recover some of the loot.

Mrs. Carter, a red headed former cigaret girl in a night club, who lived with Anthony Peladino until the arrest of the gang, told a story implicating the "fences." She said they often used to visit the apartment where she lived, as did other members of the Whittemore band, but she knew nothing of the robberies until after the arrests. She thought Paladino a "successful gambler" and the others gamblers and diamond merchants.

FRENCH CHAMBER APPROVES A PETROLEUM MONOPOLY

PARIS, March 31—(AP)—The chamber of deputies in the course of long deliberations on M. Peret's financial measures today approved in principle the institution of a petroleum monopoly as outlined in Deputy Margaine's bill, but, hesitating to plunge into all complications at once, decided to postpone application until 1927. In the meantime the matter will be referred to the committee on mines for study and the working out of details.

M. Peret pointed out to the chamber that the monopoly was not a government proposal, and that the finance committee had taken it up as a supplementary measure. He was persuaded to feel that the attempt to organize it now would lead to serious complications.

M. De Monzie, minister of public works, replied that negotiations were now in progress at Washington for the settlement of debts, and doubted whether this was the time for France to enter the world petroleum fight.

SAW NEGRESS ATTEMPT TO STAB MAN SLAIN

BRIDGEPORT, March 31—(AP)—George Williams, 21, Hampton street, told Coroner John J. Phelan this afternoon that he witnessed Clara Jones, Norwalk negress, with whom he had been living as her husband, strike at Fred Thomson, 42, with a knife because the latter, the last Sunday Thomson who died as the result, from infected puncture, slashed four times. Williams said he observed the woman bury the knife but once.

Mrs. Jones expressed a willingness to testify before Coroner Phelan as to her part in the stabbing, but her counsel, Attorney Robert G. Duffy, claimed in her behalf the privilege that she need not inform against herself.

The present charges against Camacho are reckless driving and causing the death of Rodriquez.

Skin Troubles

Come from Constipation

Constipation is the cause of most complexion troubles. Poisons from the waste matter are picked up by the blood and carried to all parts of the body, especially the skin.

No one needs to have a sallow, muddy complexion. Proper diet, exercise, surface cleanliness and above all—internal cleanliness. Nujol prevents the formation of intestinal poisons that ruin your health and complexion.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach, and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is so safe, so gentle and so natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit, and can be discontinued at any time.

DANIELSON

PUBLIC SENTIMENT FAVORS ADOPTING FAST TIME

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, March 31.—There is more prospect of Danielson generally arranging its business operations on a daylight saving basis, beginning late this month, than at any time since daylight saving was abandoned here several years ago. It is known that the matter is under consideration by at least one manufacturing concern employing several hundred people, that it is getting some consideration from members of the Chamber of Commerce, that at least a fair proportion of Danielson's business interests favor it and that numbers of interests would welcome it, as putting this community on an even basis of business hours with the greater part of southern New England with which it has important transactions and communications every working day. However, opinion about Danielson adopting daylight saving does not appear to be unanimous in its favor. The hope is to reconcile this opposition and get Danielson to use the "fast" time.

Such a change as is finding favor with many interests here would not necessarily involve any tinkering with time pieces. Business would merely start an hour earlier in the morning than is now the case and cease an hour earlier in the afternoon.

Experience of other years in which Danielson clung to standard time business schedules has demonstrated that business men and bank's telephones were ringing an hour before business had started here as calls came in from daylight saving areas, and that in the late afternoon communication with important interests in these same centers was quite impossible because they had locked up and gone away for the day.

Then there has been the constant crossing of appointments through misunderstandings because of differences in time here and somewhere else, missed trains and other irritating inconveniences.

If Danielson does adopt daylight saving, it will not be because of any special love for that arrangement, but because of convenience in transacting business by manufacturing concerns, banks and business houses. It seems more that barely possible just now that some concerns here will go on daylight saving basis whether the practice is generally adopted or not in Danielson this season.

Practically no damage resulted from fire, which is believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion.

BETTER THAN CALOMEL

Thousands Have Discovered Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a Harmless Substitute

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the substitute for calomel—are a mild but sure laxative, and their effect on the liver is almost instantaneous. These little olive-colored tablets are the result of Dr. Edwards' determination not to treat liver and bowel complaints with calomel.

The pleasant little tablets do the good that calomel does, but have no bad after effects. They don't injure the teeth like strong liquids or calomel. They take hold of the trouble and quickly correct it. Why cure the liver at the expense of the teeth? Calomel sometimes plays havoc with the gums. So do strong liquids. It is best not to take calomel. Let Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets take its place.

Headaches, "dullness," and that lazy feeling come from constipation and a disordered liver. Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets when you feel "logy" and "heavy." They "clear" clouded brain and "perk up" the spirits. 15c and 30c.

PUTNAM

HASN'T RAINED FOR 30 YEARS WHERE RUPPERT GEISSLER IS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, March 31.—The first communication has been received from Rupert Geissler, of Thompson since his arrival in South America. He is 23 degrees below the equator, at Costa Pilla, which is between the Pacific Ocean and the Andes Mountains. He says there is no vegetation there as there has been no rainfall for more than thirty years and the water which is piped down from the mountains, is decidedly warm, as there is no ice to be had in the place.

His work is electrical engineering in connection with the mining of nitrates. With the exception of the overseers the population at the camp is all natives, there being some few white people, however, about a mile from the camp. He is eager to hear from the outside world and is already counting the months to the time when he can return to a real country. Mails are very infrequent.

ADDRESS BY DR. SCOTT HAD WISE SUGGESTIONS

(Special to the Bulletin)

PUTNAM, March 31.—Dr. Willard Scott of Brookline, Mass., who spoke at the chamber of commerce meeting is one of the most eloquent and interesting platform orators that ever visited Putnam. In spite of the fact that he is 76, he is as mentally alert as a man of middle age. His topic had been announced as "Playing the Game" but he evidently forgot all about that and diverted his talk into a delightful running comment on things as they are today, as viewed by a shrewd and careful observer, the comments of a scholar of ripe age with an optimistic outlook on life, a broad tolerance for the foibles and weaknesses of his fellow men and women. He recognizes to the full the dominant role that woman is playing in the affairs of the world. Flashes of wit and humor scintillated and sparkled throughout his address.

Underlying it all there was a very obvious theme, to bring home to his hearers the predominent place that business men and women hold in the world today, as contrasted with former ages, or even with the era that ended directly after the close of the Civil war.

This was not Dr. Scott's first visit to Putnam. He had been here once as the guest of the late Rev. Frank D. Sargent, pastor of the Second Congregational church and had preached from its pulpit—for 33 years, prior to 1903, Dr. Scott had been a minister —and once he had been here as speaker at Putnam high school commencement.

The attention of the meeting was called by the presiding officer to the fact that the entertainment committee had provided a program for three open meetings of the entire membership of the organization during the past six months, and that they had all measured up to a high standard of excellence. The first was the eloquent, inspiring address by Rev. George F. Donohue of Pomfret, the one at which Mr. Gilman and Mr. Higgins of Boston had furnished a very enjoyable entertainment, and the address of Dr. Scott. He also appealed to the audience to continue their support to the chamber of commerce. The fact that property revaluation was likely to become an assured fact was due to the efforts of the chamber, as well as the proper presentation of the need of building two miles of highway in the town of Woodstock had probably influenced the commissioner of highways to decide to do it. The first taking of inestimable value and the second meant increased business for the merchants of Putnam which would aggregate several thousands of dollars annually.

A despatch from Salem, Mass., says that a resident of Thompson, Conn was arrested there on the charge of being a suspicious person. The name given was Robert C. Russell. The despatch reads:

"Discovered by Dr. Charles Ross, local dentist, in his office, a well dressed stranger failed to give a satisfactory reason for his presence. The dentist notified the police and Patrolman John Ryan placed the man under arrest on the charge of being a suspicious person. At the station he gave the name of Robert C. Russell, of and Thompson, Conn., as his home.

A DRY REFERENDUM

Ever since the 18th amendment has been in effect it has been maintained that it was not adopted in accordance with the wish of the people, even though it was ratified under the prescribed method of amending the Constitution. The point is always stressed in this connection that had the people been given a chance to vote upon the question prohibition would never have been voted.

The dry law has now been in effect for a number of years. Opinions as to its failure or success differ. Conditions under it are however quite generally said to be changing. There is a growing demand for a change.

At the present time congress is being asked to have a vote of the people of the country taken for the purpose of learning what they desire in the way of changes in the Volstead act, the enforcement law which lies within the power of congress to change. There are those who favor such a referendum because they believe that the people desire a change, that a substantial majority of them have been greatly unimpressed with the workings of the dry law and want modification. There are others who favor it under the belief that it is a matter which can well be left to the good sense of the people and that they are sufficiently well informed to vote upon it.

Such a referendum as has been proposed is not provided for under the Constitution. It would not obligate congress to act in accordance therewith. It would not in anyway authorize or accomplish the repeal of the 18th amendment. It is urged on the ground that it would give congress important information concerning the sentiment of the country.

If the Lisle resolution the question to be voted upon would be: "Shall the congress amend the national prohibition law so as to allow the manufacture, sale, transportation and possession of beverages containing as great an amount of alcohol as is lawful under the Constitution, provided that such amendment shall not interfere with the constitutional powers of the several states to legislate with respect to intoxicating liquors as each may deem proper."

It remains to be seen, of course, whether congress believes that it is sufficiently well informed concerning the sentiment of the country on the question or whether it need the help in that particular matter which a referendum would give.

CLAIMS AGAINST GERMANY

Just because one plan doesn't prove to be acceptable, or to meet the requirements of the situation, doesn't necessarily mean failure. In most instances it simply means a case of try, try again.

That is what is being done at least in connection with the adjustment of the claims of Americans against the German government in keeping with the awards of the mixed claims commission. Whether it will be adopted as a permanent but it provides a means of a fair settlement for the American claimants and comes as a suggestion of the treasury department.

It is too much to expect that Germany can at once pay the amount of the awards. Piecemeal payment would mean that it would require a long time before the money was received, so it was pointed out some time ago that Germany might issue bonds for the purpose of providing the necessary money, these bonds to have the backing of this government. The idea was one that didn't make a strong appeal hence the necessity for devising some other method.

This has now been explained by Assistant Secretary Winston and proposes the floating of a bond issue by this government to the amount of a quarter of a billion, the interest and principal of which would be regularly met under an amortization plan by the $11,000,000 received yearly through the Dawes plan, the $22,000,000 being paid yearly by Germany for the army maintenance costs during occupancy following the armistice, which would have to be voted by congress and from the $30,000,000 accrued interest on the German property in this country held by the alien property custodian.

This is of course based on the belief that the payments under the Dawes plan will continue as arranged. Otherwise it will be a case of settling our own claims. Under such an arrangement the property being held by the alien property custodian would go back to the owners when adopted.

FIGHTING TENT CATERPILLARS

Whatever the plan may be there is much to be said in favor of the efforts that are being put forth in fighting the tent caterpillars. This is of course something in which a large number can participate. It is a matter in which many should be interested and results are gained by creating an interest in preventing the destructive work of this pest.

Getting the children interested in the gathering of the leaf clusters which contain the eggs and which will soon hatch out so that they can be destroyed before the caterpillars get a chance to feed upon the vegetation is the best kind of preventive work. There's no telling how great a number of tents and caterpillars will be eliminated through such methods. There will be enough and too many in spite of such efforts but there's satisfaction in knowing that the number has been kept down through united efforts.

There is the good work that comes through leadership in such campaigns, additional good work through inspiring others to do the same thing and the good work of arousing general interest among adults as well as children in tackling a common, detrimental and destructive pest.

It is through neglect in dealing with such a common nuisance that it has grown to such large proportions. It takes advantage of every opportunity and it will be only through diligent, persistent work that it will be eradicated. Next to eradication will be keeping it down to harmless proportions, but even that calls for a common attack that will be as thorough as it is widespread. The work of destroying the egg clusters is probably the easiest method of attack. It strikes at the source and is certainly effective.

HIGHLY VALUABLE PREVENTION

Because he stopped, investigated, found and reported a broken rail near th railroad station at Westerly, Benjamin Peabody of that city has been visited by a representative of the New Haven road and thanked. That further acknowledgment of his act will follow would occasion no surprise.

And yet how many others hearing the same unusual noise that Mr. Peabody did would have permitted it to have halted what they were doing and brought about the disclosure which he made?

Mr. Peabody may feel that what he did was only a small thing from the actual amount of work involved, but it was a big thing when consideration is given to the prevention of what might easily have been a serious wreck had the fast traveling rolling stock along that road become mixed up with that split rail.

It was a little thing for Mr. Peabody to detect that unusual sound, but how many others would have given no heed to it! It was possible that on investigation he would find that there was no danger in the condition that made the noise that caught his ear, but he took no such chances. He was actuated by the belief that something was wrong, that there was no time for delay in finding it and upon finding it of disclosing it to the proper railroad authorities that trains passing over it might be put on their guard! His judgment was excellent.

Deplorable wrecks have followed from no worse defects. His discovery was a timely one and he must be given full credit for the highly commendable action concerning it. Would that there were more who were ready to act upon sensing such danger. It takes but little preventive work to stop great losses.

TOURISTS' CAMPS

To be or not to be is a question that has called forth debate for many years, for when it isn't one thing it is another.

At a season of the year when auto touring will soon start many a community is giving consideration to the advisability of providing camps for tourists. It is not difficult to find communities which will advise against any such undertaking, while there are others which will favor it. Much may depend upon the manner in which this service has been rendered.

There seems to be no good reason why free tourists' camps should be established and maintained at the right degree of fitness, and certainly anything that would not measure up to any such test ought not to be tolerated. Some consideration may be given if there is some business on the side which is going to profit from the patrons of such a camp, or if there is a fee charged for using it, but the overnight visitor has no more claim upon a community because he arrived by automobile than one who comes by train. He isn't likely to be a more profitable guest.

For such reasons and because the facilities offered in many instances have not been appreciated, but have been abused, the idea of free camps is not as popular as it was once. The fact is that the campers for the most part prefer the camps where service in keeping with their requirements can be obtained, while the idea of providing camps is based chiefly upon the attraction of tourists to certain localities. Something for nothing, if it actually is something, seldom gets a cold shoulder.

Those who are doing their snow shovels up in cotton battin and putting them away for the summer are probably making no mistake.

Talk is to the effect that congress may clean up its business by soon after the middle of May. That is of course too early to figure on adjournment.

If the early peas haven't been planted we can expect reports about the number of inches and feet they are above ground just to make the first of the month interesting.

THE SEWING CIRCLE

"You have a whale of a fortune in your teacup, Celeste," observed the youngest and newest member, draining her own cup and examining with regret the minute black specks that adhered to its rim. "Are you speculating in oil wells or something like that? Give us a good tip; that's a good fellow."

"I know what it is," suggested the young matron with the auburn wave, "she is probably going to succeed at last in patenting a noniosable hairpin a vacuum point that will adhere to the scalp as a fly to the wall. She's always complaining about her hairpins falling out, so now I hope—"

"Wrong, both wrong!" the fluffy-haired blond assured them cheerfully. "That fortune in my teacup has reference, beyond doubt to the $2.25 I am going to get tomorrow by returning to the book store where I bought it a copy of a certain work, so-called, that has been listed recently among our best sellers." She paused to draw breath and select a small cake from the delectable assortment presented to her. "I read it yesterday," she added, "and, believe me, I wouldn't have it on the premises for another 24 hours."

The young matron chuckled with glee. "Will they take it back after you've read it?" she inquired.

"You bet they will," said the fluffy-haired blond, with wrath in her eye. "It's the only effective recourse a helpless public has against the sort of stuff we are being subjected to, because a cash return is the only expression of adverse opinion that interests a bookseller. So nowadays when I buy, in all innocense, something fresh from the press, and find it to be one of those nasty productions that pass under the polite name of modern psychology, I return it promptly, demand credit and make them a present of a definite explanation of my act. The clerks at the bookstore are getting careful about what they sell me."

"The wonder is they find anything to sell you at all under those restrictions," grumbled the young matron sadly. "I haven't had a really decent book for so long I've almost forgotten the thrill. I think I'll dig out my old copy of Little Women. Or else, when I've nothing to do, write a book myself.

The circle laughed scornfully.

"Is it the idea of my writing a book that so excites your amusement?" inquired the young matron. "Or the thought of my having nothing to do?"

"Both, darling," the fluffy-haired blond assured her. "You don't look like people who write books, you know. I'm not acquainted with many of 'em personally, but I'm quite sure they all wear tortoise shell spectacles—"

"M-m-m-m-m," said the young matron with the auburn wave, cryptically.

"And as for any woman over 21 years and in full possession of her faculties having nothing to do," continued the fluffy-haired blond, "well, it ain't. that's all. It's like a perfect summer resort, or an electric housemaid—scientificially impossible. I've always believed in the fine art of doing nothing gracefully, and one time two years ago I made up my mind to get some practice. I was tired out after a strenuous winter, so we hunted up a place down in the wilds of the gulf coast and descended to it. I thought here at last is a spot where dreams of leisure charm the mind and naught but work is vile. And I'll say the natives seemed to have the same idea—my father said he lacked the proper instruments for sighting to make sure they moved at all."

"How delightful!" said the circle.

"But at the end of three days," continued the fluffy-haired blond, "I began to suspect that I wasn't born with the gift of doing nothing gracefully, and at the end of a week I could have wept for work. We stayed one solid month, because we felt we must get our money's worth of rest, but as a matter of fact the only thing that saved my nerves from devastation was a nice little teaming business I worked up. I hired a fliver and hauled dry goods from the depot to the store, and after paying for gas I cleared $19.26 for the local missionary society." — Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Jerome H. Raymond, the Newsboy, a Great College President

Every soldier of France carries in his knapsack a marshal's buton," said Napoleon, speaking of the opportunities that soldiers who were capable and courageous had at their command.

"Every newsboy in the United States carries in his possession a power to rise to high position and to great usefulness." is a saying that is far more true. Many American newsboys, like Thomas A. Edison, the scientist, and Hugh Chisholm, the paper manufacturer, have risen to riches and power.

Jerome H. Raymond president of the University of West Virginia, was another newsboys who made himself great. Many people take it for granted that men become great through some lucky accident, or through the help of others; it is almost always true that men become great through their own conscientious and determined effort not to be beaten down by an possible conditions or circumstances.

When Jerome Raymond was only a small boy he might have been seen on the streets of Chicago, dressed no better than any ordinary newsboy, with, with no better home and with no better opportunities, selling papers to all who would buy. He did have three gifts that lead to success in life: He kept himself out of wickedness; he saved his money and he tried to learn. If the poverty of his home made schoo impossible for him, he did not give up school; he went to the evening schools, and there learned the very practical art of writing shorthand. This gave him at once a means of earning money. He perfected himself in stenography and thus could command higher pay than his rivals. Now he was able to go to college, even though he had to continue working, for he was determined to gain an education. Soon he became private secretary to George M. Pullman and traveled with him throughout the United States. After that he became private secretary to a missionary bishop, who took him with him on a trip around the world. All this added immensely to an already growing store of practical knowledge. When he had thus toured the world and had been paid for doing it he went back to college surroundings, taking a position in the University of Wisconsin. There he was so energetic and so rich in personality and he made a reputation for power and ability, and was invited to become president of the University of Virginia. From being a newsboy he had made himself into a man whom colleges were proud to honor by the conferring of degrees.

Stories That Recall Others

Courtesy Indeed.

Susane, age two, had been away from her mother, Josephine, for a few hours. On returning she extended her tiny hand and inquired:

"How is mother, Jo?"

And then, after a moment's thought, and with a twinkle in her eyes:

"And how's your husband?"

Student of Character

Lillian, age three, has arrived at that point of conversation where there are apt to be misunderstandings on both sides. While she mispronounces the family name so that it sounds like Booby she considers that appellation as private property.

She was met on the street the other day and was quite excited when she was addressed as she thought incorrectly. Her retort was:

"I am no booby. I am a young lady.

And when the abashed visitor hesitated before making the proper explanation, she quickly added: "You might as well go along, because we can't agree."

CHILD TRAINING

PLAY INSTINCT AND PROPER CONDUCT

Minerva Hunt

"Lunch will soon be ready, John." Mrs. Lewis announced to her four-year old son.

The little fellow ran to the corner of the kitchen and took a small pan and towel from the nail beneath the sink. His mother put water in the pan which John had placed in a chair. Then John began to wash his hands and to sing:

"I washed my hands this morning, so very clean and white."

He did a very good job both at singing and washing.

"I can't see my face, so Mother wipes it," he told his aunt and stood still while this was being done.

"When did this miracle occur?" the aunt asked when John had gone to the office to call his father. "He used to cry and scream when you tried to clean him up for meal-time."

"That was before I realized how much children love to play and sing and repeat rhymes," his mother smiled. "John discovered the cure himself. It happened in this way: One day he had been naughty and I made him sit in the corner. As usual he cried. I went about my work in the next room, but could still hear him. Suddenly his crying stopped; he laughed and I heard him talking to himself. My curiosity got the better of me and I went to the door to listen. He was reciting 'Little Jack Horner' and making all the gestures. That gave me an idea. I decided to use his love of play, verse and song to help him do the right things.

"Water is one of John's chief troubles. He loves a lot of water for a long time and dislikes a little of it for any time By using song and action John now enjoys cleaning up before meals. Another nice thing we do comes at the end of a bath. It used to be that leaving the bathtub brought on a battle, now we say these words fitting the proper action to them:

'I jump right out of the tub, tub tub
And with my towel I rub, rub, rub.'

"John used to leave toys strewn all over the floor. Nothing short of punishment would get him to put them in their box when he finished playing After going through siege after siege with him, I decided to arrange two shelves under the windows in the dining-room and try the verse idea for getting him to put his toys away. I played the game first myself without asking him to join in, but soon he came of his own accord and has played the game ever since. This is what we say:

'My blocks live on the first shelf
My ball lives on the top
They're going home together
Just see them hop, hop, hop.'

Different toys are named until all have gone 'home.'

"Bedtime was another difficult time

Hands and arms were always stiff

QUICK EASY WAY TO HELP STIFF JOINTS

Tailor tells how to overcome stiffness in hands

A Philadelphia tailor has found a quick way of getting rid of stiffness in the hands and arms caused by constantly using a hot iron.

"I have been using liniments for a long time," he says; "but I find that Sloan's Liniment is the best. It always gives me instant relief." (Name and address given on request.)

No matter how many other remedies you may have tried—Sloan's will help you. Just pat it on lightly, without rubbing. Right away Sloan's sends a healing tide of fresh, new blood right to the stiff, aching joints. The first thing you know the aching and stiffness are gone. Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

Now to the tune of 'Little Drop of Water' we sing:

'I step aboard my steamship
To Slumberland I go
Quietly, so quietly.
So no one will know.'

The 'stepping aboard' gets him into bed, and singing it a secret helps him get to sleep.

"I'm glad I thought of the plan Children love to play and by giving them the words that suggest proper action, life is made so much easier for them and for the older members of the family."

IN THE DAYS NEWS

PALOS

Conflicting ideas of the place from which Columbus put off in his historic voyage of discovery to the new world have been raised by press dispatches in regard to the Spain-Argentina flight of Spanish airmen. They announced that they would begin their trans-Atlantic hop rom the exact spot from which Columbus' flag put to sea. These dispatches have been dated from both Huelva and Palos, Spain. The region from which Columbus sailed is the subject of a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Fate selected Palos to be the starting point for one of the most momentous and significant journeys ever taken by land or sea," says the bulletin. "But then, as though more than enough had been done for one place, centuries that have passed since Columbus' day have not been kind to Palos. When the Santa Maria, the Pinta and the Nina put boldly out from Palos it was a reasonably important part, just far enough within the common, forked estuary of the Rio Tinto and the Rio Odiel to be protected from the swell of the Atlantic. But long ago the harbor became silted up, and now that which bears the famous name 'Palos' is only a tiny, insignificant fishing village.

"Palos is situated on the Rio Tinto arm of the estuary about ten miles from the sea. At about the rame distance up the Odiel arm is Huelva, the rival which became the dominant port of the estuaries. As Palos went down, Huelva went up. A channel is kept open to its quays, and because of the great quantities of copper and sulphur ores that are shipped from it, it is surpassed in tonnage handled by only a few Spanish ports. In the neighborhood on the two rivers, are the largest mines in Spain.

"Since Huelva is of the bustling present with its hotels and telegraph offices, while Palos is of the past those participating in the recent airplane flight gathered at Huelva, although the start was actually made of Palos. Huelva ran away with most of the credit lines in the stories of the beginning of the flight.

"There are other reminders of Columbus in this region than what is left of Palos. Opposite the junction point of the Odiel and the Tinto is La Rabida Monastery, partly in ruins, where Columbus received the first encouragement for his 'wild' plans. The prior of the monastery, formerly the confessor to Queen Isabella, induced her to finance the voyage. On the river bank, near the monastery, stands a colossal statue of Columbus, looking off toward the ocean which he conquered.

"Palos, even in the days of its importance, was really not the most logical place for beginning the ocean journey. Seville on the Guadalquiver river was the metropolis of southern Spain and the seat of the kings. All voyages of consequence, including that of Columbus, started from the river quays of that great city and the logical last port was San Lucar, at the mouth of the Guadalquiver about 40 miles east of Palos. When the wealth of the new world was realized and shiploads of bullion poured into Spain Seville was given the monopoly of trade with America, and then San Lucar came into its own. Columbus put off from San Lucar on his third voyage. Magellan too, began the circumnavigation of the world at San Lucar in 1519 and almost exactly three years later the only remaining ship of the dead leader completed its world girdling trip at the same port. Today San Lucar is the important port of entry for Seville.

"The little region of Spain embracing Palos, the mouth of the Guadalquiver, and the adjacent country has played a major role in Spanish commerce and navigation. Following Seville, Cadiz became the receiving vault for the riches of the Indies. Jerez—mangled into 'Sherry' by the English—still is one of the most important wine centers of Spain, and its product has long figured prominently in Spanish commerce. Before the days of the acceptance of Greenwich as the world's zero meridian, the meridian through San Fernando observatory near Cadiz was used by Spanish mariners in mapping the world of which they discovered so much."

Little Talks on Thrift

MONEY IN TIN CANS

Western newspapers recently told of the death of an Ohio farmer, in settling up his estate it was found that $2,900 had been deposited in a bank and $80,000 had been secreted in cash in fruit cans about his home.

The incident is not unusual. Almost daily we read of cases where considerable sums of money have been hoarded. In fact, government statisticians estimate that something like $400,000,000 is lying idle in this country continually as a result of this hoarding habit upon the part of thousands of our citizens.

While it is difficult to say anything against saving money, there is little or nothing to chose between the spendthrift and the miser. Each illustrates the need of thrift education.

It is not hard as a rule to earn money in this country. Any person with a reasonable amount of industry and a reasonable amount of intelligence can earn a good livelihood. But the hard task is in saving anything out of our earnings.

It recently was estimated that the people of this country are today losing considerably more than one billion dollars a year through frauds of various kinds A large part of these frauds are possible because those who are victimized have never given thorough study to problems of personal finance, which is nothing more or less than thrift.

It does not pay to put our money away in tin cans where it is of no use to us or to our families or to society. Neither does money which slips through our fingers through fraudulent investments or useless extravagances do us any good.

There is a great deal to be learned in correct spending. It is a mistaken idea that the man who merely saves is necessarily thrifty. The thrifty man is he who saves his money and puts it to good use.—American Society for Thrift.

FIRST DAY OF TROUT SEASON OFFERS LITTLE HOPE FOR FISHERS

There was water enough and to spare in the brooks, the fields and the roads for the opening of the trout fishing season on the first day of April, but the weather man seemed bent on adding to the discomfort and inconvenience of the fishermen who never miss the first day by sending a northeast storm all day Wednesday. Every fraction of an inch of water that fell decreased by just so much the prospects for any sort of luck along the streams, but there will doubtless be a goodly number of dyed-in-the-wool enthusiasts who will be out by daylight this (Thursday) morning, heading for their favorite brooks.

Travel conditions will not be easy for the fishermen, for the unimproved country roads are masses of mud and the unwary angler who attempts to drive off the state highways will run a big chance of having his machine stick fast in a mud hole from which nothing will extricate him but the friendly assistance of a farmer with a team of horses or a yoke of oxen.

This year for the first time the fishermen will sally forth wearing the big buttons which prove the wearer has complied with the law by taking out a fishing license. The law provides that the label shall be worn in plain sight, and the privilege of sporting such a decoration adds something to the average cost of each fish in the creel, since the cost of a fishing license has been increased from $1.25 to $2.25. The town clerk's office has already issued a number of fishing licenses, with their accompanying buttons and certificate and there will be more to be passed out as the month passes and the conditions become more propitious and inviting for a few hours along the brooks.

CONTINUES ADDRESSES IN HOLY WEEK SERVICES

In the series of noonday services for holy week which are held at the Palace theatre, under the auspices of the Protestant churches, Rev. Charles A. Spaulding of New London spoke Wednesday upon the theme, The Christ-like God. Archdeacon, J. Eldred Brown, president of the Norwich Ministers' association, presided.

Rev. Mr. Spaulding spoke in part as follows:

We are discussing the ways in which men think about God. We have seen that we should think of God in the terms of human love, as Father, as a sacrificial giver. We saw yesterday that the monarchial ideas of God are all inconsistent with the divine character. Now we may consider the idea of the Christ-like God. Is that a fit comparison? Have we not grown to think of Christ in gentler and more lovable terms than those in which we think of God. Is not a God as a divine capitalist, working his crowd at excess speed for the dividends of his own power and glorification? Why shouldn't he be? Wouldn't we do that if we had the chance? Whether we would or not, God won't. He is actuated by only one motive—the best interest of the developing manhood and womanhood in each of us. He is bound by no partially-mistaken positions in his own past which could deter him from doing at every point the absolutely best thing for the eternal well-being of his creatures.

Christ came to reveal God to man. Man did not know what God is like. Men do not yet know much about what God is like. They measure Christ by his likeness to their conceptions of God. But truly, Christ is the measure of God. I was much shocked when I first heard or read this expression, the Christ-like God. I felt more like saying "the God-like Christ." It seemed strange to think that God could be measured by Christ or by anything else. And I know we absolutely cannot measure God by anything we know. But I can measure my own conception of God by what Christ is. Thus I shall know that anything in my conception of God which is unsuited to the picture of Jesus given in the gospels, is wrong and cannot long remain. I must not defend it. Anything in my thought of God which jars with the spirit of Jesus is wrong. If I can imagine doing anything that Jesus wouldn't do, or failing to do anything Jesus would have done, I must know that my conception is in so far wrong.

Let me read my gospels over again till I have built up the only true and lasting picture of God, the Christ-like God.

Jesus' greatest work on earth was to show and teach what God is like. And the true and the only true God is like Christ in spirit and purpose, in motive and method.

HOME SERVICE LESSON ON EGGS WEDNESDAY

Stormy though it was Wednesday afternoon, 37 Norwich housewives attended the lecture-lesson of Miss Gladys L. Peckham, home service expert, at the Norwich gas and electric department office. On account of Friday being Good Friday, the second lesson this week will be omitted.

In her Monday evening ladies' class this week Miss Peckham had 60, who received a most practical lesson on making doughnuts. A second wedding cake has been started in this class Miss Peckham will mail printed cards with the recipes demonstrated, to any person applying for them, or will give them out at the gas and electric department offices.

For the benefit of those who lost the Wednesday lesson because of the rain and cannot have a lesson Friday, this week's recipes are here given.

As usual, Mrs. Clarence D. Sexton assisted Miss Peckham.

Eggs in bacon ring: Six slices of bacon, six eggs, salt and pepper, garnish of parsley. Cut slices of bacon around the inside of muffin-cups or small ramekins. Break an egg inside each bacon-ring, season with salt and pepper and bake until set, but not hard. Remove carefully from dish so that egg will remain fastened to bacon. Arrange on platter and garnish with parsley. Serve immediately.

Eggs a la goldenrod: Six hard cooked eggs, two cups thin white sauce, eight slices toast, salt and pepper, paprika. Separate the yolks from the whites and chop whites very fine. Add to the white sauce with salt, pepper and paprika. Arrange six slices of toast on a platter and pour white sauce mixture over them. Press the egg-yolks through a sieve and scatter over the top. Cut two extra slices of toast into triangles or points, arrange on platter and garnish with parsley.

Foamy omelet: Four eggs, four tablespoons hot water, few grains pepper, one-half teaspoon salt, one tablespoon butter. Separate yolks from whites, and beat whites until stiff. Beat yolks until thick and lemon-colored, beat into them the hot water and add salt and pepper. Cut and fold together the yolks and stiffly beaten whites. Heat omelet pan and grease sides and bottom with butter, taking care not to brown the butter. Turn egg mixture into pan and cook over a slow fire until puffed up and brown on sides and bottom. Place in a moderate oven 350 degrees until the top is dry. Touch the top of the omelet lightly with the finger and if the egg does not stick to the finger the omelet is done. Loosen the edges of the omelet, slip a spatula or flexible knife under the side next to the handle of the pan, tip the pan to a nearly vertical position over a warm platter and gently lift the omelet, turning and folding it as it slides onto the platter.

Tomato omelet: Slice two medium sized ripe tomatoes very thin. Place between omelet when serving.

Ham or bacon omelet: Add one-half cup chopped ham or crisp bacon to foamy omelet just before cooking; or cook omelet and put meat between fold just before serving.

Jelly omelet: Put one-half glass of currant jelly between omelet fold when serving.

NORWICH SEAL SALE TWELFTH IN STATE

Sprague and Norwich stood close together, eleventh and twelfth respectively, in the per capita sale of the Christmas seals of the anti-tuberculosis campaign. Reports which are practically complete have been received at the office of the state tuberculosis commission, showing an approximate total of $103,500 which is an increase of nearly $5,000 over the previous year.

The exact sum reported to the commission to date is $103,520, and it is probable that an additional two hundred dollars may be added with the receipts of final reports from two local units.

Four new units were added during the past year, Old Lyme, raising $292, Westport $503, Somers, $710, and Broad Brook, $194.

North Haven for the third time led the state in highest per capita sales, having reported a total of 21 seals per inhabitant of that town. Mrs. S. P. Tasker was the chairman of the committee which directed the campaign.

West Hartford again stood second in per capita sales, with 20, the campaign being directed by Clarent R. Root. Darien showed the largest increase in sales by doubling its previous high record and attaining the third highest per capita. Mrs. Aubrey Quackenbush was the chairman of the Darien committee which broke all previous records.

Other high per capita sales were: New Canaan, fourth with 16.8; Old Lyme, fifth with 16.4; Collinsville, sixth with 15.8; Simsbury, seventh with 15.4; Newtown, eighth with 14.6; Beacon Falls, ninth with 14.3; Essex, tenth with 13.1. Hartford, with its total of $13,333, headed the state for the fifth consecutive year. New Haven was second with $11,612, a new high mark for the total in that city.

Bridgeport and Waterbury were the 3rd and 4th highest, reporting $8,589, and $5,389 respectively. Norwich with $4,047, and Meriden with $3,954, showed the highest per capita sales in the cities. Stamford with $3,239 established a new high level for that city, with Bristol with $2,108 led the cities in largest increase in per capital sales.

RICKARD REMAINS SILENT REGARDING PROPOSED DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Principals in the heavyweight pugilistic drama marked time today in anticipation of a definite answer from Jack Dempsey to Tex Rickard's offer of a title match with Gene Tunney.

Apparently thwarted by the action of the New York state athletic commission in arbitrarily decreeing that Harry Wills must not be overlooked in shaping the 1926 heavyweight program, Rickard maintained silence but promised an announcement tomorrow. It is expected to deal with his lease of the boxing rights to the Yankee stadium for the summer season.

But win, lose or draw in his fight with the commission, New Jersey is open to Rickard, where he holds a lease on Boyle's thirty acres, where Dempsey and Carpentier fought in 1921. The failure of the New Jersey legislature to pass a bill raising the maximum price of fights to $50 was a setback but the promter feels that if he can present documentary evidence that he has clinched the title match, this obstacle can be hurdled without further difficulty.

Rickard's only objection to New Jersey is the no-decision law which eliminates the possibility of a decisive victory for the champion or his challenger in the absence of a knockout and for this reason he is trying to bring the championship match to New York.

Politics, which always play a leading part in any big pugilistic venture, appear to be on the side of the promoter despite the apparent antagonism of the New York fistic soloon. Rickard senses interference from the hidden hand of politics if he attempts to promote a mixed match and for this reason he has sidetracked Wills in favor of Tunney.

But in the face of an unfavorable situation, Wills maintains a stoic silence as to his future. Pledged by a reported contract with Floyd Fitzsimmons not to engage in any match prior to a Dempsey contest, Wills has consistently refused to talk about a proposed fight with Tunney.

Paddy Mullins, Wills' business manager, is waiting patiently until April 15 when the Chicago promoters are pledged to deposit the sum required by the contract to bind the match. If the money is forthcoming, Mullens will abide by the provisions of the contract but if not then the negro's manager will consider it abrogated and act accordingly to his own judgment.

The state athletic commission meanwhile, is considering a move to declare the heavyweight title vacant in an effort to force Dempsey to show his hand. However, this is not likely as the board is reluctant to display such powers in the face of Dempsey's reported break with Jack Kearns, which, many believe, is all that is hindering him from rushing into the best available match.

Rickard knows that he cannot sign Dempsey to a contract for a title match until Kearn's contract expires on August 3, but this does not prevent him from setting the stage for the climax which is expected right after this date.

HOPPE OVERCOMES LEAD PILED UP BY SCHAEFER

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Remarkable play by the champion, Willie Hoppe, gave him the lead tonight over Jake Schaefer, 1800 to 1716, at the end of the sixth block in their 3600 point match for the 18.1 balkline billiard title.

Hoppe required only five innings to run out his string and twice broke the world high run record, registering 149 in his first inning and 200 in his fourth. The previous mark was 194, which Hoppe set Monday. The score of tonight's block was 378 to 245.

The innings:

Hoppe 149 2 28 200 4—378.
Schaefer 18 67 25 100 6—245.

Willie Hoppe, defending champion, reduced Jake Schaefer's advantage from 218 to 78 caroms in the fifth block of their 3600 point billiard match for the 18.1 balkline championship played this afternoon. The title-holder outplayed his challenger by 440 to 360, the match score reading: Schaefer 1500, hoppe 1422.

Although Hoppe had five scoreless innings in fifteen turns at the table, he gathered high runs of 89, 95 and 93 in the third, fifth and seventh frames. Hoppe averaged 29 5-15 to 25 12-16 for Schaefer.

The score by innings:

Hoppe 14 0 89 20 96 85 33 30 24 0 0 28 0 0 20—440.
Schaefer 1 0 11 76 10 0 34 11 12 1 47 1 15 2 0 19 14—270.

SNOW AND RAIN HOLDS UP TRAINING ACTIVITIES

CHICAGO March 31.—(AP)—Snow and profitless overhead piled up around spring training quarters of the major league baseball clubs today as March, the weather man's shutout king, caught the train for home, teams quartered in the interior states were forced into the second or third successive day of idleness while the managers tried to figure out how to crowd about two weeks' work in the remaining few days of the training season.

The Chicago Cubs, playing in California, took it on themselves to do the hitting for the major clubs in general and crashed out 14 hits, including two circuit drives. Hack Wilson and Gabby Hartnett scored the home runs which helped the Cubs defeat the Los Angeles Angels 7 to 1.

Another box score was compiled at the opposite extremity of the country. The Washington Senators toiled at length to win from the Buffalo international league club, 4 to 3.

Plenty of hits pulled the Cleveland Indians through an exhibition with the Rochester Internationals at Waycross, Ga., which they won 7 to 6.

BROOKLINE, Mass., March 31.—(AP)—Three sisters figured prominently today in the semi-final rounds of the girls' national indoor singles and doubles tennis championships at the Longwood covered courts. Sarah Mianne and Lee Palfrey of Brookline were the heroines of the day and all reached the final bracket in one or other of the tournaments.

Mianne, who is 15 years old, will contest the singles finals on Saturday with Marjorie Morrill of Dedham. Sarah, the youngest of the three, was beaten for the other place in the finals after the hardest match of the tournament. Although only 13, she put up a game struggle against Miss Morrill, her 17 year old opponent and forced the match to 36 games. The score was 7-5, 4-6, 8-6.

In doubles competition sister will meet sister on Saturday. Mianne and Sarah defeated Gertrude and Louise Packer of Winchester, sisters, in the semi-final match, and their elder sister Lee, paired with Miss Morrill, defeated Marjorie Fuller and Molly Walcott of Cambridge.

FILM PROMOTERS MAKE OVERTURES TO SUZANNE

NICE, France, March 31.—(AP)—Suzanne Langlen, commenting on reports she planned a trip to the United States to act in the movies, asserted tonight she had received no definite offer of such a nature but hinted that some film promoters made overtures.

It is understood here, however, that one American promoter is bringing to Nice a scheme by which it is believed Mlle. Langlen could escape the charge of professionalism should she go on such an American tour. This promoter, it is reported, plans to pay her for motion pictures of actual tennis matches while around he combined into a romantic film story in which Suzanne would be starred.

OWNIE CARROLL SENT TO TORONTO INTERNATIONAL TEAM

Norwich Holy Cross college alumni learn that Ownie Carroll, '25, captain of last year's championship baseball team, now a member of the Detroit Tigers, has been sent to Toronto for experience. He will have an opportunity to engage in active competition on the Toronto club. A year's experience under Dan Howley, who has charge of the club, should find Ownie ready and capable of undertaking the pitching responsibilities of the Detroit club.

Friday, the H. C. varsity baseball team will leave Worcester for the south, where practice will be for the most part in Richmond. Randolph-Macon will be met, as will also the College of William and Mary, Quantico Marines and Georgetown. This year, more time will be given to practice than to actual contests, there being but four games on the southern trip. The first home contest comes April 13th, with Dartmouth.

SOUTH AND WEST TEAMS CONTINUE THEIR WINNING

CHICAGO, March 31.—(AP)—Southern and western teams today continued their triumphs they began in yesterday's opening first round games of the national scholastic basketball tourney at the University of Chicago.

While quintets from these two sections battled their way to the succeeding rounds, the east cut in with two victories for its first showing in the title race.

Two upsets of the day resulted in the defeat of teams from Kentucky and Utah. Danville, Kentucky, highly regarded, was badly outclassed by Salem, South Dakota, with a final score of 37 to 11 and Nanticoke, Pennsylvania, won from Latter Day Saints, of Salt Lake City, Utah, picked to go well up in the tourney, 29 to 26.

Recruited from a town of 300, the team from Wheeler, Mississippi, lived up to expectations and displayed probably the best balanced play so far in the games to defeat Reno, Nevada, 46 to 13. The victory put two 'sippi fives into the second round, Scott county, having won a close game yesterday.

Fitchburg, Massachusetts, New England champions, outclassed Billings, Montana 52 to 20, while Roswell, New Mexico, took a close tilt from another eastern team, Hagerstown, Maryland, 35 to 30. A last half battle gave Gaylor, Minnesota, a win over Memphis, Tennessee, and Oak Ridge, Louisiana, was decidedly outplayed by Fargo, North Dakota for a 20-10 victory for the westerners.

Tech high of Atlanta, downed Omaha, Nebraska, in a fast encounter, 22 to 16.

Torrington, Connecticut, semi-finalist in last year's play, defeated by San Antonio yesterday, forfeited the first consolation game to Fort Valley, Georgia, and Lewiston, Idaho, defeated Canton, Illinois, 18 to 11, in the second.

NEW LEADERS COME TO FRONT IN BOWLING TOURNEY

TOLEDO, Ohio, March 31.—(AP)—A new leader in the all-events and two new pairs in the two men were the changes today in the standings of the American bowling congress tournament here today.

S. Gerloski, Detroit, went to the top in the all-events with 1381 four above the former leader in that division Buonomo of Rochester, N. Y., Gerloski collected 665 in his team event last night, 356 in his doubles and 670 in his singles.

Gerloski and his partner, W. Shackett, entered the standings in the doubles by putting together games of 495, 469 and 399 for a 1301 total, giving them fifth place in the list.

The other pair to enter in the doubles standings was J. Shakerly and J. Hall, of Jacksonville, Fla., they had 1297 in games of 379, 513 and 406 which gave them seventh place.

Teams from Niagara Falls, N. Y., Scranton, Pa., New Haven, Conn., among others, took the drives on the first shift of five-men teams tonight.

NAP LIBERTY TO PLAY IN BLUE RIDGE LEAGUE

Nap Liberty, Jewett City boy who played in the Twilight league here last season, will play in the Blue Ridge league this coming summer according to his friends in Jewett City. Liberty had a try-out with Hartford of the Eastern league late last season and was told to report this spring. This season the Jewett City infielder has had several offers from teams in the Blue Ridge league and will probably sign with either Frederick, Hanover or Hagerstown.

Westerly Refuses To Play Stonington

Only five men came from Stonington in the Stonington basketball team to play the Westerly Sanitary corps on Wednesday night in a deciding game in the Pawcatuck Valley basketball league. One of the men was not on the list and the Sanitary corps players refused to play the game.

Lefler Signs With New Haven

NEW HAVEN, March 31.—(AP)—Wade Lefler, formerly of the Washington Senators and Eastern league, and latterly of Memphis, has been taken on by President Weiss of the New Haven Eastern league club. He has been bought from Memphis and will report with other team members at the Suffolk, Va., training camp.

Braves to Trade Padgett

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 31—(AP)—The Boston Braves have offered to trade Ernie Padgett and a catcher to the St. Louis Cardinals for Jack Smith, outfielder, information received here late today said.

The catcher, it was understood, probably would be Womack, who refused to join the Braves.

BASEBALL GOSSIP

Dinty Gearin, little southpaw, who had been kicking on his contract, joined the Milwaukee Brewers at the Hot Springs camp last week.

Williamsport of the New York-Pennsylvania league, has signed Wilbur Winters, a catcher and outfielder who hails from Antes Fort, Pa.

Grace, a catcher-outfielder from Phuenix, Ariz, has been signed by Little Rock of the Southern league. He comes recommended as a good hitter.

Catcher Johnny Schulte, with Toledo last season, who recently was sold to Newark, has not come to terms with the International league club.

H. F. Thompson has been elected president of the Montgomery club of the new Southeastern league. He has been a life-long baseball enthusiast.

Mike Baker, who managed the London team of the Michigan-Ontario league, last season, has signed with the Columbus club of the American association.

President Rube Marquard of the Providence club of the Eastern league, has announced the sale of Pitcher Joe Ogrodowski to the Albany club of the same league.

The Lincoln club of the Western league, has signed Outfielder Raymond Mann, who managed the Burlington team of the Mississippi Valley league, for a spell last season.

Decatur of the Three-I league, has signed Howard Bushell of Peoria, a young catcher. He formerly played with St. Viator college and has had considerable semi-pro experience.

Clark Pittenger, infielder obtained by the Louisville club of the American association, made peace with the Colonels last week and is at camp at Mobile, Ala. He had been a holdout.

Tom English, former Fordham university athlete, has signed with the Harrisburg club of the New York-Pennsylvania league. He is a right-handed pitcher, but also plays the outfield.

Roy Clunk, formerly with the Knoxvill team of the South Atlantic league, has been engaged as manager of the Corinth team of the Tri-State league. He will be a playing pilot.

The Bloomington club of the Three-I league, has sold Outfielder Verne Blenkiron to the Lincoln club of the Western league. Blenkiron was one of the leading fly chasers of the Tri-Ord in 1925.

The Brooklyn club began unloading last week, the first to feel the axe being Chuck Corgan, infielder, and Roy Hutson, outfielder. Both were turned over to the Jersey City club of the international league.

Tommy Long, left-handed pitcher, has signed with the Toledo club of the America association. Long was with Nashville of the Southern league, last year, being made a free agent at the end of the season.

Harrisburg of the New York-Pennsylvania league, has signed Gene Duval, a second baseman from Boston. He was formerly with Jersey City of the international league, and last season played independent ball.

Herbie Young, for five years bat boy for the Washington Senators, has signed to play third base with the Tampa club of the Florida State league. Clark Griffith took the boy south and it is presumed helped him tie up with Tampa.

William S. Booth, a player of 50 years ago, died at his home in Chicago last week. He was a member of the Sacramento club as early as 1875, and later was with Oakland. Booth was a member of the Old Timers' Baseball association.

BASEBALL CRITICS FORECAST NEW PENNANT WINNERS IN BOTH LEAGUES

NEW YORK, March 31.—(AP)—Completion of the training campaigns of major league teams has been accomplished by a strong impression among impartial critics in the east that new champions will be crowned this year in both circuits.

Forecasts based upon records of a year ago, tentative team line-ups and spring condition favor the New York Giants and the Philadelphia athletics in their respective leagues. John McGraw's national league entry, with a pitching staff which the veteran pilot describes as his greatest in fifteen years and with his regulars fully recovered from the injuries of 1925, have been given the call over the Pirates. Age is the principal count of the critics against the Washington Senators in the American.

Not only do training camp spectators claim that the Pittsburgh club will find the Giants a greater team than in 1925, but that McKechnie's Cohorts will be pressed to outrank the St. Louis Cardinals. Hornsby's club, with a record of 23 straight spring triumphs, is expected to make a hot fight for the pennant this season.

Unlike the Giants, the Athletics have made no important player acquisitions since 1925, although First Baseman Joe Hauser, out last year with injuries, has recovered and resumed his position. The team, however, has youth and dash and is expected to be benefitted by the addition, of Kid Gleason, former White Sox pilot, to Connie Mack's advisory staff.

Critics maintain that the Senators, oldest team in the major leagues, will find it increasingly difficult to stand off more youthful combinations. Their club, which averages more than thirty years of age, has passed the peak of its greatest effectiveness in the estimation of observers.

On the basis of training camp results, improvement over their 1925 standing is forecast for the Yankee in the American league, particularly the result of infield plays supplied by Lazzeri and Koenig. Boston in the National league also is expected to go further than Bancroft's entry in 1925 but little hope is seen for the last place teams, the Chicago Nationals and Boston Americans.

Other clubs in both circuits are considered to be about on a par with 1925.

WESTERLY

FIRE DISTRICT GRAND LIST IS $2,000 MORE THAN 1925

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 31—Two thousand dollars greater is the Westerly Fire District tax to be collected for this year, than that of 1925. The increase is due to the extended fire district boundaries. Although the Westerly Fire District was enlarged over a year ago, by reason of the short time to the assessment date and by vote of the district the assessment for the increased area was carried over a year and has just been totalled.

The total valuation of all ratable real and personal estate in the district taxed to persons, co-partnerships and bodies corporate as the ownership stood at 12 o'clock noon on the 16th day of February, 1926, was found by the tax assessors to amount to $8,298,900. On this valuation Tax Assessors Walter C. Hiscox, Oliver P. Crandall and D. Harold Rogers, who have just completed their work, have laid a tax assessment totaling $12,448.34.

At the annual Westerly fire district meeting held in Westerly town hall on the evening of Aug. 26, 1925, a tax rate was voted by the qualified electors of 15c on each $100 valuation on which there is also voted a 3 per cent discount if payment is made between April 15th and April 25th next. Fire District Treasurer and Collector Everett E. Whipple is directed by warrant from the fire district to begin the tax collection.

From the annual Westerly fire district meeting held Dec. 3, 1924 (by act of the Rhode Island legislature the date of holding the annual meeting has since been changed) the same tax rate and discount was voted Assessors Hiscox, Crandall and Rogers found that the valuation of property in the district March 20, 1925, amounted to $7,019,300, upon which their levy of total tax for the year amounted to $10,528.94.

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 31—Emil Anderson, placed under arrest in Norwich and brought to Westerly by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, was given a hearing Wednesday morning before Judge Oliver H. Williams in a special session of Third District court. On complaint of Chief Brown Anderson was charged with breaking and entering unoccupied buildings in the night time and with larceny. He entered a plea of not guilty and was placed under bonds of $1,000 for trial in the regular session of Third District court Friday, April 2nd. Failing to secure bail, he was taken by Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell to Washington county jail at Kingston, to await the court session. Articles alleged to have been taken included among other things loomfixers' tools, all amounting to $126 in value. Parties from whom the property was taken include the Pawcatuck Woolen company of Potter Hill, Charles W. Austin and George Perrin.

HOSPITAL HELPER CAUGHT— ACCUSED OF THEFTS

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I. March 31—Frank O'Brien, a helper employed at the Westerly hospital, was captured in the lots off John street by Patrolman Robert M. Kissel, when he started to run, after Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and Officer LeRoy Norman had been to the hospital to make investigation following a series of breaks on Granite and School streets. O'Brien is locked up at Westerly police station for a further investigation of his doings.

Among a series of thefts reported was at the grocery store of Frank Holiday, 157 Granite street and the Holiday gas station at 157 1-2 Granite street. At these places it was reported to the police that $25 worth of goods consisting of cigarettes and three or four strips of B. L. tobacco were missing. Entrance was gained by breaking a window at the rear. Boxes of candy were taken also. Glass was broken at the filling station, where about $7 in money was taken.

The store of John Parker, 45 School street was also entered and 200 pennies were taken away.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appears the following transfer: March 31. Michael H. Scanlon to South County Public Service company a certain parcel of land, together with buildings and improvements on the southeastly side of High street, No. 45 High street, which was deeded to him by the heirs of Rhoda M. Pendleton, Nov. 28, 1905.

Many Westerly Scottish Rite Masons and Knights Templar will attend this (Thursday) evening at Freemasons' hall, Providence, the Feast of the Passal Lamb, on Maundy Thursday observance by Rhode Island chapter of Rose Croix, William L. Sharpe, most wise master. The speaker will be Rev. James Sidney Montgomery, chaplain of the national house of representatives, Washington, D. C. The musical program begins at 7 and the ceremonial observance at 7:30 at which time the doors will be closed, not to be opened for admittance during the ceremony.

While returning to the home of his mother, 434 Arctic stret, Bridgeport, Vincent Thomas Sullivan, a carpenter, was on his way from Loving street, Newport, where he had suffered an attack of influenza when his Ford coupe was overturned at the junction of Elm and School streets, Westerly, about 1:15 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Sullivan was rendered unconscious from the shock when his auto was struck by the Buick sedan, owned and driven by LaClede Woodmansee as he was proceeding down Elm street to his home at 67 Elm street. It was reported that the Sullivan auto was proceeding down School street and toward Main street and at the time an auto was headed up Elm street and school children near the junction were observed while the approaching Woodmansee car was not seen.

Taken to the office of Dr. John W. Helfrich, 17 Elm street, nearby, Sullivan was given medical treatment. Recovering from his dazed condition caused by being struck by his driving wheel. He was found not to have sustained much injury so that he was enabled to return to his car, which rested on its side on School street, headed toward Main street with broken glass strewn about. Chief Thomas E. Brown was called and Officers George L. Madison and Leroy Norman assisted in the investigation. Highway Engineer Adolf L. Leon took measurements to note the position of the autos after which the automobiles were moved. The Buick sedan had a broken radiator and bent fenders and the Ford coupe bent and twisted mudguards.

Pawcatuck fire alarm whistle No. 36, Mechanic street and Mystic avenue, was sounded about 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon for a chimney fire in the house of Edward Buck, corner of Mechanic street and Mystic avenue. The fire truck of the P. S. Barber Hose company responded from the hose house on Liberty street. It was found upon arriving at the house that the contents of a chemical tank was sufficient to extinguish the blaze.

Tuesday afternoon in Pawcatuck at her home 6 Moss street occurred the death of Ernestine, widow of Ernest C. Findelsen. Mrs. Findelsen's health had not been good for some weeks past and her death came suddenly and was a shock to her friends. Mrs. Findelsen was born in Germany and came to America when she was a young girl, and has passed the last 20 years or so in Westerly. She was of a quiet disposition and happy temperament. She leaves one daughter Mrs. John Thavenet, and a son, Otto Findelsen, to mourn her departure.

Funeral services for James P. Brayton, 56 were conducted by Rev. Clayton A. Burdick, pastor of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church, Tuesday afternoon at 46 Granite street. Burial was in River Bend cemetery. The bearers were Albert Burdick, Otis Burdick, Norman Wilcox and Leon York. Mr. Brayton died Sunday morning from pneumonia.

The death of L. Annie Green, wife of Millard F. Clark, occurred Tuesday at her home 141 High street. She had been a resident of Westerly for many years. She was born in Rockport, Mass., on Aug. 2, 1870, being the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Green. Her marriage to Millard F. Clark took place in Stonington July 4, 1891. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Fred Clark, of Westerly, and a brother, Willis A. Green of Perryville, Conn.

Bucklyn, of 321 Angel street, Providence, was knocked down on Mechanic street, about 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon and rendered unconscious, when she stepped out from behind an automobile from which she had alighted, to cross the street, and was struck by the left front fender of the Chevrolet touring car driven by William Whewell, employed at Westerly hospital.

The accident happened during the hard rainstorm and the wheels of the touring car skidde as the brakes were applied, to pass between the parked automobile and a standing electric car of the Groton-Stonington road.

Mrs. Bucklyn was taken into the store of Charles Richmond and Dr. M. H. Scanlon was called, treating her before she was taken to the Westerly hospital for an X-ray picture. It was found that both legs were bruised, there were lacerations on the scalp and a cut artery. No bones were fractured.

Moore company, Westerly, skidded, about 6:15 o'clock tonight, at the top of Derry hill, Liberty street, Pawcatuck, on the road to Norwich. The car crashed through 20 feet of picket fence, across the sidewalk and into the front yard of the home of Joseph Orlando, 92 Liberty street. Iron fence posts were broken off, a base stone moved, but no glass broken and no one was injured. The forward left wheel was twisted and right front axle was sprung. The underbody was also damaged. OWNER STRUCK BY TIRE. SURPRISING THIEVES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, R. I., March 31—Louis Garofio, an operative at the William Clark mill of the American Thread company, residing at 56 Court street, Westerly, was knocked down soon after entering his garage about 9 o'clock Tuesday night and temporarily knocked out by being struck by an automobile tire swung at him by some unknown party.

As he alighted from his car in his front yard he saw the garage door open and stepped in to investigate. Picking up a stick he peered into the door and in the darkness saw the form of a man who said, "Don't shoot Louis." Just then he was struck and three other men came out from behind a Ford truck, one of them striking him. The four men then ran out, jumped the fence in the backyard of Farquhar Smith, a former Westerly police commissioner, 20 George street, and disappeared. They were seen by Mrs. H. F. Doyle, who resided at 22 George street.

Officer Michael Curtin was called and found that the auto in the garage had been jacked up and that the right front wheel tire was off and a start made to remove another tire. A jack was left by the men, a Columbia hotshot battery and three tire irons. An automobile was heard to start on George street soon after the men disappeared. The men could not be identified by Mr. Garofio.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

With the state election only one week off the voters in Norwich were interested in the arguments between the several parties interested. That feeling was bitter in those days is shown by the resolutions passed at conventions, urging voters to beware of tricky ballots and to vote straight no matter if threatened with being "fired" by the "boys."

In part items from the Norwich Courier of 1851 are as follows:

Tuesday, March 25, 1851—In one week the people of the state will be called upon to vote for a governor of this commonwealth and they will have an opportunity to vote for LaFayette S. Foster of Norwich. In all his public duties Mr. Foster has been most faithful and without doubt is the most ideal man for this high office. Eastern Connecticut is especially interested in the coming election inasmuch as Thomas Clark of Coventry is also running for office, having been nominated for state treasurer.

The Rev. Mr. Arms church, uptown, had a narrow escape from burning up last Sabbath last. During the service the church was found to be on fire in front of the pulpit and over the furnace. The boards were torn up and immediately flames shot out into the auditorium. Prompt work extinguished the fire at this place but it broke out some distance along the floor and water had to be used to put out the fire. Had the fire had started after the afternoon service the entire church would have gone up in flames.

On Friday of last week five boys, all very young, sailed from Block Island in a 10-foot rowboat. Nothing has since been heard from them and people are afraid that they have been lost.

Latham Hull, Jr., has been nominated for senator from this district on the Locofoco ticket according to information received in this office.

The Whig party in session passed a resolution pledging all true voters to go to the polls, regardless of threats of loss of jobs or positions. Members have also been warned to guard against poor ballots in sections where loco voters are in large majority, thus saving every possible vote.

Thursday, March 27, 1851—Edmund Perkins, Esq., of this city has been nominated for loco candidate for judge of probate. Why they did this is a mystery as Perkins is an out and out free soiler and the acknowledged leader of the free soilers. Despite this peculiar happening the whigs are out to elect George Perkins as judge of probate.

The local postoffice has been moved two doors west of the old stand.

The voters of Providence have decided by a large majority, to loan the credit of the city, to the extent of $500,000 to aid in the construction of the proposed railroad to Plainfield and from thence to Willimantic. Less than 400 out of the 1500 votes cast were in opposition to the loan.

Four whale ships, the Gen. Scott, Dover, Vesper and Jefferson arrived at New London Saturday last bringing in an aggregate of 12,200 barrels of oil, 550 barrels being sperm. The Gen. Scott also had 22,000 pounds of bone, the amount being brought in by the others not being named.

We regret to state that Rev John P. Gulliver, pastor of the Main street Congregational church, has been obliged, in consequence of ill health of ask for a temporary release from his ministerial and pastoral duties. The society immediately voted to give him a 12 months leave of absence.

Saturday, March 29, 1851—New York people and a number of people in this city are pleased to learn that Jenny Lind is to arrive at New York about the middle of April. A number from here have heard this gifted singer and await another opportunity to greet her on the stage at New York.

Zalmon Storrs of Windham has caused notice to be posted concerning a special meeting of the Windham and Mansfield Turnpike Company, at which time measures will be taken to petition the next legislature for the discontinuance of a part or whole of their road.

The Mathew institute has received a large number of books from Henry Bill, Esq., for which deep appreciation has been expressed.

Arrangement has been made for sealed bags for cities places in Canada, the postage to be the same in each country, half ounce letters to cost five cents.

ATTRACTIVE WOMEN

If You Would Be Attractive You Must Be Healthy

A beautiful woman is always admired. There are many types of beauty. But no woman can be truly beautiful unless she is healthy. Radiant vitality is always attractive however plain a woman's features may be.

Many a woman has found her health improved through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Weakness, loss of weight, and a pale complexion were a few things of which Mrs. J. C. Taylor of Box 211, Tallahassee, Florida, complained before she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. "I could not even sit down and talk to a friend for any length of time," she states. "I would forget what I was talking about and felt so blue." Mrs. Taylor is so pleased with the work of the Vegetable Compound that she keeps a bottle of it in the house at all times—and when it is empty, her husband makes sure that she has a new bottle. "I have regained my strength," Mrs. Taylor writes. "I can do all my housework now and I feel just fine."

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

FARMERS SHOULD CONSIDER ALTERNATIVE CROP PRODUCTION

Farmers are urged by the department of agriculture that in planning crop production this year they consider the alternative crops that may be grown profitably. This advice applies to each of the principal money crops, and particularly to cotton, where "talk of reduced acreage," the department says in its March report on the agricultural situation, "should comprehend alternative crops that can be planted at greater profit.

"Presumably," the department adds, "the present price of potatoes will stimulate an increase in acreage. If such increase goes much beyond 10 per cent, growers may regret it. The tendency after a season of very high potato prices is to seriously overdo the acreage. In the case of spring wheat, the tendency will probably be to increase or at least maintain the last acreage—the same being likely, incidentally, in Canada. We have about 4 per cent more hard winter wheat in the ground than last year and it seems to have wintered well."

Discussing the major feed crops, the situation with regard to such crops is "fundamentally different," the department says. "Corn, oats, and hay are all low in price. But from the standpoint of agriculture as a whole, an abundance of feed crops is perhaps more to be desired this year than at any time in the last six years. It is hardly to be expected that acreages of these crops will be increased this spring, for their prices are too discouraging. On the other hand, feeding demand will probably be fully as great as last season. In general, the question is, How can the residual crop land on many farms be better employed this year than for feed stuffs, even if its results in building up some farm reserves thereof?

"A substantial back-log in the present situation," the department points out, "is the relatively strong position of the livestock industries. The total animal inventory of the country has finally been brought fairly well into line with peace time requirements. Prices of livestock products have moved upward. In fact, the evidence indicates that hog producers are now making considerable effort to increase production and that many cattlemen in the range territory have begun to bid for cows. But the animal industries, broadly speaking, appear to be on good, solid ground for the year ahead. In this general situation it seems not unreasonable to expect that good policy will still aim to keep the production of feed crops up to the point of abundant supplies and cash crops down to the point of profitable prices."

The department's general index of purchasing power of farm products in terms of non-agricultural commodities continues ta78 ,pwtil ohl bentus it continues at 87, at which point it has stood for the past four months.

THE FOOD OF BEES

Bees have preferences in food as well as humans. Charles A. Hoffman of the department of botany at Iowa college has been carrying on an investigation to ascertain just what types of pollen they prefer the most.

Except nectar, pollen is the most important raw material used by honey bees, though both are essential. Pollen is stored by the bees for use over the winter in compact masses called bee-bread. It is as necessary for the larvae, or young bees, as milk for babies, and without it the swarm would soon die out. Rye flour has been tried out as a substitute, but it is no particularly successful since pollen is the bees sole source of available protein. In feeding the larvae, the bee evidently first digest the pollen and then administers it through glands opening near the mouth. Later they are fed a mixture of pollen grains and honey. Many plants are exceedingly lavish in pollen production. It has been estimated that a single dandelion blossom may produce about 365,000 grains and a peony 3,500,000. The amount used by a colony of bees is relatively enormous, mounting up to many pounds in a season. A single bee can bring in several hundred grains on one trip. With the information and chart which Mr. Hoffman has prepared it is possible for the bee keeper to examine the pollen from the incoming bee and determine from what source the bees are obtaining their honey. Pollens from members of the legume family, such as clover and alfalfa, are popular throughout the summer in regions where they are common, as in the middle west. Earlier in the season when the orchards are in bloom the bees draw on the blossoms of the fruit trees as a source of supply.

SEED BOXES FOR EARLY PLANTING

The ordinary cigar box is an ideal "flat" for raising small quantities of seeds indoors. They are always easily obtained and the only preparation necessary is to punch a few holes in the bottom of the box for drainage. The heavier the wood in the cigar box the better, for the thinner ones are inclined to warp badly and some seed raisers bind the boxes with a few strands of wire before placing the soil in them to guard against this fault.

Cigar boxes are very convenient for it is an easy matter to set three or four of them in the ordinary window. The florist's flat, a fine arrangement for a large window where there is plenty of light and for placing in cold frames or hotbeds, is any shallow box about 18 inches square. Soap boxes, raisin boxes and similar boxes from which the contents have been removed are usually available at the grocer's for the asking. The soap boxes need to be sawed in half.

The chief factor is not to get a box that is too deep and unwieldy to handle. Two to two and one-half inches of soil is sufficient. Give good drainage with broken flower pots or crockery over the holes is the simplest method. Another is to cut a piece of burlap to fit the bottom of the box and place this over the holes. This permits drainage and prevents any soil escaping.

It is now time to get the seed boxes into action for the early vegetables if there is no frame available for the purpose. Make a resolution to start a frame another year as you plant the seed boxes. It is a great convenience, much easier to handle and the first expense is the chief one. The average frame which is six feet by six feet will accomodate all the flower and vegetable seeds the average gardener will need and it will take much less care and attention than the indoor seed box which must be turned daily to keep the seedlings growing straight as they will always incline to the light.

HOTBED SEASON NOW AT HAND

With the approach of March, the hotbed season is upon us and every gardener with his bit of outdoor glass is preparing to start the nature-formed heat to get the vegetable and flower seeds started for the early crop. It is to be hoped that scientists will soon discover a substitute to ferment and produce the heat for hotbeds as a supply of fresh horse manure, which is the essential heat unit, becomes more difficult each year and the available supply too often is mixed with shavings and is not of the strawy texture needed.

While synthetic manure is now available, thanks to British experimenters who have placed their compound on the American market this year, it has not the heating qualities necessary to operate a hotbed. It is something to be desired but it is not in sight. The preparation of a hotbed is familiar in every community where there are gardens. The value of it is not thoroughly appreciated until a gardener has one of his own.

By the use of a hotbed he can in most parts of the country get seed going the first week in March in favorable years and usually by March 15 under any circumstances except an unusual cold snap. The hotbed will start lettuce in time to have it head, the main need, as head lettuce must get an early start to do its developing during the cooler days of the year.

Tomatoes, egg plants, onions for big bulbs, peppers, the entire cabbage tribe, lima beans planted eye down, and all the later flowering annuals wanted for the beds can go in. The frame is again useful in the fall for a late crop of head lettuce started in September and for a supply of all winter parsley and for pansies for the greater part of the winter. These can be removed in March to make way for the manure and heat necessary to start the seeds.

Hotbeds have been made less expensive by the introduction of substitutes for glass, unbreakable and easily handled, consisting of window screening with celluloid filling, cloth treated in much the same manner, and other compounds. They are best used as double glass.

FEEDING RATIONS FOR CHICKS

Dry mash: 200 pounds yellow corn meal, 100 pounds wheat bran, 100 pounds wheat middlings (preferably white) 100 pounds ground oatmeal or oat flour, 50 pounds meat scrap (50 to 60 per cent protein), 25 pounds edible steamed bone meal, 5 pounds table salt.

Scratch grain: 200 pounds fine yellow cracked corn, 100 pounds fine cracked wheat, 100 pounds pinhead oats.

The above mash may be kept before the chicks during the entire growing season. If used with a buttermilk starter, the beef scrap may not be necessary during the first few days, but should do no harm. During the latter part of the growing season, the beef scrap and milk may be reduced, if it is desirable to get the pullets into better flesh before production starts. Salt is recommended in the mash because it may have some value in controlling cannabalism.

Cod liver oil should be used at the rate of 1 per cent of the mash, or 1 per cent of the grain, up to April first—or possibly April 15th, in case of unfavorable weather at that time. With several brands of tested cod liver oil now on the market, it would seem advisable to purchase a tested oil. Prices are very reasonable if purchased in quantity.

Do not attempt to decrease scratch grain feeding for the laying flock in an effort to increase egg production, as decreasing the grain fed will decrease the total amount of food consumed and will decrease the production. The gradual increase in mash consumption which will come with increased production will regulate the relation between grain and mash.

Do not be in haste to discontinue artificial light. If you are lighting in the morning, or lengthening the day in the evening, a very gradual decrease can be made, until the lights are discontinued—some time during the early part of March. If the night-lunch system is used, it is advisable to continue lighting until the first of April. At that time the lights may be discontinued abruptly. If the regular four o'clock feeding is given at three o'clock and the night-lunch feeding is given at six or six-thirty, and no reduction is made in the total amount of grain fed. This can be continued for two or three weeks, then the two feedings out together.

Flocks that have been laying heavily all winter under lights are apt to go through a partial molt when lights are discontinued, if it is not done carefully.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

An April First Joke

You'll find this true of every joke:
'Tis always best on other folk.
—Old Mother Nature.

As Peter Rabbit and Jerry Muskrat sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool, they didn't know that it was the evening of the first day of April. But was. You know that is the day when everybody plays jokes on everybody else, or at least tries to. Peter and Jerry were too happy to think of anything but the fact that they had just heard the voice of Peeper the Hyla, and that meant that Mistress Spring, Sweet Mistress Spring, for whom they had waited so long, was surely near.

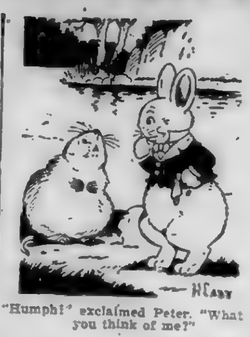
"I wonder," said Peter, "how it is that Peeper the Hyla knows when to begin singing."

"Probably Old Mother Nature tells him," replied Jerry. "She must wake him up down there in the mud at the bottom of the Smiling Pool, Mr. but it is good to hear his voice! Now, if we can hear Winsome Bluebird and Welcome Robin, we shall know that warm weather soon will be here. I am quite ready for it myself."

"Humph!" exclaimed Peter. "What do you think of me? If you are longing for warm weather, just imagine how some of the rest of us feel who haven't had a nice comfortable winter such as you have had.

Now it happened that as Jerry and Peter sat there on the bank of the Smiling Pool, two old friends of theirs arrived, but they didn't know it. They were Mr. and Mrs. Quack, who had come up from the Sunny South. They flew high over the Smiling Pool, looking down; and so it was that they saw Peter and Jerry. The latter were so intent on listening for the voice of Peeper the Hyla, that they had no ears for other sounds. They did not hear the faint whistle of wings high above them as Mr. and Mrs. Quack flew high above the Smiling Pool. Mr. and Mrs. Quack noticed that neither Peter nor Jerry looked up.

"We'll give them a little surprise party," said Mrs. Quack to Mr. Quack, as they circles far out over the Green Meadows. "We'll fly low from behind them and make our wings whistle, so that they will think one of their enemies of the air is after them. They will be so surprised that they will not stop to think that there are no hawks flying at night. Well just play a little joke on them."



"Humph!" exclaimed Peter. "What do you think of me?"

So Mr. and Mrs. Quack turned and headed down towards the Smiling Pool and my, how fast they were coming! They could see the two little forms of Peter and Jerry sitting on the bank. How their wings were whistling through the air! They were almost over Peter and Jerry before the latter noticed that whistling sound. "What's that?" cried Jerry.

He didn't wait for an answer. He plunged headlong into the Smiling Pool. And as he plunged, he more than half expected to feel the great claws of one of the Hawk family.

As for Peter Rabbit, he made a flying jump to one side and then he started for the alders at the head of the Smiling Pool as fast as those long legs of his could take him. He, too, more than half expected to feel great claws. But he didn't. He plunged headlong in among the alders and once safely there, he sat up to listen. He heard two faint splashes over in the Smiling Pool. Then he heard a low "Quack, quack, quack."

Peter jumped right up in the air and kicked his long heels together. "Mr. and Mrs. Quack have arrived!" he cried happily. "They must have scared Jerry and me just for a joke." Which is exactly what had happened, as you and I know.

REV. FATHER RIGGS' HOME, NEW LONDON SOLD TO DR. WINSHIP, OF GROTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 31—Another piece of realty in the Pequot section was sold today when Rev. T. Laurison Riggs, formerly of New London, now of New Haven, sold the stately Riggs mansion, Ocean avenue, to Dr. E. Oliver Winship of Groton. The price was not made public. Dr. Winship, who has been negotiating for the property for several months it is understood, will use the estate as a residence and a private hospital.

Rev. Father Riggs, who is Roman Catholic chaplain at Yale University, is away from New London for the greater portion of the year now, yet has retained his handsome residence up to the present.

J. G. HAMMOND RESIGNS— COMMERCE CHAMBER SEC.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, March 31—James G. Hammond, secretary of the New London chamber of commerce is soon to resign that position and it is understood that he will enter the employ of a radio manufacturing concern. Mr. Hammond has been secretary of the local organization about six years. Prior to that time he was with his wife, Clara Turner Hammond, appearing in a theatrical stock company.

EIGHT-YEAR OLD BOY HANDY AT SAFE-BREAKING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 31—This city developed an eight-year old burglar this week, for a kid of that age is discovered to have entered the business place of Charles D. Douglass on Richmond street during the noon hour when there was no one in the place and finding the outer door of the safe open he took a hammer and smashed the lock on the inner door. Then he put the hammer into the yard adjoining the premises where it was found by Detective Cavanaugh when the latter investigated the burglary. The only plunder obtained was some change of another sort. This was not the case of a youthful criminal. The detective's investigation disclosed that the culprit is about the age of the trapped kid and has been making visits to places and that they have profited thereby, although not to any great extent. Where he got the notion that has been absorbed by them is a mystery. Their parents have been informed the conduct of the lads, so it is to be supposed that an end will come to their evil ways.

George Ellis, a waiter at the [illegible] restaurant until a day or two ago is missing and this afternoon the young man's aunt, Mrs. Manard, Waterford, requested the police to assist her in locating the young man. Ellis resided on Bank street and was employed Monday, but he failed to put in an appearance at the restaurant on Tuesday. He was seen about State street Monday night, but since then his whereabouts have been unknown to his relatives and friends. Ellis is described as being about 16, about five feet, five inches in height and of dark complexion.

Elihu M. Fraser, 111 Broad street, who complained to the police Monday night that his garage had been entered and a metal tape stolen, today informed the police that he did not desire any further investigation made, for he believed that his property would be returned to him.

The residence of Harry McCracken, on Forest street, Groton, was damaged slightly by fire this afternoon when a chimney blaze was discovered in a chimney. An alarm was sent in causing the Pioneer Hose company to respond. The fire had communicated to the woodwork so a liberal quantity of chemicals was necessary to extinguish the blaze. The damage was not great.

Nearly a dozen violators of the city's parking ordinance were in the police court this morning, when the session opened. A couple who should have been there and who deposited $5 each as a guarantee that they would appear and take the consequences of violating the ordinance, failed to show and their deposits were turned into the court treasury. The accused today seemed to be of the heedless or reckless sort, not wilful offenders, so in view of the leniency of the court the police of the city have been told that they must enforce the parking ordinance that congestion of the streets of the city will not be experienced in greater degree than is absolutely inevitable during the season when traffic is heavy. The officers have started to enforce the law, with the result that 25 or more offenders have appeared to toll it to the judge during the past two days. It is likely that many more are yet to come and that they will appear during the next 48 hours or so.

Edward J. Clark, a fellow who claims residence in Mo., as his hailing port, and who says he has been employed on barges was in the street last night and filled up with strong fluid so that he was in front of the Salvation Army building minus a measure of himself. He was booked, but that offense was not charged against him as he was intoxicated and would not have noticed whether he had been free from injury. He was fined $10 and given a specified time to settle.

Girolimo Giri, of Nameaug stret, appeared in the police court this morning charged with intoxication and a breach of the peace of the neighborhood in which he resides. Giri was before been similarly accused. He denied that he ever drank whiskey, but held to his privilege of drinking wine and said that he did not drink enough of that to make him intoxicated. Officers who made the arrest upon request held a different opinion as to the condition of Giri when he was taken into custody and the son and daughter of Giri coincided in opinion with Sergeant Hick. They all said he was positively drunk. Giri is employed at the Babcock Press works and his wages are $27 a week. When he went home yesterday he found one of his seven children away from the house and that started trouble. He filled up and then called everyone to task. As the wine began to work Giri became more offensive. He is a widower and, the prosecutor says, wants another wife, so he is disposed to put his dead wife's mother and his adult daughter out of the Giri home. They object to his presence in their room and this has before started trouble. Giri could not explain to the satisfaction of the court so a penalty was imposed upon him. It included a fine and his promise to refrain from creating such scenes as had brought him to court today and on other occasions. He was turned over to Probation Officer Mansfield, who is an expert at settling the warfares of families. Richard says he has what the boys call "some job" on hand now.

The funeral of Arthur A. Gorge, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Gorge, 50 Denison avenue, was held this afternoon at 2 oclock at the residence of the child's parents. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Warren E., aged one year, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester S. Reeve, 15 Hamilton street, died last night at the residence of the child's parents, after a brief illness.

Miss Josephine Hewitt, registered nurse at Home Memorial hospital, has resigned and has gone to New York, where she will continue her vocation at Bellevue hospital.

Patrolman Clarence Wells in making his rounds through Masonic street shortly after 11 o'clock last night came upon a bicycle, which, it was believed, had been stolen and abandoned. The cycle was taken to the police station where it was claimed a short time afterwards by the owner, who had placed the cycle where it was found until such time as he was ready to go to his home. The owner was Albert Nant, 119 Shaw street.

A dangerous depression in the highway at Lester street was discovered late last night by Patrolman Edward Riordan. A report of the danger spot was made at the police station and today a repair gang made the highway safe for automobiles and teams.

Supernumerary Officer Henry Sylvia was today appointed a regular member of the New London police department, City Manager William A. Holt notifying Captain Charles A. Pinney of the former's action. Patrolman Sylvia's appointment will become operative Thursday night. Officer Sylvia is one of the youngest members of the department, but he has been performing patrol duty over a year.

The newly appointed supernumerary police officers this afternoon visited the office of Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky and were administered the oath of office prior to starting to perform patrol duty tomorrow.

Patrick Sullivan, of 76 Harrison street; Mrs. Clayton Mathers, East Lyme; John Guthrie, 17 Square street; Mrs. John Volte, Waterford; Louis Guile, Montville, and Mrs Joseph Montalonne and infant son, of Niantic, patients at Lawrence hospital were dismissed today.

A chimney fire occurred this morning at the residence of Harry Lisnoski, 20 West Pleasant street. A still alarm was sent to fire headquarters and the Northwest Hose company responded. The blazing soot was extinguished with chemicals and without damage being occasioned.

George H. Schermerhorn, 90, a former summer resident of New London died this week at his home New York, where he had been ill about a fortnight with pneumonia. He is survived by four children, all of whom reside in New York.

Mrs. Mary Siskind and daughter, Miss Gertrude, of Nameaug avenue, are spending a few days with relatives in Hartford.

News has been received in Groton of the death yesterday of John W. Miles, a former resident of the borough, at his home, 129 Milton avenue, Dorchester, Mass. Death terminated an illness of 13 weeks from stomach trouble. Mr. Miles during his residence in Groton was in the employ of the Adams Express company in New London. He was a member of Palestine lodge, I. O. O. F., Groton, of which order he was a past grand. Mr. Miles is survived by two sons, Frederick and Clarence Miles, both of Boston.

A woman residing on Granite street, between Hempstead and Williams streets communicated with the police this evening stating that she had reason to believe that a crook was operating in a house in the neighborhood, the members of the family of which are absent from the city. Patrolmen Augustus Ray and Edward Riordan were sent to the house, but their investigation revealed that all of the windows and entrances were secure and that there was no evidence of intruders in the house.

Today was pay day at the United States Coast Guard sectional base, state pier, and at the United States Coast Guard Academy. As a result of the payments being applied with to the major portion of the sailors were given shore liberty tonight. A provost guard was also assigned to duty and hardly had the patrol started a tour of the city than it appeared as if the sailors would cause serious trouble. Many of them had been drinking and were in a mood to celebrate in a noisy fashion. The guard finally took charge of two of the most unruly of the sailors and had them locked up at the police station and then taken back to the state pier in irons. The provost also had another guard dispatched to the police station and both patrolled the city. The arrests, however, of the two bluejackets caused the others of the turbulent element to refrain from creating disturbances.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Smith, of Mitchell street, of Groton, left this evening for San Francisco, Cal., in which city they will reside, Mr. Smith having obtained employment there with a telephone company.

LUTHER J. ROBINSON CAUGHT IN VIRGINIA

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, March 31—Luther J. Robinson, a former member of the United States Coast Guard and until recently stationed at the state pier, was taken into custody this afternoon at Danville, Va., at the request of the New London authorities who hold a warrant for his apprehension on a charge of theft. Robinson expressed a willingness, following his arrest, to return to New London without demanding the issuance of extradition papers.

Robinson a week ago was dishonorably dismissed from the coast guard service. A short time after he left his ship, Bert Pierson, another sailor, missed his gold watch and chain with knife attached which had been stolen from his clothing in a locker. As Robinson was the only sailor to leave the ship prior to the jewelry being missed, suspicion immediately pointed to Robinson as the thief and a warrant was issued for his arrest. It was then ascertained that Robinson had left New London and as it was known that he had friends in Danville, the police of that place were requested to be on the lookout for the fugitive. When Robinson put in an appearance there this afternoon he was arrested.

Coming to the Palace

The tensely dramatic story of the love of a white girl for an Indian and his almost hopeless love for her is told against the gorgeous background of the Painted Desert and the mysterious Navajo mountain with a cast including 10,000 Indians in "The Vanishing American".

This story, Zane Grey's tribute to a crumbling race of proud kings, which opens at the Palace theatre on Sunday, was many long months in the filming by Paramount on the Navajo reservation and represents one of the greatest physical efforts in the history of motion picture production.

Briefly and dramatically the story of the history of the forefathers of Nophaie, the last of a long line of chiefs, played by Richard Dix, is unfolded on the screen. First comes the original man, a squat, ape like creature, shambling along with his mate and young trailing behind. As he disappears into the forest another and higher type of being follows, and so the race is traced down through the coming of the Spaniards, the battles with the whites, until the present day.

Broadway Theater

"The Dangerous Age," besides being a big hit as a stage production, was also Lewis Stone's picture feature, although the story shown on the screen differs greatly from that of the play which is a literal translation from the novel by Kirkpatrick Boone, and one of the most widely read books in years. The play had its first premier at the Blackstone theater, one of Chicago's finest play houses, and was at once pronounced as one of the most original and startling dramas seen in years. It has a very bold theme to put into dramatic form and requires a master hand to present the delicate subject in a manner not to offend the proper ethics of stage dialogue. The author has succeeded wonderfully and artistically in getting at the germ of the story, making it stand out plainly so that there can be no misunderstanding of the facts of the argument, and still present an entertainment that cannot fail to interest and charm every class of theater-goers of every age or sex. There are three generations represented in the play. The grandparents, the parents and the children themselves. It is well to state that before deciding just what is the dangerous age, one had best see this absorbing drama, and then possibly they could better decide for themselves. It will be seen tonight only and will be presented by The Myrkle-Harder Co., at 8:15 at the Broadway theater. Reservations made.

This afternoons performance is that great comedy "Cheating Husbands" starting at 2:30.

Well Child Conferences

There are three field nurses to do the follow-up work for the well child conferences carried on by the state department of health in rural sections of Connecticut. They keep in touch with the mothers who come regularly to those conferences in order to see whether the advice that is given is followed, and to encourage the correction of any defects which their family physician has advised.

There are many encouraging signs as the nurses make these field visits in the homes. Many lessons have been learned at these conferences, as shown by the nurses' reports. In one family it was found that one which with glaad enlargement had been cured entirely after the father had the cows in his herd tested for tuberculosis and disposed of the cow which had been causing this condition. In another family where the family physician had explained the need for removing infected tonsils, it was found that the mother had had this done for three of the children. The winter was too strenuous a time to bring the children to the monthly conferences, but she is anxious to bring them in the spring to see how they have grown and improved in physical condition since these hindrances to normal growth and health had been removed. The worker found one mother who was bringing her small baby up according to the rules of the infant feeding pamphlets which she had received at the conference. This pamphlet was put on the wall of her home at the fourth month and the mother declared that the child is now living like clock work and gaining normally. The nurses sometimes find the children playing "Conference" in the home, and by the conversation which is carried on it is discovered that the children themselves have learned how to drink more milk, eat fruit, and not eat candy and other things that are not good for them.

The next conference in Wauregan will be held Tuesday afternoon, April 6, and in Moosup Thursday, April 8, both at 2 to 4 p. m.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Newman and five children were burned to death in their cabin home, near Williams, Minn., an isolated inland town in the north woods wilderness near the Canadian border.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Maundy Thursday! Holy Thursday! The church ceremonies attendant upon this date are said to be the oldest of the ceremonies peculiar to holy week.

From the moment you wake up this morning, you had best keep wide awake. For this is the first of April, All Fools' day.

One hundred years ago today the work of construction of the first steam railroad in Massachusetts was begun.

In the annals of the American stage today is notable as the centenary of the birth of Edward A. Sothern, the celebrated Lord Dundreary of "Our American Cousin."

Ten years ago today 23 persons were killed in one of the most frightful of the Zeppelin raids suffered by England during the great war.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

WILLIMANTIC STORES READY FOR SPRING BUSINESS

Delaying on account of inclement weather and poor road conditions the leading merchants of Willimantic announce, this week, to their many friends in Willimantic, the country and neighboring towns their annual spring opening. The stores have been well replenished with the newest in spring outputs. No care, forethought or expense were spared in preparing for the things that will be purchased during this season. The various lines of business advertised in The Bulletin have achieved a distinction in making their respective stocks thoroughly complete and modern. The prices are "right" too. "Fair-dealing," continues to be the watchword of these business houses, realizing, as they do the value of making a lasting friend of every customer.

Innumerable suggestions for spring buying can be found in the advertisements on pages 2 and 3 today. These advertisements will appear in The Bulletin in subsequent weeks and should offer a splendid opportunity to study the spring offerings by the many readers who have learned the convenience and security of selecting their wants through advertising mediums.

Palace Theater

Three features, the Charleston lessons with Arthur Murray acting as instructor, The Mysterious Stranger with Richard Talmadge, The Man Without a Conscience with Irene Rich and Willard Louis will be shown for the last time today. On Thursday Birdie Reeve will be headline vaudeville attraction with four other acts on the bill and the return of D. W. Griffiths, sensational success "Way Down East" which is probably the outstanding feature of Griffiths' successes. The picture is too well known to need any comment other than the brand new print that has been secured from the United Artists and all those who have not seen this picture will see its entirety, those who have will enjoy seeing it again. Birdie Reeve who is mentioned above will be an unusual attraction from both an educational and entertaining standpoint Barely 16 years of age, she is the champion typist of the world, writing 300 words a minute and quoting on the extractions from the speeches of famous men. It does not seem possible that one could get comedy out of the typewriter. The patrons of the Palace will be thoroughly entertained while this young lady is on the stage.

Breed Theater

Dante's Inferno, the William Fox motion picture, based on literature's great classic, is the feature attraction at the Breed theater tomorrow and Saturday. This production is regarded as among the most important and entertaining that ever have been shown at the Breed theater. Added to Dante's familiar narration of his attorney through Hell, as told in the picture, is a modern story of unusually high dramatic worth.

The ninth chapter of The Green Archer, the Pathe news and educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill for Friday and Saturday.

Todays bill consists of two features Harry Carey in The Prairie Pirate and George O'Brien and Jacqueline Logan in Thank You.

Coming Sunday The Lost World.

FIND RARIFIED AIR BETTER INSECT KILLER THAN FUMES

WASHINGTON, March 31 (AP)—Mountain climbers and aviators are familiar enough with the disabling and even deadly effect of rarified air, but it has remained for scientists to utilize thin air in beneficial ways.

E. A. Back and R. T. Cotton, of the department of agriculture, have first reported on the work they and others have done in using rarified air to kill insects in stored articles subject to their depredations. They have found that moths and other insects inside a locked trunk may be killed by exposure for a few days to atmosphere from one-fifth to one-thirtieth of normal.

A trunk was placed in a vault from which almost all the air was exhausted and after two days all the moths were found to have been killed and a few days donger exposure killed other insects

POETRY

The First of April

Now, if to be an April-fool
Is to delight in the song of the thrush,
To long for the swallow in air's blue hollow,
And the nightingale's riotous music-gush,
And to painted vision of cities Elysian
Out away in the sunset flush—
Then I gramp my flagon and swear thereby,
We are April-fools, my Love and I.

And if to be an April-fool
Is to feel contempt for iron and gold,
For the shallow fame at which men aim—
And to turn from worldlings cruel and cold
To God in his splendor, loving and tender,
And to bask in His presence manifold—
Then by all the stars of His infinite sky,
We are April-fools, my Love and I.
—Mortimer Collins.

Sexes and Six

There are some who know the glory of a free, unmeasured sleep,
Those untimed in hours of labor, no appointments they must keep.
Yet, withal, I fall of envy, for the idler never knows
One delight that thrills the busy—when the morning whistle blows!
Oh, the joy it is to waken, give the covers hurried kicks,
Then find what you thought was seven is the whistle blowing six!

Like a slave set free you chuckle, do a dive back into bed;
Snuggle deep down in the pillows, pull the covers over head.
Oh, that sweet hour you have stolen from the aftermath of night,
One more hour in which to slumber—sixty minutes of delight!
Say, the old clock kind of giggles—you can tell the way it ticks—
Knowing you had thought it seven when the whistle sounded six!

Lie there pitying the farmers who must feed their stock at four!
Feel a heart-pang for the milkman rattling bottles at your door.
Hear a footfall—some policemen on his last, long, weary round,
Hear him greet some night scrubwoman, callous-kneed and homeward bound.
Still, sometimes, the morning whistle plays deceptive little tricks—
It is truly blowing seven—sixty minutes after six!
—William Herschell in Indianapolis News.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Brown—"So she refused you? What was her reason?"

Swellhead—"I can't imagine unless she believed in the popular superstition that a genius is hard to get along with."—Detroit News.

"Pardon me, sir, I am soliciting donations for the church rummage sale. What do you do with your old clothes?"

"Why, I brush them and fold them carefully at night, and I put them on again in the morning."—Exchange.

Cop—What's in that suspicious-looking package?

Man—Lumps of sugar for my coffee.

Cop—And in that other one?

Man—Lumps of sugar for my tea.

Cop, using club—Well, here's another lump for your coffee.—The Progressive Grocer.

Anne had been frequently reprimanded by the heads of her family for her great eagerness to begin her dinner before grace had been said. It came, however, as a shock to all present when her eldest brother, on whom devolved the duty of asking a blessing, took upon himself to administer gentle reproof, as follows: "Before we are about to receive and for what Anne has already eaten, make us truly thankful."—Philadelphia Star.

The Persian government is considering the award of contracts for air mail service between France and Persia and between Germany and Persia, the latter route to be through Russia. Several French military aviators are now in Teheran for the purpose of demonstrating their airplanes and motors and of determining the practicability of establishing a direct three-day air route from Paris to Teheran.

Electric light bulbs are not the only things that contain argon. This supposedly rare inert gaseous element has lately been discovered in the cells of a number of organisms, and is presumably present in the cells of all living things, says a Science Service bulletin. A French scientist, A. Picket, reported recently before the Paris Academy of Sciences that he and two associates had extracted a little less than a third of a cubic centimeter of the gas from a gram of dried yeast and that they had later found it also in sheep's brains and in the blood of oxen. They explain its presence on the hypothesis that the gas, being exceedingly inactive chemically, slowly accumulates in the cells as it is carried there, and has no means of elimination because it does not combine with other elements. It thus remains stored in the cells until their death and disintegration.
